"I honor your society, and the sister institution in my native land, the Bible Translation Society, for the firm and unflinching stand you made against a most unsound and dangerous principle, and for your determination to give to the nations of the earth the pure word of God, honestly and faithfully translated. It would have been a grievous mistake, and productive of incalculable mischief, if the principle had been admitted, that in deference to other denominations of Christians, the errors of the authorized English version (excellent as it is) must be multiplied all the world over. No. Let the translator, or translators of the Bible, give what they honestly believe to be "the mind of the Spirit," in the language into which they translate it, and not sacrifice an iota of God's precious truth in deference to any man or body of men. Mountains of gold would be light in comparison with the "mint, and anise, and cummin" of Bible truth.

"You have aided in giving to Orissa's sons and daughters a treasure precious beyond all price; and happily, the Holy Spirit has taught some of them its infinite worth; but we should never forget that eternity alone will disclose the full effect of our labors. At present we see enough to encourage us to go on; enough to assure us that we have an abundant compensation for the money given and the labor expended; but we see the effect very partially. How many interesting cases of good resulting from our humble labors, are reserved to surprise and delight us when we shall rest with our blessed Master!

"I have the pleasure of enclosing an account of the work done at our office last year, at the expense of the American and Foreign Bible Society, apprehending that such a statement would be satisfactory to your Board. May the Lord abundantly prosper all your efforts to circulate His word among the nations of the earth. Believe me, my dear sir, yours, very sincerely,

J. BUCKLEY.

Burmah.

The letter of brother Ranney, which we publish without curtailment, gives a very full view of our scripture operations in Burmah. To attempt to add anything to so complete an account, would be superfluous.

All lovers of the Bible, must be grieved at the announcement, in the postscript, of the failing health of the great pioneer of American Missions in Asia.

“MAULMAIN, January 20, 1850.

WILLIAM H. WYCKOFF, Esq.

Cor. Sec. of American & Foreign Bible Society:

MY DEAR BROTHER,—By this month's Overland mail, I have the pleasure to send you my annual statement of issues from the Maulmain Printing Office, by which you will perceive that the number of pages of Scripture and parts of Scripture issued during the year 1849, is about the same as in 1848; the increase in 1849, being only a little more than 3000 pages.

You will not fail to notice how few of Peguan Testaments have been sent out, the number being but 17 copies. This is to be accounted for in the fact that there is now no Peguan Missionary in the field. This is greatly to be regretted. Amherst Province, of which Maulmain is the capital, has a Peguan population greater than that of any other race. It forms a part of the ancient Peguan Kingdom; and though the Burman conquerors have made endeavours to suppress the language, it is still spoken and transmitted down by every successive generation. The Peguans of the towns mostly are able to speak and read the Burmese language, but our Burmese Missionaries, on going into the interior, find their efforts every day baffled, in endeavoring to communicate with the masses through the medium of the Burmese. You will understand therefore, how much it is to be regretted that we have no Peguan Missionary. The kingdom of Siam contains also a large population of Peguans, carried away captive many years since from this country, and in 1847, the year in which the printing of the Peguan New Testament was completed, I sent nearly 400 copies to Siam, which were at once put into the hands of the people by our Missionaries at Bankok.

Burmah Proper still remains closed against us, notwithstanding which the Bible and other religious books and tracts, though few in number, find an entrance by means of traders, and our hearts are gladdened by hearing that there are places and people in Burmah proper where the word of God is held as a Treasure. There is no ground of hope whatever, that a Missionary can live and labor in Burmah proper, until there is a modification of the arbitrary Government. The present king is distinguished for his ignorance and intolerance; but it matters little who or what the king may be. The labors of former years by our Missionaries have made the priests sufficiently acquainted with Christianity, to know that its triumph would be their overthrow. They are the real rulers of the kingdom, and it is not strange that they should exert their influence against the Gospel. The arrogance and intolerance of government officials is continually being manifested in various ways at Rangoon against all foreigners. The treaty with England is disregarded, and Englishmen in several instances have been arbitrarily fined, imprisoned and tortured. These things are now suffered. Apparently no notice is taken of them by the Company's government, but it is believed they are not overlooked, and will not be forgotten. Another contest with Burmah will of course result in the subjugation of the country to British rule. We none of us doubt that God will, at no distant day, remove the obstacle which now hinders the preaching of the gospel in Burmah proper. How, we know not, but the way indicated above is the most probable.

During the year now closed, the first edition of the Psalms in the Sgau Karen language has been printed, and two new tracts in the Burmese; one entitled "The Ten Commandments," and the other "How do we know there is a God?" These tracts will be classed under the head of "Parts of Scripture," as they consist of portions of Scripture arranged in accordance with the subject presented in each.

Before the close of the year 1850, it is now believed the printing of the Bible in Sgau Karen will have been commenced, not at Tavoy, but at Maulmain. It may be delayed, however, for want of paper, there not being on hand a supply of an uniform quantity sufficiently large to complete an edition such as may be required. Indeed, we have but about 1000 reams of various qualities, and nearly 2000 reams are required for an edition of 3000 copies of the Bible, smaller than which, probably, it will not be deemed advisable to print.

The gospel of Luke, 500 copies, has been printed during the year in Pwo Karen, and I commenced a re-print of the gospel of Matthew, in the same dialect a few weeks since, but had to stop the work, there being no one in town to read the proof sheets. The printing of the New Testament as a whole in Pwo Karen is not yet commenced, nor has the manuscript been put into my hands.

Above I have endeavored to advise you as fully as practicable of the extent of our operations the past year in printing and circulating the word of God in this benighted land. It would be gratifying to you, and to all who build their hopes of salvation upon the truths of the Bible, if I could also assure you that the Word has "free course and is glorified" in them by whom it is received. Though not able to do this, it is the privilege of all to know that "His word shall not return unto Him void." That it may "prosper in the thing whereto it is sent," let us continue to labor and pray while we have opportunity.

Very sincerely, yours,

THOMAS S. RANNEY.

P. S. We are concerned and anxious in regard to the health of Dr. Judson. Having had an attack of fever and dysentery, his recovery, though the disease is apparently conquered, is so slow, and his debility so considerable, that we fear the breaking up of his constitution is indicated. Having received some benefit from a short sea voyage, a change of residence to Amherst, upon the sea-board, it is hoped will help him still more.

2nd P. S. I have enclosed to you a Maulmain Price Current, and will thank you to give it to some of the Commercial men who are in the habit of trading with the East. Now that the carrying trade is thrown open, we are expecting oftener to see reports in Maulmain from America, for teak, timber, or rice, and a Price Current from here will be of use to make known what will sell here, and what may be obtained from here. If any one desires it, I can furnish a Price Current with some regularity.

Tavoy.

We have received the fourteenth annual report of the Tavoy Missionary Society, which contains quite an extended and a highly interesting account of the origin of the mission at Tavoy and a history up to July, 1848. Nothing is said in particular of the scripture operations of the mission. We find the following item concerning the printing for the year.

“The number of pages printed the last year, was 698,000.— and 853,156 pages were issued from the Depository. The number of pages already printed the present year exceeds the number executed last year.”

Since the foregoing was written, the fifteenth annual report of the same society, has reached us. It is principally occupied with accounts of the condition of the respective mission stations. Under the head of the Karen Mission Press is this statement :

“This branch of the Tavoy Mission has been in active operation the past year, and 2,096,960 pages were printed, and 849,676 pages issued from the Depository. Among the books printed was an edition of 1000 copies of Genesis.”

In the description of the course of study pursued at the Karen Theological School, occurs the following :

“The first exercise commences before six in the morning, and continues about two hours. The class took up the book of Matthew at the beginning of the term, and went thoroughly through, with such portions at a time as could be passed over each morning as above stated. Two mornings and often more, were spent on a chapter. In the review however, a different method has been followed, and we are happy to say, with success. The class is required to repeat from memory the chapter to be explained. This is done by one individual after another repeating the whole, till it has been gone over three or four times, when one taken promiscuously in the class, takes up the chapter, still without looking at the book, and repeats it passage by passage and gives the meaning. In this way it is seen that the class have pretty well retained what they learned in first passing over the book. It may also be remarked here, that a similar method was pursued the last term, with the books of Acts and Revelation. The pupil is not required to repeat verbatim; but first to obtain in his mind the different subjects treated in the chapter and their connection with one another, and then to be able to present them in their order. There are many who never fail, when called upon, to present the whole chapter, and nearly verbatim."

The annexed letter from brother Bennett, contains the latest intelligence which we have received direct from Tavoy.

TAVOY, JUNE 10th, 1849.

MY DEAR BROTHER WYCKOFF.—I had the pleasure to receive the quarto bible for our chapel pulpit by the last arrival, and last Sabbath the Scriptures were read from it for the first time in our desk.

Please present to the committee of the American & Foreign Bible Society our thanks and gratitude for the donation.

I had the the pleasure of printing 1000 copies of Genesis, for the American & Foreign Bible Society in December last, and designed to have rendered an account ere this, but I soon after went upon my jungle tours, and when I returned, I was laid up for a time with the jungle fever, and though relieved for a time it returned no less than three times; but I hope now the enemy has been effectually routed. Besides I have had so many other duties to perform, the rendering the account for the printing of Genesis has remained until the present, and will be found below.

$84.10. This is furnishing a copy put up in stiff covers, for 8 1-2 cents.

Had the edition been 2000, they would have been furnished for about 6 cts. per copy, 3000 at 5 cents per copy, and 5000 at 4 cents per copy. The first edition of the New Testament was executed here for a little less than $2000 of 2000 copies, bound in leather.

As Mr. Mason the Translator is to return here at the close of the rains, possibly the Old Testament will be printed here, where the pay of workmen is much less than it is in Maulmain, and stock is the same in both places.

If the work should be done here, I shall endeavor to get it into 1 vol. large 8vo. which I fancy can be done in the small type I had executed while in America.

The only printing I am now executing is an Arithmetic, and the 3rd vol. of the Thesaurus, or Karen Dictionary all in native character.

Perhaps the Pentateuch will be printed in a small volume before the Old Testament is carried through the press as a whole. But more of this hereafter.

I am still interested in the operations of the Bible Society, and hope more will be done to spread the volume of Divine truth at home, as well as abroad.

I am, dear brother,

Yours affectionately,

C. BENNETT.

Siam.

Siam has never occupied a very large share of attention on the part of this Society. But we think that the prospect of the future is favorable to a development of enlarged sources of interest in the progress of the mission there established. The operations conducted by the mission, have been quietly but steadily progressing, and there is reason to hope that the time is not far distant when the scriptures in the native tongue will be extensively circulated.

We have received from the Missionaries a printed sketch of the various attempts made of late years by different denominations to evangelize Siam. Nearly all these attempts have failed, or have been discontinued, except the enterprise conducted by Baptists.

The annexed letter from brother J. H. Chandler furnishes a pretty full account of the scripture printing at Bangkok. It will be borne in mind that the expenses alluded to, are exclusively confined to the printing department, while the applications to us by the Missionary Union for appropriations for Siam, embrace also the expenses of the translation and circulation of the Sacred Scriptures.

BANGKOK, SIAM, October 22, 1849.

WM. H. WYCKOFF, Esq.,

Cor. Sec. of American & Foreign Bible Society.

DEAR BROTHER: I had the pleasure of receiving your letter of February 16, 1849, on the 16th instant. You have probably learned ere this that Brother Goddard has become permanently located in China. We hear that his health is not very good, and it becomes us to pray earnestly to God for the restoration of his health, and that he may be spared to make a complete translation of the whole Bible into Chinese.

We feel thankful for the $500 mentioned in your letter as having been appropriated to the Missionary Union for the publication of the Scriptures in Siam. We since learn by the Missionary Magazine that another appropriation of $1,000, has been granted by your Society to the Missionary Union for the same purpose.

These grants fill our hearts with gratitude, and our prayer is that we may be enabled to make a wise and judicious use of the funds which your Society has so kindly granted for the purpose of circulating the Word of God among the Siamese.

In reply to your enquiry, whether we are likely to need any more money soon, and what amount, I would say, the above sums are sufficient for our present use, but we shall probably need about $1,000 per annum for many years to come should our lives and health be spared, for the purpose of translating, printing, and circulating the Scriptures in Siam.

To give you an account of our Scripture operations since May, 1845, I must refer back to 1845. In that year Brother Jones commenced printing a new edition of the Testament in Siamese. The printing proceeded as far as the 16th chapter of Luke, when his wife's health failed, and he sailed for America. It was Brother Jones' intention to complete the printing of that edition on his return from America. There were a few hundred copies of parts of former editions on hand when Brother Jones left. These were soon distributed, and in May or June, 1846, I bound a few copies of Matthew to supply present demand. The return of Brother Jones being delayed much longer than was expected, I found it necessary to bind up the whole edition as far as printed. In order to make the work go as far as possible I bound and circulated it in parts, as follows:—

The Gospel of Matthew, . . . . .	3,000 copies.
“ “ Mark, . . . . .	2,500 “
“ “ Luke, 16 chapters, . . . . .	2,500 “
“ “ Mark, and 16 chapters of Luke, . . . . .	500 “
Total, . . . . .	8,500 copies.

On the return of Brother Jones in 1847, there remained only a part of the 500 copies of Mark and Luke. Having circulated so many copies of the Gospels it was thought best on the return of Brother Jones to reprint the “Old Testament Biography” prepared by him, before commencing the New Testament again. The work was printed in an edition of 3,000 copies, but the work being too large for general circulation, one half of the edition was bound in two vols., making 4,500 copies in all. About two-thirds of the work has been distributed.

Last year we printed a new edition of Acts, 3,000 copies. One-third or more of the work has been distributed. In March last we commenced a new and revised edition of the Testament. The work will be printed as follows: 3,000 copies of the Gospels; 2,000 copies of Acts and Romans, and 1,500 copies from the 1st of Corinthians to the end of Revelations. The work is to be bound and circulated in parts as follows: 1,000 of each of the Gospels separately, making 4,000 copies; the four Gospels and Acts in one vol., making 1,000 copies; Romans, 1,000 copies; 1st and 2nd Corinthians, 500 copies; from Galatians to Hebrews, 500 copies; from Hebrews to 1st John, 500 copies; from 1st John to end of Revelation, 500 copies; making altogether 9,000 copies. Of the Gospels which have been bound, of the present edition only about 500 copies have been distributed. We find it much the best to circulate the Scriptures in parts. When we have calls from those whom we may reasonably expect will read and study a large book, it is our practice to give one. You will see from the above that we have circulated since May, 1846, over 10,000 copies of the Testament in parts.

We have been much interrupted in our printing operations the present year, and the Testament now in press is only a little more than half completed. The call for books increases, and it becomes us to supply the demand to the extent of our ability. Our Scripture operations have never been very extensive, and I have often feared our want of success among the Siamese is attributable to our inattention to a more thorough distribution of the word of God. I will endeavor to write again at the close of the year, and give more definite information in relation to the distribution of the Scriptures among the Siamese. Permit me in closing to solicit an interest in your prayers that the Word of God may have free course, run, and be glorified in Siam.

Yours in missionary toils,

J. H. CHANDLER.

J. Symm, Esq. 2 Turnwheel lane, Cannon street, London, is our agent for forwarding letters.

China.

We have received several letters from Bro. Macgowan, but although furnishing much useful information to the Board, they were evidently not designed for publication. An extract from one dated Ningpo, July 8th, contains an item of general interest:

“One of the results of my late visit to the interior has been the opening of a correspondence with the Mufti of the mosque at Hamcham—who has consented to send copies of the Sacred Scriptures to the principal mosques in central China.

The brother proposed for this mission was formerly my teacher; he is now a good preacher, and promises to be of great assistance to bro. Goddard (whom we are so happy as to have amongst us) in the revision of the Scriptures. He is becoming better prepared for a journey to the Jews every day.

I should hope to see him off in the autumn. One of my patients was lately baptized, giving us two native members.

Will you please remember me most affectionately to Dr. Cone. I am very grateful for his kind remembrance, especially as I seem to be forgotten by many. I refer to his sending me a pamphlet with his regards written out in his own hand. Such a little thing acts like a cordial to an exile for many a day, and who is so busy as to be unable to do that much for a remembrance? I do not expect letters from many of my friends who are engaged in public life, but I love to know that I am not forgotten, and appreciate the slightest mark to that effect."

The following letters from brethren Dean, Goddard, and Shuck, present as complete a view of the condition of our Scripture operations in China as the Board are able to furnish:

HONG KONG, February 14, 1849.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—I was pleased to get your kind letter of October, per the "Valparaiso," together with reports, periodical papers, &c., with your well known signature.

You will be pleased to learn that Matthew, with notes, is in the printer's hands; Acts revised, and sent to brother Goddard for his revisions; five chapters of Genesis received from him; to the first two chapters I have added notes, extending each chapter through seven or eight pages. It has been proposed to print portions as we advance, in the form of Tracts, and put the whole together when complete. It may, I suppose, be printed at the expense of the Tract Society, but comes legitimately under the patronage of the Bible Society, if there is nothing in its rules to forbid. When complete, an edition without notes may be printed, so that the Bible Society may have an opportunity to aid us to any extent they may find it convenient. Should God spare my life to see Matthew and Genesis thus explained, printed, and in the hands of the people, I feel that I should then be comparatively willing to resign; still I trust willing to serve to the end of the war.

I was glad to hear such good reports of the successor of the late Mrs. Devan, whose works and worth I knew.

The 'Middle Kingdom' is a good book of reference on the geography, history, customs, &c., of China; but does not, I suppose, pretend to give a record of Protestant Missions in China; and the writer, not having been in the northern provinces, fails to give, in all respects, a correct view of things in that part of the country; but, on the whole, it may class among the best books we have on China.

With kindest assurances to Mrs. Cone and your people,

"I remain, very sincerely, yours,

W. DEAN.

Rev. Dr. CONE, New York.

NINGPO, July 11th, 1849.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—Dr. Macgowan yesterday read to me a portion of a letter from you, in which you express a wish to have me go on with the work of Bible translation. It is on that account that I take the liberty now to send you a line. You are well aware that for some time past it has pleased our heavenly Father to lead us through many apparently sore trials, though, through his grace, we have found that he has only been conferring on us peculiar blessings. The course of His providence has, however, put it out of my power, for more than a year past, to do much in the work referred to; and also now, with feeble health, poor accommodations for study, and the care of building a house and labor of learning a new dialect, I can do but little at translation. What little I can do, however, I do with perhaps as much earnestness as even you could desire. The work is one to which I attach much importance, and long to see a standard version in Chinese. I hope to be able to work more efficiently than I ever have done, when we get into our new house, and again feel the invigorating influences of cool weather. I am now going on with Genesis; to-day finished the 12th chapter. Brother Dean is engaged in the same, revising and preparing notes. Some of the first chapters are to be printed immediately, with very brief notes, to be distributed freely as Tracts; and when the whole book is ready it may be printed as a whole. I hope also soon to go on with the New Testament, several parts of which are in such a state as to be easily prepared for publication. I cannot, however, give myself, as you suggest, exclusively to this work. Our mission here needs my assistance; and it would not tend even to the success of the work, to have me abandon other forms of missionary labor. It is better in every respect that I spend some time daily among the people. This I usually do in the after part of the day, when I have already been confined to my study as long as is profitable or compatible with health. By proper care, I hope to make my labors, in my study and in promulgating the gospel, relieve each other, and conduce to each other's success. I sometimes feel that my time of labor is not very long to continue. That, however, will be arranged better than we could arrange it.

I should be happy to hear from you occasionally. I am not fully aware of the manner in which your funds are to be applied. I have the impression they are not, like those of the American Bible Society, restricted to the direct circulation of the Scriptures without note or comment. I should be obliged for a file of the reports and other publications of your Society, if convenient for you to furnish them.

With my prayers for the success of your Society in disseminating the Word of God, I remain,

Dear Brother, yours truly,

J. GODDARD.

SHANGHAE, 8th January, 1850.

W. H. WYCKOFF, Esq.,

Cor. Sec. of American & Foreign Bible Society, N. Y.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—I have received two very kind letters from you, for which accept my best thanks. The subject of Bible distribution in China, to which you refer, is, I assure you, deeply interesting to me. The fact that we continue to be without either bibles or testaments to distribute among this people, is a sad perplexity, which meets us at almost every turn in our labors. The New Testament now under revision here by the brethren of the Peto-baptist missions will be completed by about June next. Baptist missionaries can make the proper rendering of baptizo and its cognates in this version and publish as many copies of it as they please. This the Peto-baptist brethren fully concede to us without considering us at all sanctioning their renderings of these terms. Upon these points we have had free consultations. This version I think will be the best extant, and therefore we should not hesitate to use it until we can get a better, should this latter course be deemed necessary of trial. I have thought of a revision of Marshman, but this would require much time and immense labor, and in the end might not suit us so well as the above version. All the Missionaries in Shanghai, except those of the London Society, have recently united in petitions to the American and Foreign Bible Society, the British and Foreign Bible Society, and the American Bible Society, praying for grants of funds to enable us to print the New Testament, which is expected to be ready in June next. These petitions have special reference to the use of "Shin" as a translation of "Theos," instead of the terms which the London Missionaries propose, viz., "Shang te" and "Teen te." You will perceive that we declare that we cannot conscientiously distribute any version in which "Theos" is translated by either "Shang te" or "Teen te." There is no doubt but that "Shang te" is the chief god of the Chinese, the Chinese Jupiter; and "Teen te" is merely a foreign phrase made up for accommodation, and means heavenly ruler. "Shin" is the Chinese term for spirit, god, gods, &c., &c. You have no doubt received from the Rev. Mr. Irvine, Dr. Boone's Essay on these terms. One object of the petitions is to show the majority of the Missionaries in China in favor of "Shin." I trust all the Baptist Missionaries in China will sign them, as I know they all agree in "Shin" as the translation of "Theos." The petitions have no reference to the baptismal question whatever. Can you not send $500 to the Baptist Missionaries at Shanghai alone to enable them to publish their edition of the version expected to be ready in June? It is an imperative case; and a wide and glorious field is open all around us. To us at Shanghai we can truly say that China is open. What you send us send soon, and through Isaac T. Smith, Esq., Wall street, N. Y.

January 18th. Since the above was written a long paper has been received from the British and Foreign Bible Society, in which they conclude that "Shin" is the proper word to be used. We have had a number of meetings during the past ten days on this subject. I may say that the opposers of "Shin" have all the time been vacillating between "Shang te" and "Teen te" and "Te" alone; and now they formally declare they give them all up, and intend petitioning the Bible Societies for funds to print an edition of the New Testament, in which they design a transfer of the Hebrew word for God, "Eloah," for "Theos" and "Theoi!" I give you this information advisedly. Out of about 60 male Missionaries in China about 45 are in favor of Shin; among the latter are all the Baptist Missionaries, both English and American. "Shin" is the term used by Marshman, Milne, and Morrison, and so ably defended by the late Professor Kid. There can be no doubt but that Shin is the term the Chinese themselves use when speaking of their own objects of worship, just as the Greeks used Theos and the Romans Deus, &c. The whole ground has been investigated and discussed, and we appeal to you for funds. We need whole copies of the New Testament without note or comment. Can your Society aid us? As to the whole position of the Missionary work at this station we can truly say it is onward. Large and commanding chapels have been erected and opened, and large congregations listen to the word in their own language, the number of inquirers has increased, converts have been baptized, churches have been constituted, many publications have been issued, schools have been established, and the knowledge of our holy religion is rapidly gaining a widespread celebrity in all this extensive and interesting region! And yet in the commencement of operations here we have had to contend with trials and difficulties almost unprecedented. A few more years of untiring effort and whole hearted trust in the Divine promises, and rich blessings will descend from on high. And yet, alas! how slow are the churches and pastors at home in lending their aid in this "mighty" and glorious work. I am unchanged in my deep interest in all that concerns your noble Society. Let me hear from you, and believe me,

Faithfully,

J. LEWIS SHUCK.

DOMESTIC OPERATIONS.

There has been a steady demand for our publications during the year, and the number and amount of sales have been somewhat increased.

The want of a suitable pocket bible has long been felt by the friends of the Society, and an endeavor has hitherto been made to supply our auxiliaries by publications of others furnished by contract. But the inconveniencies and difficulties thence resulting have induced the Board to determine upon the issue of a pocket bible with references, at the expense of the Society, and they have contracted for stereotyping one on terms which they regard as most reasonable.

Gratuitous Appropriations.

It has not been customary to occupy the pages of the Annual Report by publishing in detail the appropriations made of books from the Depository. But the items that were specified in the Report of last year, seemed to give so much satisfaction, that the Board have decided to publish the complete list of domestic appropriations. It will be noticed that the gross amount is much less than that of the preceding year. This is to be accounted for, by the fact, that we have had no colporteurs in the home field, since our last Report. The Board have lately employed one in Pennsylvania, brother Felix Hartman, but the account of his operations is not embraced within the financial year just ended.

Grand Eigne Mission.

The deep and abiding interest felt by all true believers in the conversion of Romanists, has inclined the minds of christians in this country warmly to sympathise with the efforts made by Madam Feller and her fellow Missionaries to propagate a pure gospel among the French population of Lower Canada. In response to an earnest application lately received on behalf of that Mission, soliciting authority to employ colporteurs for Scripture distribution at this Society's expense, your Board have authorised the employment in that capacity of the two individuals described in the following extract of a letter from Brother Normandeau, the Secretary of the Mission.

"Louis Anger is a young man educated in the Mission and recently entered on his arduous career. He gives promise of being most useful in the work of his choice. He asks a salary of $140 per annum.

Eloy Roy, the second whom we would propose to you, is a man of very large family, and could not subsist upon the sum usually allotted to colporteurs. He is, however, so valuable in this department, that we will make up what is wanting, if your Society will engage to furnish $150 in his behalf."

Santa Fe.

A train of remarkable providences clearly indicating the Divine wisdom, has led to the location of a Baptist minister at Santa Fe, as United States chaplain. Brother H. W. Read had been selected by the Home Mission Society, and sent by the overland route as a missionary to California. His own health and that of his wife having been reduced by fatigue and exposure, he arrived in a state of physical prostration at Santa Fe. An extract from a letter written to the Corresponding Secretary of the Mission Society, under date of Santa Fe, Sep. 15, describes the circumstances which resulted in his remaining at that place.

"The same evening of our arrival, Col. Bell (the second in command in New Mexico,) called on me and stated that he was authorized to inform me that I was desired to remain at Santa Fe, and that the Governor, Col. Washington, desired an interview with me at the palace. An arrangement was made for this purpose, and in the morning, accompanied by Col. Bell and several other officers, I proceeded to make the promised call. The Governor received me with great cordiality, and without ceremony informed me that he had been apprised of my coming, heard of me from Ft. Leavenworth, &c., and with much earnestness and many arguments solicited me to abandon my intention to proceed to California, and remain here as Chaplain of this post. I showed him my traveling letter and instructions as your missionary to California, and stated that no ordinary circumstances would justify my changing my destination. After perusing the document, he said he supposed the reason for going to California was because it was considered an important and destitute field; to which I assented; when he replied, I might travel the world over, and, in his opinion, I could not find a more dark, desolate, and destitute place than Santa Fe; and of its importance, I might judge after looking at the 6000 inhabitants of the city, about one tenth of whom are Americans, and then at the 100,000 souls in New Mexico, among whom there is not one Protestant minister of the Gospel!

The interview was one of the most thrilling and painful interest, and my soul was deeply affected as he proceeded with his plea in behalf of this wicked and neglected city and country. * * * * *

On the Sabbath following, I preached twice in the Court House, and the people seemed to be interested. At the close of the service the Governor again renewed his proposal, and having prayerfully considered the entire matter for three days, on Monday I decided to comply with the request, and have since been acting as Chaplain of Fort Marcy. In arriving at this decision, I was compelled to take into consideration the very feeble state of my wife's health.

which alone would render it hazardous to proceed; besides which, the impossibility of pursuing my journey to California in a wagon; the consequent necessity of my purchasing pack mules, for which I had not requisite means, and the difficulties and dangers of the route beyond this, from hostile Indians and other sources, all combined to convince me that, on no account would it be right for me to proceed. The arrangement is such that I can accomplish much missionary labor, and, notwithstanding the enormous expense of living, (about equal to that of California,) I shall not probably be under the necessity of drawing on the treasury of the Society for my support.

The peculiar circumstances, which seemed thus to combine to open a new door for usefulness, induced your Board to appropriate to brother Read for sale and distribution among those who use the English language in New Mexico, 253 Bibles, and 641 Testaments.

California.

The wonderful dispensations of Divine Providence, which have combined suddenly to bring into existence a new state on the shores of the Pacific Ocean, with an active enterprising population rapidly increasing in numbers, wealth, and political importance, are already familiar to the members of this Society. The attention of the Board has been earnestly directed to the necessity of furnishing a people thus hastily drawn together, and generally destitute of religious instruction, with the Scriptures of divine truth, which may show unto them the way of life. For the effectual prosecution of systematic effort at so great a distance from the seat of our operations, they have urged upon the friends of the Society in California to organize auxiliaries, and supply themselves with books from our depository. They have the pleasure of stating that their requests have already met with a partial response. An auxiliary has been formed at San Francisco, with the following constitution:—

CONSTITUTION.

ART. 1. This Society shall be called the Bible Society of California, Auxiliary to the American and Foreign Bible Society.

ART. 2. The object of this Society shall be to assist in circulating the word of God.

ART. 3. All annual contributors to the funds of this Society shall be members: and any person contributing twenty dollars at one time shall be a member for life.

ART. 4. The business of this Society shall be conducted by a Board, consisting of a President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, Depository Agent, and at least ten Managers, five of whom shall be a quorum.

ART. 5. The Society shall meet annually at the time and place previously appointed, when the Board for the ensuing year shall be elected, and such other business transacted as may best promote the objects of the organization.

Rev. O. C. Wheeler, formerly a Manager of this Society, and lately a Missionary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, has been the efficient coadjutor of the Board, in accomplishing this desirable object. His letter upon the subject contains so many matters of interest that we cannot forbear to give it, almost entire, a place in the Report.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 30th, 1849.

WM. H. WYCKOFF, Esq

♦ MY DEAR BROTHER.—Your kind favor of January 9th came to hand on the 5th July, and would have received earlier attention, could I have written you any thing of interest. I am happy to hear that the dear brethren of the Board have not forgotten me; nor am I less gratified to know that you still wish my feeble services. Being still the only Baptist minister in the State who is devoted to the work of the ministry, and my abilities so slow in action and so limited in power, that, I am unable to do more than one thing at a time, my operations must of necessity be slow and uncertain. God has blessed us abundantly in giving us a safe passage hither, and good health since our arrival. He gave us the first church edifice in California, and on the 21st instant, gave us the first candidate for immersion; for the last 2 1-2 months has given us a congregation 100 per cent larger than any other on the Pacific coast. He has thrown around us a Society of able, pious, active men, who have voluntarily relieved the Missionary Board from any further support for us, after the first proximo; by giving us a salary of ten thousand dollars per annum, to be paid in monthly instalments, in advance. Slow and imbecile as my movements may be, it has been a firm purpose with me, that so far as God should give me wisdom, every move that has my sanction in California must be right. I will not bend myself to the loose manner of working in the kingdom of Christ, which characterises the operations of some men. On the 24th instant we completed the organization of "The Bible Society of California, auxiliary to the American & Foreign Bible Society." We had a precious meeting, adopted the accompanying constitution and entered upon a temporary organization (see private note,) which was now completed by the subscription for 12 life memberships, and a goodly number of annual memberships, and the appointment of the following list of officers:

President, Rev. O. C. WHEELER; Vice-President, A. W. RICHARDSON; Secretary, R. H. TAYLOR; Treasurer, J. F. POPE.

Managers, B. S. Edwards, M. G. Leonard, C. L. Ross, B. G. Latimer, George Inwood, of San Francisco; Dea. James Appleton, Hon. J. D. Hoppe, Rev. B. Brierly, of San Jose; J. S. Bradford, of Benecia; Alfred Peabody, of Sacramento City.

This is the first Bible Society in California and I presume the first on the Pacific coast. At all events, it starts well, so far as money is concerned. Our subscription is worth nearly $300 already, and we dare not say how rapidly we think it would increase if it had the time and attention it deserves. My duties are too onerous to allow me to do much, though I hope I may raise a thousand or two within the year. We want a man to come here and devote himself to Colportage and its concomitants. We have no one here that I can recommend. The American Bible Society has an agent here, but he was a little too slow in his movements, for us Baptists. Bible distribution is not as promising here now, as the collection of funds, nor as much so as it will probably be in another year. A good man, adapted to the work would raise several thousands here in a year, besides doing a vast amount of good in the Missionary work. But see that you send no second rate man, he will not go ; better send him to any other place on earth! We hope, we may confidently expect, that our Society will soon become your most efficient auxiliary.

Yours for the Bible cause,
O. C. WHEELER.

Oregon.

In a letter, dated January 30th, 1849, from Clatsop Plains, near Astoria, Brother Ezra Fisher, Missionary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, thus makes mention of a Paragraph Bible and Testament sent from our depository. This communication was addressed to our late General Agent, the lamented Brother Allen.

"You have my sincere thanks for your affectionate epistle, as well as for the Reports, and the Paragraph Bible and Testament. They are very neatly executed, and do credit to the superintendents of the American and Foreign Bible Society's operations."

Brother Fisher proceeds vividly to portray the necessities of the new population among whom he is cast, and urges that every proper effort be made to enlighten them in the truths of the gospel. We have not yet received information of the reception and distribution of the Scriptures, which towards the close of last year we appropriated to the Home Mission Society for the use of its Missionaries in Oregon.

Publications.

The number of copies of the Sacred Scriptures published at the Depository within the year, is 41,269. These, added to those of former years, make the whole number 334,327.

Issues.

The issues of the year have been 13,759 Bibles, and 31,618 Testaments. Total 45,377.

Books on Hand.

On the 4th of April, 1850, there were on hand at the Depository, 9,129 Bibles and 11,440 Testaments, making a total of 20,569 volumes.

Of the Bibles 8,144 were English, 102 German, 896 Welsh, 498 French, and 61 Italian.

Library.

Forty-one books have been presented to the Library, making the whole number received 1,607.

Legacies.

Life Members and Directors.

Five hundred and nine Members for life, and fifteen Directors for life, have been added to our number.

Receipts and Disbursements.

The gross receipts for the year, have been $41,625.01. This sum includes a balance from last year of $631,95. The disbursements have been $41,235,33, leaving a balance on hand of $389,68. Excluding from last year's receipts the money received from Insurance Companies as compensation for loss by fire, the nett advance in receipts above those of 1849, is $3676,72. When it is considered that the receipts of that year surpassed those of any preceding twelve months by several thousand dollars, the financial progress of the Society indicates marked prosperity, and a gradual but well-sustained growth.

Proposition to amend the English Testament.

During the first year of this Society's existence, its operations in the circulation of the Sacred Scriptures were confined to heathen lands. In the year 1838, the Constitution was amended so as to embrace "ALL LANDS." At the same time the following resolutions were adopted by the Society.

Resolved, That this Society will expect of their Board of Managers, in carrying into effect the second article of the constitution, the most sedulous care in patronising such versions only of the Sacred Scriptures into the languages of the heathen, as have been, or may be, faithfully made, and are approved by competent examiners.

Resolved, That in the distribution of the scriptures in the English language, they will use the commonly received version until otherwise directed by the Society.

At the last Annual Meeting of the Society, the following resolution was adopted :

Resolved, That the restriction laid by the Society on the Board of Managers in 1838, "to use only the commonly received version in the distribution of the Scriptures in the English language" BE REMOVED.

The Board in consequence, at its first stated meeting, referred to a special committee to report upon the expediency of adopting measures for correcting the English Testament. That committee reported the following resolutions, which, after a long and interesting discussion were adopted in January last.

Resolved, That in the opinion of this Board, the Sacred Scriptures of the Old and New Testament ought to be faithfully and accurately translated into every living language.

Resolved, That wherever in versions now in use, known and obvious errors exist, and wherever the meaning of the original is concealed or obscured, suitable measures ought to be prosecuted to correct those versions, so as to render the truth clear and intelligible to the ordinary reader.

Resolved, That in regard to the expediency of this Board undertaking the correction of the common English version, a decided difference of opinion exists, and therefore that it be judged most prudent to await the instructions of the Society.

Conclusion.

The close of another financial year, suggests solemn reflections. Who among us can say that he has done all in his power for the circulation of God's word, that he has felt as much and prayed as earnestly as the importance of the work required; and that he has contributed of his means with a spirit of enlarged liberality as the Lord has prospered him? Millions of the human race have perished since the year commenced. They have died without a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus, never having possessed the Scriptures which are able to make men wise unto salvation through faith in Jesus Christ. Are none of those who contribute to the funds of this Society, or who have failed to contribute, guilty of having neglected their duty towards those who have perished for lack of knowledge? Surely all must plead that they have more or less fallen short of what the Lord required of them. All are guilty in view of God's goodness and our obligations.

But the opportunity is now afforded—not of retrieving the past; that has gone never to be recalled,—but of redeeming the time present, of commencing the new year with a more liberal spirit, a more consistent piety, a more devoted zeal for God and the spread of His truth. Let us reflect how much Christ did and suffered to procure that truth for man. And shall we who possess it, fail to give it in its purity to those who have it not? Shall we through faithlessness, through remissness, through covetousness, neglect to furnish the bread of life to the famishing? Shall we prove ourselves so selfish as to refuse participation in that, the value of which will be enhanced to ourselves by being communicated to others? Such heartlessness is forbidden by nature, for who does not sympathize with his suffering fellows; but far more is it forbidden by the law of love, the love of Him who commanded, "Do unto others as ye would that others should do unto you."

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

DEAR BRETHREN :

In accordance with the notice given this morning, and before the restrictive resolution which was made the order of the day, shall be called up, allow me to solicit your patient and candid attention.

Having been mainly instrumental under God, in calling the American and Foreign Bible Society into existence ; having labored for it incessantly, giving to it a larger proportion of my time and means than to any other of our benevolent Institutions, I find myself at this late day, accused of acting inconsistently with its constitution, and of having misunderstood one of the great objects of its organization. Under these painful circumstances, it becomes my obvious duty to give you an exposition of the merits of the case, and vindicate the consistency of my conduct, as the Presiding officer of the Society, from the beginning until now.

In doing this, permit me to show from the Annual Reports, what have uniformly been

MY OWN VIEWS.

The American Bible Society, having confirmed the vote of the Board of Managers by which we were cut off from all participation in their funds, a meeting of the brethren was held in Oliver-st., on the evening of the same day, May 12th, 1836, for the purpose of organizing a distinct Bible Association. Of this Convention, Rev. Nath'l Kendrick, D. D., was chosen President, and Robt. F. Winslow, Secretary.

I was chairman of the Committee appointed to draft a Constitution, and an address to the churches—the constitution was prepared by me—adopted unanimously by the Convention, and the single object of the American and Foreign Bible Society was declared to be, “to promote a wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures, in the most faithful versions that can be procured, in all lands ; whether Christian, Mahomedan, or Pagan.” This language cannot be misunderstood ; under this Constitution we labored for one year ; the business of the Society was conducted by the officers gratuitously ; and more than $21,000 was paid into the Treasury.

In April, 1837 the Society was recognized and established by the Philadelphia Bible Convention, and in that body the President expressed his astonishment at the remarks uttered "in relation to the forty-seven translators appointed by King James; some of the brethren had gone so far as to pronounce their Bible a perfect work. Had we ever heard of a work so lauded to the skies? We were not to assume the name of "American," because it would look to the period of a change in the version. He was really astonished at the trepidation and fears of some of his brethren in regard to this matter. The consequences would be most disastrous to us, if the word Baptizo were translated. He believed that the time was not far distant, when in England a new version would be prepared and presented to English readers. He was opposed to transferring, for he believed the result of it had been to unite Church and State, and to produce much evil. Was it a fact that brethren could not allow the possibility of forty-seven Baptist brethren making any amendment in this version of the Scriptures?"

In his Annual Address, the same year, the President used the following language: "Among the errors and frauds which have marked the rise and progress of the Papal Hierarchy, handling the word of the Lord deceitfully, certainly is not the least. Transferring Greek terms instead of translating them, has proved to be a most successful device. We cannot but deeply deplore the effect of this system in perverting the ordinance of Baptism, and establishing in its place to a wide extent, Infant Sprinkling, which the learned and venerable Dr. Gill has justly called part and pillar of Popery. The church of Rome decreed that the Latin translation revised by Jerome, usually called the Vulgate, should be the infallible standard of divine truth. In this version Baptizo and its cognates are invariably Latinized—never translated; and the same policy was pursued in all European versions, wherever the authority of the man of sin prevailed. The unlearned not being permitted to read in their own tongues wherein they were born, what God required of believers, were compelled to rely upon their Spiritual guides, and they told them that Baptizo signified to sprinkle, or pour, or christen: that it was too holy to be translated; and that its meaning was as immaterial as it was indefinite. And so, unhappily, one of the important ordinances of the Gospel, described by the Holy Spirit as with a sunbeam, has been covered up and hid from the great mass of the people by the Popish artifice of Transfer!"

In 1838, the President remarks: "Notwithstanding the pecuniary embarrassment of the times, more than $32,000 have been paid into our Treasury; and the almost unanimous voice of the denomination has directed us to aid, according to our ability, in printing the Sacred Scriptures, in all Lands. The providential events connected with the origin of this Institution have been so frequently and fully exhibited, that I need not repeat them. It is nevertheless expedient and proper to reiterate the fundamental principle upon which the society is based, that it may be impressed indelibly upon the public mind. The Bible translated is our principle, and the motto of our holy enterprize. Conform faithfully and minutely to the originals! How pure and scriptural! and how strikingly in contrast with the rule of the American Bible Society "to encourage only such versions as conform in the principles of their translation to the common English version,"—a rule which is essentially the same as the Roman Catholic decree which proclaimed the Latin Vulgate to be the infallible standard. Let those work under this rule who choose to do so; we cannot; we dare not. The Word of God must not be bound; let it have free course and be glorified."

Similar sentiments are expressed in 1841. "Fellow laborers in the benevolent enterprise of giving to all lands, the Word of God faithfully translated, we hail you welcome to another anniversary of the American and Foreign Bible Society."

In 1842, the President reminds the Society that the position taken originally before the American Bible Society in 1836 was, "that the Society had no right to interfere with the conscience of the translator; we insisted to the last that no word should be transferred which was capable of being literally translated. The great principle for which we contended was, that all men ought to have the Word of God unmutilated and undisguised; and the American and Foreign Bible Society was founded upon that plain and simple truth, and not upon any sectarian basis. Hence we took for our watchword and motto, The Bible Translated. Upon the rectitude of this principle we rest the merits of our cause. We are entirely satisfied with the Word of God; all we ask is that no part of it should be covered up from the people, in an unknown tongue; let it be translated with fidelity; let it be translated so plainly that even the wayfaring men, though fools, may not err therein."

In 1843, these words in the Annual Address, are worthy of note. "Now in the extension of Messiah's empire, whatever imperfections may be ascribed to other instrumentalities, it is our happiness to know that the messengers we send are perfect, the Bible is exactly right. To bear to earth the glad tidings contained in this blessed volume, angels with new exstasy clap their wings; how unspeakably great the honor conferred upon us to be permitted to employ our feeble powers and our fleeting moments, according to the fundamental article of the Constitution of our Society, to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands."

"The principle upon which the American and Foreign Bible Society is founded, is identical with that which distinguished Roger Williams, and we can yield it only with our lives," is our declaration at the Anniversary of 1845. "The Bible faithfully translated; and as a necessary consequence, the indispensable duty of giving it thus translated, to all the dwellers upon earth, as far as means and opportunity are afforded, are the pillars of our Institution, and the Christian who would deliberately overturn them, has traveled farther in the direct road to Rome than he perhaps suspects."

When King James' forty-seven translators, says the President in 1846, used the following language : "We have shunned the obscurity of the Papists, in their Azimes, Tunike, Proepuce, Pasche, and a number of such like, of purpose that it may darken the sense, that it may be kept from being understood ; but we desire that the Scripture should speak like itself, as in the language of Canaan, 'that it may be understood even by the vulgar ;' and then, in obedience to the mandate of a bigoted monarch, refrained from translating old ecclesiastical words, they trumpeted forth their own shame, by allowing in themselves what they condemned in others. In retaining Baptize, they did more injury to the cause of God and truth, than if they had retained a dozen other old ecclesiastical words.

And once more, in 1847, the President, in speaking of the importance of a charter, says : "We shall then be competent to receive and hold moneys bequeathed us by the friends of God and man, even though we should persist in maintaining that Jesus Christ was immersed by John the Baptist, and that the Patrons of this Society ought not to be disfranchised for following him as dear children. All that has been said or done against this Society, has been excused or justified from the fact that it was called into existence by Baptists, and great pains have been taken to impress this fact upon the public mind. Who denies it? What other denomination is prepared to take for its motto "The Bible translated?" Not one! Were this sentiment universally received and obeyed by real Christians, the one Lord, one faith, and one Baptism of the New Testament would no longer be a dead letter, but a living and descriptive truth. Liberty of Conscience and the Bible translated are kindred truths alike essential and important in the kingdom of Christ. If man has a right to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, subject only to the command of God, he has an equal right to know what the Lord would have him to do. We were separated from the American Bible Society, for conscience sake ; let us not then be lightly reproached or condemned. They determined to act upon the truth concealing principle, and not translate all the Bible, but only so much as would harmonize with the views of the different sects composing the Society. We adhered, as in conscience bound, to the truth revealing principle, and the Bible translated is the basis of our separate action. Are we not standing on a sure foundation? What though many cry out shame upon us! We must bear the shame rather than sell the truth. We must look to Jesus, who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame ; and then we shall neither faint nor grow weary in our great work. We shall go forward, as the unflinching and indomitable defenders of liberty of conscience have done before us, being confident of this very thing, that the God of the Bible will vindicate his own word. The joy set before us is the triumph of our principle of translation, which will ultimately give to all the nations of the earth, our own, as well as others, pure versions of the Sacred Scriptures. Then the Watchmen on the walls of Zion shall see eye to eye, and the Redeemer shall be glorified in the heartfelt union of his people, when they shall take his holy book as their only rule of faith and practice, and throw away to the moles and to the bats, unscriptural dogmas and mere human traditions."

Are not these quotations sufficient to show that my views, at least, have been clear, and definite, and unwavering, from the beginning until this day? Have I taken you by surprise, have I caught you with guile? But let me advert briefly to

THE VIEWS OF THE BOARD.

In the first appeal to the churches in 1836, drawn up by Brother Sommers, the Convention says "Eighteen centuries have elapsed since the Saviour of the world commanded his followers, saying, 'go teach all nations.' In what other way can this be more effectually accomplished, than by disseminating throughout the world, the original words of the Holy Spirit, faithfully and literally translated into the languages of all nations? Is any translator at liberty to compromise his duty to God, and to the millions of mankind, by withholding from them the literal rendering of the Bible, unobscured in any of its parts by human dictation? Although this was done by those who acted under the authority of King James, in producing our English version, Baptist Missionaries dare not assume so fearful a responsibility, nor imitate an example fraught with such disastrous consequences. We are, therefore, thrown upon the Providence of God, and our own resources in giving to all mankind, a pure and unaltered Bible."

In 1838 the Board say, "It has been frequently insinuated that our chief concern was to contend for the translation of the word Baptize, but this certainly is not our main design, although we believe that this, like every other word in the Bible, ought to be faithfully translated; yet, as Baptists, we are contending for a great principle, viz.: that the whole of God's word should be faithfully translated, and given to all mankind."

At the meeting of the Board of Managers, September 7th, 1839, it was unanimously "Resolved," 1st, that it is the duty of the American and Foreign Bible Society, to employ their utmost exertions to promote the universal distribution of faithful versions of the Bible; and that, for this purpose, it is expedient to invite the co-operation of the Baptists throughout the world; and 2d, Resolved, that Brethren Cone, Parkinson, and Sommers, be a Committee to open a correspondence with Baptist churches and others in Great Britain; and that Rev. A. Maclay be appointed as the agent of this Society, to proceed to Britain, and to invite our Brethren there to unite with us in such measures as may be deemed proper, to promote the great cause of Bible translation and distribution. Brother Maclay immediately set out for Great Britain, bearing our letter, expressing the "hope, that in the publication of faithful versions of the Bible in all Lands we may ere long obtain the active co-operation of every Baptist in Great Britain. Impressed with the belief, that you approve the principle which compelled us to separate from the American Bible Society, "we are anxious," says the Board, "to co-operate with you in the work of Bible distribution, and we submit to your prayerful consideration the propriety of speedily adopting such measures as may tend to concentrate the moral energies of the Baptist denomination in Great Britain in the great and glorious work of giving to all nations, pure versions of the Sacred Scriptures." Brother Maclay's Mission was eminently successful, and on the 24th of March, 1840, the Bible Translation Society was organized. In the 2nd article of their Constitution, the object of the Society is declared to be "to encourage the production and circulation of complete translations of the Holy Scriptures, competently authenticated for fidelity, it being always understood that the words relating to the ordinance of Baptism shall be translated by terms signifying immersion." When this article was adopted, several of the speakers urged the propriety and expediency of giving a revised translation of the Bible in English; that God should be permitted to speak the whole of his revealed will, without concealment, to those who understand the English language, as well as to those who understand the Bengali and the Burmese.

In closing the Report of 1842, "The Board ground their hopes of the future in the confidence that every effort they make for the extension of divine truth, finds a sympathetic response, in the purpose of God, and a perfect guarantee in his promise, "the Earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." We may therefore go forward in the strength of the Lord, assured that, from the Southern shores, to the sublime mountain boundary of the North, the religion of Christ will crown itself and the Bible faithfully translated with imperishable glory."

Speaking of Bible distribution in 1844, The Board ask "Who can measure the benign results of such influence, if happily it may be brought to bear almost universally through all those who profess to favor the distinguishing principles of this Society. The Bible—the Bible faithfully translated—for the World.

In reviewing the circumstances of our origin, and the history of the first seven years, we would fain hope that every friend of our cause may feel constrained to thank God and take courage. That Divine being whose prerogative it is to make the wrath of man and the folly of man tributary to his praise, seems to have laid under contribution the unkindness of our opposers, to awaken our Zeal and unite our endeavors for the diffusion of the Bible faithfully translated, in all lands. These quotations make it evident that the Board has always united with the President in the belief, that to translate the Bible into every living language, not excepting the English, as means and opportunity might be afforded us, was the end and aim of our Society.

THE OPINIONS OF INDIVIDUALS,

Who have cordially sympathized in these views, might be presented in great numbers ; a few must suffice. The venerable Dr. Maclay, who has labored and traveled more, and collected a larger amount of funds than any other man, has always advocated a correct English version. His addresses and letters, thousands of copies of which have been published, exhibit his ardent attachment to the great work "of giving the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, to all the nations of the earth, our own not excepted."

Professor Knowles was my intimate friend, and made his home at my house during the Anniversaries of 1838. His words are memorable—they were the subjects of our private and last conversation on earth. "Sir," said he, "this Society rests on the simple principle That all men ought to have the word of God unmutilated and undisguised. It is because the Society is founded on this principle, and had its origin in circumstances which seemed to put this principle in jeopardy, that the American Baptist churches with a promptitude, zeal, and unanimity, almost unexampled, have rallied round this Society. They will continue to sustain it, for it imbodyes an indestructible principle, which readily allies itself with other principles, dear to every Baptist—the Independence of the churches—unfettered liberty of conscience—the right and the duty of every man to take the pure word of God as the only standard of his faith—the guide of his conduct—the lamp to his feet along the path to Heaven." This address was entirely extemporaneous, and it was at my particular request that he wrote it out hastily at my study table, ready to depart. If words are accurate signs of ideas, the last words of Br. Knowles, express the precise sentiments of my heart.

Rev. R. W. Cushman, in 1838, on the Bible separation, forcibly remarks—"Let it be remembered that with respect to this matter, there are but two—the Baptist and the Pœdobaptist—to print and circulate the Scriptures in the dress and mask which an arbitrary monarch, of Popish extraction—of Presbyterian education, but defender of the faith of Episcopacy, chose to give them ; and who carried his zeal against the translation of ecclesiastical words so far as to retain for the Jewish passover, sacred as it was with the blood of the Lamb of God, the substituted name of a Saxon goddess. Does it belong to us who united with a denomination, to suit whose practice that version was made, &c., or does it belong to those who refuse to help us print or circulate a most faithful version &c., because we translated a word, as their own best scholars tell us it should be translated ; against, whom I repeat, does the charge of sectarianism, of bigotry, and of embarrassing missionary operations, lie ? I appeal to the world—let the honest judge and answer." While I listened to these and similar truths, I thought Br. Cushman would be glad of the opportunity to strip off King James' dress and mask from Easter, Baptize, Bishop, Beasts, &c., which so wickedly obscured and marred the fair page of inspiration.

Dr. Dowling writes from Providence, R. I., April 29, 1839, to the Oliver Street Female Bible Society, thanking them for a certificate of Life Membership of the American and Foreign Bible Soeiety. His letter gave us great satisfaction at the time, it was so clear and pointed. He expresses his conviction that the principle upon which our Society is founded "is destined ultimately to batter down the last pillar of Popery—Infant Sprinkling: that ours is the only society on earth which is determined to give God's own Book to all nations, fully and faithfully translated—that time will show how long the substitution of the word sprinkling for believers immersion will stand before the burning torch of truth and the light of God's word, when fully and faithfully translated." Now, not perceiving what Popery and Infant Sprinkling had to do with versions among the Heathen exclusively, I really supposed, in the simplicity of my heart, that the writer would rejoice if baptism were translated in our version immersion, for nobody could be so stupid as to call that sprinkling! and then down comes the last pillar of Popery.

And this delusion of mine was not dissipated by any of the brother's subsequent addresses before our Society. In 1843 he says, "The Scriptures may be compared to a cord around the neck of the Babylonish mother of harlots. In danger of strangulation she is compelled to summon to her aid, her handmaid Tradition, to loosen the cord." The Bible versus Tradition is his theme, and he handles it well. The Bible is the only Rule of Faith, and speaking of good Pœdobaptists, noble minded men, engaged in the struggle against Popery and Puseyism, he says: "Mr. President, most firmly do I believe that if these good men follow out this principle to its legitimate results, they will not stop till, renouncing every doctrine that is based only upon tradition, they become, like yourself, genuine whole-souled Baptists!" What could I expect from such reasoning but that the Bible must be translated—baptize be changed to immerse, and these good men no longer have any cloak for their sin. And then in 1848, with what pleasure I listened to the argument for the Bible—the Word of God—as God gave it—the Bible translated—the Bible for the world. Transfer and tradition are put to flight, and translation wins the day. How strikingly the absurdity of this transfer principle is presented. "Thus, to please the Socinian, we might be required to translate, John i. 1, 'In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was Theos.' To please the Universalist, Matt. xxv. 46: 'And these shall go away into aionion punishment, but the righteous into life eternal.' Or Mark ix. 44, 44: 'Into the fire asbeston where their worm teleuteth not, and their fire is not sbennuted. Or to compromise between the Arminian and the Calvinist, Acts xiii: 48. 'As many as were tetagmenæd to eternal life believed.' Oh, this wicked transfer system! Why says the speaker, "to my own mind, Sir, it appears like daring impiety thus to prohibit God from saying what he chooses to the world. As well might Moses have arrested the hand that was writing upon the tables of stone, and exclaimed, You shan't write that word!" Thus far Dr. Dowling. The commentary seems to be—You may write baptize, but you shan't write immerse, because it would hurt the feelings of these good men who are fighting against Popery and Puseyism; the separation is wide enough already, and we must not make it wider.

Rev. Jno. L. Dagg, D. D. in 1837, writing to me on the Bible question, remarks, "I do not see how the Resolution of the American Bible Society of Feb. 17th, 1836, can be defended. I do not now speak of transferring the word Baptizo, which I think our translators ought not to have done, and no modern translator ought to do; but I refer to the Rule adopted by the American Bible Society, that the Bible should be made consistent with the creeds of the denominations represented in it. Now shall the Bible govern human opinions, or shall human opinions govern the Bible? I much dislike the superstitious regard which some seem inclined to render to King James' version. If fifty-four learned men were selected, who possess clear heads and honest hearts, they might find many improvements which they might make in that version without a dissenting voice. Such improvements will sooner or later be made. The progressive changes in our language, and the improvements in Biblical criticism require it."

Brother Yates, writing from Calcutta, Jan. 24th, 1837, "rejoices at the formation of our Society, declares that the old Bible Societies are alone responsible for the mischiefs that may ensue from our separate action, and that as Baptists, if faithful to Christ and our principles, we shall have no cause to complain of this persecution of our brethren; it will work together for our good, and the spread of Divine truth."

Dr. Hoby, under date, Birmingham, Jan. 5th, 1837, informs the President that the package sent has arrived. "I wrote," says he, "according to your request, to my beloved friend Yates, and trust you have heard from him before this time. A new, improved, translated version of our Bible will appear sooner or later, I make no doubt, but it must be a work of time, of toil, and of prayer."

Brother Judson writes from Maulmain, Dec. 15th, 1840. "I rejoice in the formation of the Bible Translation Society in England, and the continued prosperity of the American and Foreign Bible Society. I verily believe that it was by special providence of God that the old Bible Societies were left to take the unjustifiable course they did, in order that the peculiar truths which distinguish the Baptist denomination might be brought forward in a manner unprecedented, and ultimately triumphant. O, the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God!"

Speeches and letters, private and published, from Missionaries and distinguished brethren might be greatly multiplied, all commending our glorious Institution—our noble Society. Why noble—why glorious? Because founded upon the translation, and not the transfer principle; and the idea that this principle could be divided, or that the English Bible was to be forever shut out from its operation, is never advanced. Let me now speak of the

RESTRICTIVE RESOLUTION OF 1838.

In the recognition of the Bible Society formed in 1836, by the Bible Convention of Philadelphia in 1837, our first great object was to show the necessity and importance of separate action, upon the principle of translation. To accomplish this, those who originated the Society, agreed to restrict their operations, for the year, to the foreign field, and leave the question of Home distribution to the decision of the Churches and Auxiliaries. In that convention I cheerfully agreed to the proposition to use the common version in English; (indeed we had no other,) and said that the Board of Managers would of course do whatever the Society should direct! But in the same speech I stated my belief that we should have at no distant period a new version in English, and mentioned the correspondence already had with Yates, Cox and Hoby, upon the subject. If I could have obtained $1000, at that time, for the object, a corrected New Testament would have been undertaken by Brother Yates; Greek and English, in parallel columns, to be printed at the Calcutta Mission Press; but the money could not be procured, and Brother Yates died; and the enterprize was suspended. At the Anniversary of 1838, Dr. Johnson, chairman of the committee appointed to ascertain the wishes of the denomination in the United States, reported that it was their almost unanimous desire that the Society should be left unrestricted in the range of its operations.

As our field was declared to be the world, and the Bible translated our motto, it was seen at once that provision must be made for Home distribution, WITHOUT VIOLATING THE CONSTITUTION.

The Committee therefore recommended the following resolution, viz:—

“Resolved—That in the distribution of the Scriptures in the English language, the Board of Managers will use the commonly received version, until otherwise directed by the Society.”

Strong opposition was made to this Resolution. Brethren Kenrick, Colgate, and others, spoke vehemently against it, and it was carried only through the spirit of compromise and a desire to conciliate opponents. I said, from the Chair, to Brother Colgate, as he came out into the aisle to speak again, Oh let it pass, it is only, “till otherwise directed;” is not that sufficient? He said, “well, I’ll sit down,”—so it passed. The Constitution was not altered; but under the Resolution, King James’ Version was printed and circulated; and upon the fly leaf of the New Testament, Baptize—Charity—Easter, &c., were explained to mean Immerse, Love, Passover &c. They were so printed for several years, until Dr. Babcock advised the Board to leave them off, for the benefit of Home distribution.

During the entire existence of our Society, we have had to struggle against Baptist opposition; the opposition of Pædobaptists never weighed with me so much as a feather. Some brethren were opposed to the Society altogether;—some would confine it to the foreign field. The New England friends, especially those who felt responsible for the Foreign Missions, always considered us as being in their way; keeping money out of their Treasury that would otherwise have come into it; and into the pulpits of several, our Bible Agents have never yet gained admittance. It has been difficult for me to maintain that Christian fellowship which is so desirable and profitable, with some very valuable brethren, with this Bible Society harnessed to my back; and I don't know but that my efforts in behalf of missions, may be the secret cause of their still calling me Brother Cone.

Our Board has been governed by the restrictive resolution invariably; and our Reports, correspondence with Auxiliaries, applications for Charter, &c., all show, that while it continued in force, we had no intention of issuing any copies of the English Scriptures, except of the commonly received version; but we had neither power nor desire to pledge ourselves or the society to this course, as to all future time. Indeed, such pledge would have been, in my opinion, a manifest violation of the letter and spirit of our original constitution. The application for a charter contains an expression or two which seems to commit the Society to King James' version forever; but I did not so understand it, or should never have signed it. As soon as the Restrictive Resolution was rescinded, and the Constitution was left unfettered, the Board naturally enquired whether any thing could be done to correct errors and remove obscurities from the received version. The subject was fully discussed—distinguished brethren, although not members of the Board, participated freely in the debate, and the Resolutions finally passed were published for the information of all the members of the Society. Those resolutions call for, and deserve the careful investigation of this body. Just so far the Board have gone and no farther.

Brother Wyckoff and myself, as individuals, claiming the right of private judgment, which you also claim, issued a Tract entitled "The Bible Translated," containing a list of some of the errors and obscurities of the New Testament, as we supposed them to be; and some reasons why the necessary steps should be taken to procure ultimately as pure and faithful a version of the English Scriptures as possible. Copies of this tract were sent gratuitously to all the Life Directors and Life Members of the Society, that they might examine for themselves, and form a deliberate opinion upon the subject. Was there any guile in this? Any attempt to circumvent or entrap? Our great aim was to bring the matter to the light—before the minds of Bible readers, that they might understand it. The spirit of error and deception we are taught, does not seek the light. We have been wronged by our brethren; they have requited us illy; they have condemned us unjustly, and without a hearing.

At the close of this Tract we mentioned having prepared a corrected version of the English New Testament. This has given great offence; and as ignorance, pedantry, and various other kindred names have been profusely lavished upon us, "for this work of faith and labor of love," it is necessary and proper that I should place it before you in its true light. I pretend to very little knowledge of Greek, although I taught it for three years after I left Nassau Hall, some fifty years ago: but I have been a Baptist Minister for nearly thirty-five years, and have been in the habit of ascertaining the meaning of the Scriptures, by diligent study and fervent prayer, comparing the New Testament version with the original Greek, as well as with the writings of learned and godly men. Having occasion to spend seven or eight weeks in the country, last summer, I employed several hours every day in putting down in an interleaved 8vo New Testament, all I had been digging out, in the way of correction, during my whole ministry; of which Scripture exposition has constituted a large part. This book I put into the hands of Brother Wyckoff, requesting him to compare the corrections with the Greek carefully, and make a copy of such as the strictest criticism would justify. He did so; made alterations and suggestions; and as he had taught Latin and Greek in this city seventeen years, and had prepared one of my sons, with many other young gentlemen for college, I really supposed the Greek of the New Testament not beyond his depth. We then submitted the Book to the inspection of several learned Grecians, making such emendations as all agreed to, as far as there was opportunity for consultation. We had intended to refer to these "learned brethren," who say "the emendations are few, easily stated, and readily appreciated, &c.," but as there was subsequently so much excitement upon the subject of a new version, and as they did not wish to commit themselves upon the questions of the "persons to do the work,"—how thorough it should be, &c., they preferred not to be known publicly. Of course their wishes were held sacred, and their names were not announced. Several suspensions as to these "learned men" have found their way into our Baptist papers. I will only say, whoever can suspect me of suggesting an untruth, is welcome to all the honor and all the comfort to which their unfounded suspicions entitle them either before God or man. When the Book was prepared, a few brethren determined to have it stereotyped, and a small edition published for the inspection of such as felt interested in the subject. We have performed the part merely of Editors; we have availed ourselves of the labors of godly and learned commentators of the last 200 years; most of the corrections of any note are in accordance with some well established translation; and as to baptize, we had not much trouble certainly in ascertaining that it means to immerse, seeing that so large a portion of the learned world have given it that interpretation.

We pretend not to have corrected every error of the received version; but we do believe that we have removed many of its most objectionable blemishes, and have so far made a good translation better. Let the candid and truly learned judge. We have done what we could, under the circumstances, and hope and pray that the work may be carried forward by other and abler hands, until our English Bible shall approach as nearly as possible the mind of the Holy Spirit, revealed in the Sacred Scriptures.

And now, dear brethren, I thank you for your patient attention to this long address. I have much more to say in reply to sermons and newspaper articles, and the Addresses and Resolutions of Indignation meetings, all ministering rebuke to Cone and Wyckoff, and those who sympathize with them. The questions we have proposed, have never been answered. "There are many errors in the commonly received English version; why should they not now be corrected? If Baptize be an English word, and a thousand years old, still it means in English, to christen, sprinkle, pour, &c., as much as it does to immerse. Why should not a definite and unmistakeable term occupy its place? If it is right for us to circulate Immersionist versions in foreign languages, how can it be wrong to circulate a similar version in the English tongue? Do we honestly and most confidently believe that Baptism is Immersion only?" But I leave the discussion of these questions to others, and shall endeavor to preside over you at this meeting, with kindness and impartiality. Let me solicit your courteous and prayerful co-operation.

ADDRESS OF PROF. ANDERSON.

MR. PRESIDENT:—

I rise to move the acceptance of the report, some portions of which have been read. It is extremely unpleasant for me to attempt to address an audience, a very large proportion of whom are anxious to be engaged in the discussion of the resolution before the Society. But I remember, that beneath all the excitement produced by the subject brought before you this morning, there beat hundreds of hearts glowing with love and reverence for the cause of Christ. On this inner heart of yours, my brethren, I shall rely for patience and sympathy while I plead for that Bible which you all love and revere.

The different benevolent societies of our day have each sprung from a real or supposed necessity. So long as this necessity remains real, there need be no clashing in their claims upon the Christian public. In listening to the various calls upon our beneficence in this age of Christian action, there is a necessity imposed upon us to ascertain the relative importance of the claims which benevolent societies put forth, so that our gifts may be bestowed wisely, that they may do the greatest amount of good. It is a very easy thing to say that the distribution of the Bible or the support of Missions is a worthy object, but it is not always as easy to determine the proper relation of the one to the other.

What is the relation of the distribution of the Word of God to the great work of bringing the world to Christ? When we understand this, we have the elements for determining the extent of the claim which this Society has upon our regard. It is customary to represent the Bible Society as the first in place and importance. But notwithstanding this, I am disposed to think that when we look at the subject from the right point of view, it will be seen that the great work of Bible distribution is supplementary to the preaching of the gospel. Especially is this the case in heathen nations. The first and most prominent place in evangelizing the world has been given by Christ to the living preacher. The gospel was first preached, then written; an entrance into the mind must first be made by the living preacher before an entrance can be found for the living Word. The conversions in the apostolic period were mainly the result of the oral teaching of the doctrine of Christ. The gospel histories were written, that the life and teachings of Christ might be studied in detail by those who had already learned to love his character and cherish his memory. The epistles were written as authoritative exhibitions of Christian doctrine and practice, calculated to meet the heresies in doctrine and deviations from gospel morality which grew up in the early churches. This course of Christ and the apostles indicates the course to be pursued by their successors in all time. As a general rule the Word preached comes first to the mind with power, and then the Word written. This view indicates the relative position of preaching and Bible distribution—of the Missionary Union and the Bible Society. The one is to follow the other, but in the closest union and harmony, equally necessary and equally important.

We believe that the order of succession in which the Word preached and the Word written were given to the apostolic churches will be found in general to be the natural one in heathen lands at the present day. I say in heathen lands, for what I have to offer will bear mainly upon the work of the Bible Society in heathen lands. The same necessity that in the early churches called forth the histories of Luke and John, and the Epistles of Paul and James, exist in the present day in all their force.

To be more definite, what are some of these special wants of our missionary churches, which Bible distribution and Bible study alone can meet? The answer to this question points out the great and noble work of the Bible Society in heathen lands, and with some modifications in all lands. Human nature is the same in all places and in all times, and the fact that the canon of Scripture was written by the guidance of Infinite Wisdom, to meet the real necessities of the human soul, is a pledge to us that it will be a possession for all time. The facts of the Bible are not transient, for they have really taken place. Its principles are not, for they are the very transcript of God's mind. The adaptation of the Bible to man will continue so long as human nature remains the same in its organization and inherent sinful tendencies. These necessities of our nature ; and this adaptation of the Bible to meet them, are from the nature of the case real and permanent, and must continue to be independent of time, place or condition. Man never outgrows his own nature, he never can rise so high in the scale of intellect as to be above the ordinances of gospel morality. The motives, the moral appliances of the gospel system, can never cease to affect the heart, for they are not addressed to local prejudices or temporary states of mind, but to the universal heart and conscience of mankind.

If this be the case, then the free circulation of the Scriptures is necessary to meet and counteract the depravity of man, manifesting itself in false doctrine and false morality.

False doctrines manifested themselves in the earliest period of the Church, and the whole history of Christianity is the history of a contest of truth with error within the nominal limits of its own body. There has been a tendency to oscillate between opposite extremes of error at different periods, and also in different countries at the same time. Formalism on the one hand, and pantheism in its different developments on the other, are the general terms under which these extremes may be grouped. The elements of these errors existed in the heathen and Jewish communities, out of which these churches were gathered. There were the stupid, superstitious idolater, and the sneering, cold-hearted Epicurean. There were also the Pharisee wrapped up in forms, lengthening the creed and shortening the commandments, and the Sadducee caring very little for either. The one class were ready to make divinities of the apostles and martyrs, or to incorporate the traditional dogmas of the Rabbies with the simple faith of Christ. The other class, who looked upon the revelations of a future life and the old mythology as a series of myths and fictions intended to curb and restrain the common people, naturally deemed Christianity only a new manifestation of the tendency to worship, united with a new system of ethics. These men, with opposite ideas and tendencies, were introduced into the churches. Many, retaining their old ideas, but partially displaced by the truth when the glow and fervor of their conversion had passed away, fell back upon them and attempted to modify Christianity into consistency with their old notions. By these influences those heresies were generated, which called forth many of the writings of the New Testament. Judaism and the gorgeous ceremonial of the Greek and Roman worship, and the superstition which they had engendered, were the legitimate antecedents of the hierarchies of Rome and Constantinople, and of those systems that change the spiritual religion of Christ into one of form, and make it a portion of the state. The "philosophy falsely so called" of the time wrested the ethics of the gospel to its own purposes, and undermined the faith that it could not overthrow. These influences have not yet ceased to operate, and now, in our contest with the rationalists of Germany and France, and their imitators and followers in this country, we are fighting over again the battles of the first and second centuries. Influences to evil, the same in their nature, are at work among the few infant churches in the East. Superstition is the same every where. The ceremonies and formalism of heathenism are the germs from which a hierarchy may grow. The asceticism of the East prepares the way for that of the West. Indeed monachism itself is emphatically of Oriental origin. The philosophy of the East is identical in many of its aspects with that of Greece. The transcendental, idealistic pantheism of Emerson seems to be but a reproduction of the oldest errors of heathenism born in the childhood of the race. Unless like causes cease to produce like effects, all the general phases of the errors of the past, both moral and doctrinal, will be reproduced among our missionary churches.

Intelligent missionaries tell us that they meet these germs of evil in their churches, and that they are often encountered by logical subtleties and refinements that require a practised dialectician to refute. We are apt to look upon the developments of Strauss, Parker, and Emerson, as something new and peculiar to the nineteenth century. But the truth is that these self-styled philosophers of progress are going backward to the ideas and views of men, who lived in the infancy of the world and groped in the dim twilight of the past.

In our new churches, let me repeat, we may expect to have, in almost all its peculiarities, the reproduction of the past. How shall these developments and tendencies be met? How shall we secure our churches from being swept over by a flood of formalism and of "philosophy falsely so called"? We answer, by giving them, in all freedom and purity, the written Word to read and to study. This will be found to be God's method of meeting error, of building up churches in the faith of the gospel. As the stagnant civilization of the East is stirred to its gloomy depths, as minds are aroused to thought and activity, they must have placed before them proper objects on which that activity is to be spent. To meet this condition of things, give them the Bible. Let them learn its truths and practise its morality, and they will find in it an antidote for every spiritual disease. In their tendency to the enormities of the heathen state, let them study James and the Epistles to the Corinthians. In their superstitious reverence for ceremonials and offerings, for the sacredness of caste, let them read the lofty sentiment and close logic by which Paul demolishes the exclusive pretensions of the children of Abraham at Rome. If the fallacious generalizations of the Oriental pantheism have retained possession of their minds, and they are prone to merge the personal God in a mere immanent, self-developing force, without individual existence, will, or character, let them read the sublime notices of the creation. Let them follow the fortunes of the Hebrews in their wondrous history, and become imbued by constant study with those authoritative representations of the constant presence and living agency of the Almighty in the affairs of men, which everywhere shine forth from the pages of the sacred writings.

The practical character of the Bible, nowhere abstract, always applying divine truth to the lives and conduct of men, speaking with a voice of authority which gives quiet to the anxious and unsettled soul—meeting all difficulties of the mind by evidence, and difficulties of the heart by love and forgiveness—renders it the grand remedy for all these weaknesses of the human soul. Here then is a glorious work for the Bible distributor to perform—to guard these infant branches of our Zion against the inroads of false doctrine and practice.

Again, these churches are independent churches—such as our own are. They must be made self-sustaining as it regards discipline as well as belief. We cannot oversee them for ever. It will in a short time be impossible to multiply missionaries fast enough to supply the demands of these churches, at their present ratio of increase; for a still stronger reason will this be the case in those glorious times for the church foretold by prophetic vision, “when a nation shall be born in a day.” We must not, we ought not to make our missionaries bishops, and create a hierarchy in Burmah which we repudiate at home. These churches must be thrown upon their own powers and capacities, guided by the Word of God. The same principles that have nourished and given hardihood and sturdiness to our own churches here, will do the like for our brethren abroad. Let there not be one ecclesiastical law for the American and another for the Burman and the Hindoo. As Independents (and that we have always been,) we call no man master. We thank God that we have had no theological system-makers to fasten upon us a cast-iron creed of man’s invention, to attempt to condense the ethereal essence of our faith and imprison it within the cold stone walls of a formal logic. We have had no Wesley to be the legislator of our churches—no Cranmer to weld repellent systems of doctrine and practice by the external pressure of a political despotism without, and the cohesive power of fat benefices within. On the principles that we have always cherished these missionary churches are to be constituted.

These bodies are, in the providence of God, thrown upon us, not to govern, but to feed and train till their youthful muscle and cartilage shall harden into the bone and sinew of spiritual manhood. They are to be assisted and nourished by us till they shall fulfil the apostle’s glorious conception of a church, “lively stones built up a spiritual house unto God.”

For this purpose the translator and distributor of the Bible must follow in the track of the preacher of Christ. Their work is supplementary indeed, but equally necessary, in carrying forward the great work. In their training we would follow the example of Christ and the apostles. We would give them the words that fell from Jesus' lips—the histories of his life and passion—the histories of those holy men on whom sat cloven tongues as of fire—the epistles of those who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. When Christ has provided this bread and water of life, shall we give these infant churches human catechisms, and digests, and creeds, as authoritative expositions of divine truth? If we wish them to be rooted and grounded in those awful and soul-subduing truths that lie at the basis of the Christian system, shall we give them Calvin's Institutes, or the Epistle to the Romans? Shall we give them the Westminster Confession, good as it is, or shall we bring their minds directly in contact with those words that are "spirit" and "life?" We should consider it an unwarrantable interference to attempt to force upon these churches a system of belief or a course of disciplinary action. Their minds are now just rising to the contemplation of the great facts that underlie their spiritual existence, and their opinions may often be crude and inadequate: but the manly limbs of these churches should not be manacled; they should be left free to develop their own internal spiritual life. A constant authoritative supervision may bring into life hierarchies, but it will never build up and strengthen churches, or congregations of believers. The true idea of a church, a congregation of believers, a self-sustaining body, having within itself all requisite disciplinary authority, with power to appoint its own teachers and make its own interpretation of the Bible, beyond and above whom there is no earthly ecclesiastical authority, should ever be kept before the mind in all our provision for missionary churches. In the terse and sinewy lines of a living English poet, following in form and spirit the oft imitated fragment of Alcæus:

What constitutes a church?
 Not triple hierarchy or throned priest.
 The stolen trappings of the Romish beast,
 Altar or well sung creed,
 Rites magical to save or sanctify,
 Nor aught that lulls the ear or charms the eye.
 A band of faithful men,
 Met for God's worship in an upper room,
 On hill side, or lone glen,
 Or 'neath the midnight's starry dome,
 To hear the counsels of his Holy Word,
 Pledged to each other and their common Lord,—
 These constitute a church.

And these are such churches as have been planted and watered by our Judsons, our Boardmans, and our Wades; and, if we leave them to form their opinions from the Bible, under the teachers whom the Spirit of God shall raise up among them, we need not greatly fear the result. Our missions will in the end become self-sustaining and eminently aggressive bodies, maintaining and setting forth the doctrines of the cross with a power that shall send quaking and fear through the dark realms of idolatry.

The incorporation of the principles of Christianity into the political and social life of heathen nations, depends in like manner upon saturating the minds of these new churches with Bible truth as it came from its inspired authors. We assume that all the influence for good which has proceeded from the Bible has been generated by the contact of its truth with individual minds, in its saving, converting power.

We hear much of the general influence of the Bible upon society and government, from those who do not admit the reality of that transforming power upon the individual soul which we call regeneration. But all generals are made up of particulars. And these particular sources from which this influence proceeds, are those men who read and study the Bible in the spirit of its Author,—men who have been renewed in the spirit of their minds—who by daily communion with God are able to cast around them an atmosphere of heavenly purity and love which insensibly affects and controls the most hardened and profane with whom they associate. There is a power, an authority in simple conformity to Christ, which nothing can resist. Christ seems to have intended his people to be the ducts and channels through which the great volume of divine influence should flow to the world. The phrases “salt of the earth,” “light of the world,” have a depth of significance, a pregnant fullness of idea, that are scarcely yet realized by the people of God.

I make these remarks because there are so many men who have a general reverence for the Bible, but repudiate as fanaticism its plainest doctrines, when they are embodied and put in action by converted men. We would not limit the action of the Sovereign Spirit of God; it works by any means, by all means, to stir the pulses of a new life in the hearts of men. Doubtless many souls are rejoicing on high who have been brought to the truth by mere fragments of the Word of God; but we believe that the history of the Church will bear witness to the fact that no great moral movement, no extensive turning of men to Christ, has been brought about apart from the influence of some form of the Word preached,—moreover, that there has been no extensive incorporation of Christian law and morals into the external life of men or nations, which has not resulted mainly from the efforts of converted men with the Bible in their hands, and heads, and hearts. God forbid that we should throw obstacles in the way of the circulation of God’s Word where Christ has not been named, but we only wish to show that our duty is to send the gospel preacher or teacher, and the Bible with him—that Christ’s method was to send them together.

We hear a great deal about Roger Williams and his labors for “soul-liberty,” and with good reason. But we believe that he deserves the remembrance of posterity, rather as a member of the Baptist community with which he was associated, and from whom he received his ideas and religious culture, than as a mere politician.

He but carried out as a political leader those principles of liberty which were believed in by the whole body of Baptists—principles which they had learned in prison and exile, and had confessed at the stake. Roger Williams did very little with his principles in Salem, for he had very few like-minded with himself. It was with the help of the poor men and women who had flocked to his standard, who shared his feelings and principles, that he was able to accomplish what he did. These people looked upon religion as a part of the liberty wherewith Christ had made them free. They loved his ordinances, his Word, and his truth, more than property, more than reputation, more than life. It may be that poor Obadiah Holmes, scourged at a Boston whipping-post till his blood wet the soil, did more for the cause of freedom than the “Bloody Tenet,” cogent and eloquent as it is.

The influence of Luther and the Puritans is often referred to this general influence of Christianity, by men who abhor the doctrines and the principles that gave these movements life. Luther had learned the doctrine of justification by faith, and it calmed the storm of his own troubled spirit; and he would have others made partakers of “like precious faith.” The hearts of thousands around him leaped with joy at his words. Their influence, their prayers, their efforts bore him up, and carried him on. What power hewed the throne and hierarchy of England to fragments, and established the glorious commonwealth amid their ruins? Was it the general influence of Bible truth, aside from the individual faith of individual religious men? It was those to whom Christ and his cause were dearer than their lives, men of piety, men of prayer, whose faith was a “substance,” a real existence, that laid hold of their whole moral and mental being, that did this great work. It was not the politicians, the “careless Gallios,”—the men who worshipped the Protector while alive, and cursed him when dead,—the scholars who, like Walton, wrote prefaces filled with Latin superlatives, in praise of “Oliverus,” and dextrously inserted the name of “Carolus,” as a corrected reading, at the first glimpse of the restoration,—that wrought out the liberties and nourished the religious life of England. It was those men who, during long years of darkness, had labored for the truth, who had translated the Bible into the English tongue, who had languished in prison, who had stood in the pillory, who had had their ears cropped, who had gone to the stake, that set in motion that power in whose presence both crosier and sword were alike powerless. It was not the vague general notions of a false liberalism, that makes it a matter of indifference whether a man believes in twenty gods, or one, that gave such power to these men. They believed in God, in Christ, in the Bible, in the “five points of Calvinism,” if you please; and in this belief, they conquered.

In our estimates of great political or religious movements we are too much addicted to hero-worship. Like Carlyle, we are too apt to see nothing in the reformation but Luther, nothing in the commonwealth but Cromwell. We are not republican enough in our views of the world's progress. We see only the crest that rides the wave of public feeling, while the deep under-swell that sustains it is forgotten.

If we expect the principles of our religion to be incorporated into the social, political and intellectual life of the East, we must nourish and build up these churches which we have planted, by the pure Word of God. We must make them Bible Christians in the fullest sense of the term. We must furnish them for the warfare with heathenism from the armory of heavenly truth. If we hope for a Christian society to take the place of the lifeless, crystallized civilization of the vast regions between the Himalaya mountains and the seas, we must give these pioneers of the cross the Bible to become the fountain of their influence, the strength of their arm.

If we do not mistake, these considerations give to the claims of this Society a power that should reach every heart. The motives that appeal to us are such as have force in their bearing upon all. They come to us with all the pathos of Calvary, with all the awfulness of the final judgment. As philanthropists, they meet us in all that is lovely in the peaceful retreat of the Christian family, in all those appliances of benevolence that have been generated in the breast of Christian love. As republicans, they call on us to give to the nations the only basis upon which can be reared the stately proportions of a government of law.

ADDRESS OF THE REV. GEO. KEMPTON.

MR. PRESIDENT :

Two reasons will cause me to modify very much, what I had proposed to present. One is, Sir, disguise it as we may, our hearts are ill at ease. We cannot come together to listen to any remarks which I or others may offer upon this occasion, with that full, free heart we would like to have. The other reason is, the presence of our brother from Orissa. He is an eye and ear witness to much that I would say from induction and reference to others. I shall only make a remark or two, and give the time to him. The resolution makes a very important statement, and in view of that statement proposes a most reasonable course of action. The fact stated, is, that there are increased facilities in every country to which the Society has hitherto extended its operations ; and the course of action proposed, and which I deem a most reasonable one, is renewed exertion and enlarged liberality in view of these most encouraging facts.

Now, Sir, what are these facilities ? They are, I suppose, the removal of obstructions and difficulties which have stood in the way of disseminating the Sacred Scriptures ; and, Sir, if we look at the present condition of humanity, we will find that the Prince of this world is faithful to his position, and determined to preserve his dominion. There is not a stronghold, nor a moral fortress, but it is well manned, and well commanded ; not a field, Sir, on this wide earth where his forces are not already marshaled for conflict ; and when we attempt to push on the conquests of the Redeemer, we meet opposition. That opposition comes in various forms, sometimes in one way, sometimes in another. We are not permitted to distribute that blessed book in many countries by means of the civil enactments of those countries. Europe, Sir, all Catholic Europe, has been closed against us ; now revolution is breaking down those bars, and opening those gates. I have an understanding of these facilities. I believe, my brethren, that God has a purpose, and I believe that purpose is developed respecting the nations, partly by what we now term facilities. If He has not a purpose in his gracious mercy we might work against the opposition we meet there until doomsday, and never, according to my humble belief, be able to do any thing ; no, not until God opens the way and removes the obstructions.

There is an excellent remark of that eminent man, that illustrious divine, the light of Scotland for the last century—Dr. Chalmers. He says in substance, that the Spirit of God, in the creation of the moral universe, or in the new creation, follows very much the same law, or observes the same law as in the creation of the present visible earth. God moves upon the chaos of intellect and soul, as he moved upon the deep before he said, "Let there be light." So, no doubt, he is moving to-day upon the minds of men at large. He is moving upon this vast mass of heathen intellect, dead before, dead to everything that is spiritual, and merged in chaos. There is labor there, but it is labor without life or light. These obstructions however, are giving way ; the bulwarks of error are yielding, and there are indistinct, but strong voices, calling us to these places, and we are invited to disseminate the scriptures there. We understand these invitations as the voice of God calling us to those countries. He has opened the way for us.

Sir, in respect to our responsibilities, as affected by this state of affairs, it is one of the things which I sometimes almost refuse to think about. I hear my brethren speak of the advantageous position, and moral power of this country. Our ministers so speak in their sermons. Statesmen in their orations, editors in their leaders, are always speaking of the immense advantages which this country has for exerting a saving and civilizing influence upon the world at large. I believe them to be serious, and so believing, it is sometimes enough to make a man turn away trembling. I heard it said once, it is an awful thing to live ; but Sir, it is an awful thing to live a Christian—an American Baptist Christian—because, Sir, God has been pleased to give us the light. We have seen the Gospel in its simplicity, as it came from the mouths of Christ and the apostles themselves. Our responsibilities then are fearful, binding us to send this word everywhere. Why, my brother, in addressing you just now, told you that the blessed word lay at the bottom of everything; that it affected civil, social, literary—indeed every department of human existence, and it is designed to affect them more deeply and powerfully and to wake up humanity everywhere. What does the Bible do with the human mind? Why it brings it back to God, from whom it had been separated, and this is all it does. These are the responsibilities under which we lie. Whether we send Bibles before the preacher goes, or with him when he goes, or supplementary to his preaching, I care not; but one thing we must do—we must send them. Well, Sir, with all those countries shut up against the Bible, if we can just get one of our depositories established in them, every Bible that falls there will be ten thousand times more destructive than fiery shots falling in this city would be to our lives and property. The Bible is a dangerous thing to every obstacle that will not let man prepare to meet his God. I could not but be struck the other day with the remark of a little child. It was enough to bring tears to any man's eyes. He had been reading the blessed New Testament. God had sent his Spirit, and it had settled down in the child's heart. His priest, who ought to have been a man of prayer, came along, saw him reading the New Testament, took it from him and threw it into the fire. Upon which the child said, "well, you will have to throw me there too."

The fire that consumed Cranmer and other martyrs, did not burn them alone. A fire has been kindled which has not yet been extinguished, and we are here, dear Brethren, to add fuel to that fire. Let it burn on, and burn up everything that opposes it, whatever may be the consequences.

Why, we number six hundred and eighty-six thousand Baptists alone. I speak not now of mere adherents to the Baptist name, I speak of regenerated material,—baptized men and women,—those who are enrolled upon our church books. What cannot that number do? We are sometimes wanting money. Mr. President, and brethren, what should we not be able to do, if we, seven hundred thousand Baptists, should give one dollar annually? Why, sir, we should not want one cent to carry on the largest missionary enterprise; we could not only send the Bible, but we could send with it the writings of those whom God has blessed, and is pleased to own. Yes Sir, we should have money enough to do every thing we wish. The responsibility lies upon us in proportion as we have the opportunity, and in proportion as the thing which we withhold will benefit those from whom we withhold it. These are the great principles upon which rest the responsibilities of the American and Foreign Bible Society.

ADDRESS OF THE REV. AMOS SUTTON,

MISSIONARY FROM ORISSA.

MR. PRESIDENT :

It is not my intention to detain you long this morning. I, however, do wish to thank you for your past aid, and ask for further assistance for the time to come. The aid which has been sent us by this Society has enabled us to give the Bible to a vast number of the heathen, and now we ask assistance in the wide distribution of that word of God which your liberality will enable us to make.

It has been somewhere said, that he benefits mankind who makes a blade of grass grow where none grew before; but how much greater a benefit is it to introduce one sacred book where it was previously unknown and untranslated. Now this you have done with respect to that Bible you have advocated this morning. Let us have the Bible; whether before or after the preacher; only let us have a wide distribution of it throughout the world. We were the first to undertake a circulation of the word of God about the region of Orissa, where the inhabitants have such a florid style of writing, that the plain directness of the Bible, it was thought, would be disagreeable to them; but in this we were disappointed. We used to see them sitting from hour to hour; and sometimes during the whole day, never giving over till they had accomplished their tasks. There are not to be found anywhere, persons better acquainted with the Scriptures than the natives of Orissa. All strangers are surprised at their familiarity with the word of God. Many of them can turn to any part of the Bible, and quote texts to illustrate their subject. This is a characteristic feature of the converts there, and this will illustrate the importance of some of the statements of the first speaker this morning. It was the first book they had to read before their minds were prepossessed by other books. To a man, I believe, they reject the Hindoo Scriptures, and therefore they take the first book we give them, and that book is the Scriptures. Thus they are trained up in sacred knowledge from the beginning.

One of our most flourishing Christian villages took its rise from a circumstance which I will relate. The gospel of Mark had been prepared to give away. A copy was presented to a man who was passing through the country with bullocks laden with rice. He did not much value it himself. On his road he met a man anxiously inquiring the way to heaven. The latter having heard of the Bible, solicited and obtained the loan of it from the traveller. He was particularly struck with the description of the human heart contained in it. He had been directed to go on a pilgrimage to Juggernaut, and had obtained a sight of the idol. As he was on his way from the temple, he observed a number of Hindoos with tracts in their hand. Occasionally he heard some of the words which he read in his gospel of St. Mark. "Ah," said he, "these are the people that can give me comfort and information." He obtained some of their tracts, took them back with him to his native village, and compared them with the Hindoo Shaster, and then came to our station to inquire for the Christians. One morning we were surprised to find a man rushing down the church and before the altar, inquiring what he should do to be saved. We soon had the pleasure of baptizing this individual. We have now a house of prayer, in his village, and from that same village, we have had three men become able ministers of the Gospel.

I might refer you to other illustrations of a similar character if I had time.

We need your help in India, not only for Orissa, but also for a large portion of the country. The Khunds are in the habit of offering human sacrifices. We are reminded of this class, when we read that the earth is "full of the habitations of cruelty." The Khunds cultivate an article called Turmurk. They think it owes its red tinge to blood deposited in the fields, and for this purpose they sacrifice victims.

They watch about the villages of their enemies, pounce upon the children, tie a cloth about them, and sell them for this sacrifice. These children are usually kept till ten or twelve years of age, and are then brought to the place of sacrifice with red about their heads. Sometimes they dig a grave and bury their victims alive. Sometimes they begin at the heels and chop the body up to the head. Then all dance around the spot, led by their barbarous music, and finally rush upon the victim, each endeavoring to cut a piece from the remains. Hundreds of people are annually offered in such sacrifices. There have been five hundred persons rescued from this atrocious death by the interference of the English government. A number of these victims have been rescued and put into our schools.

I want now to ask you to aid in circulating the Scriptures throughout these lands. This in brief, is the object which I cherish in addressing you. Do brethren what you can in order to circulate the word of God. There are "increased facilities" for such circulation, and whatever difficulties you may have about your home questions, there are none about foreign distribution. Again, I thank you for what you have done, and earnestly entreat you to assist us liberally for the time to come."

A N A C T

FOR THE INCORPORATION OF BENEVOLENT, CHARITABLE, SCIENTIFIC, AND MISSIONARY SOCIETIES, PASSED APRIL 12, 1848.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Any five or more persons of full age, citizens of the United States, a majority of whom shall be citizens of this State, who shall desire to associate themselves for benevolent, charitable, scientific or missionary purposes, may make, sign and acknowledge before any officer authorized to take the acknowledgment of deeds in this state, and file in the office of the secretary of state, and also in the office of the clerk of the county in which the business of such society is to be conducted, a certificate in writing, in which shall be stated the name or title by which such society shall be known in law, the particular business and objects of such society, the number of trustees, directors or managers to manage the same, and the names of the trustees, directors or managers of such society for the first year of its existence, but such certificate shall not be filed unless by the written consent and approbation of one of the justices of the supreme court of the district in which the place of business or principal office of such company or association shall be located, to be endorsed on such certificate.

§ 2. Upon filing a certificate as aforesaid, the persons who shall have signed and acknowledged such certificate, and their associates and successors, shall thereupon by virtue of this act, be a body politic and corporate by the name stated in such certificate, and by that name they and their successors shall and may have succession, and shall be persons in law capable of suing and being sued; and they and their successors may have and use a common seal, and the same may alter and change at pleasure, and they and their successors, by their corporate name, shall, in law, be capable of taking, receiving, purchasing and holding real estate, for the purposes of their incorporation, and for no other purpose, to an amount not exceeding the sum of fifty thousand dollars in value, and personal estate, for like purposes, to an amount not exceeding the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars in value, but the clear annual income of such real and personal estate shall not exceed the sum of ten thousand dollars; to make by-laws for the management of its affairs, not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of this state, or of the United States; to elect and appoint the officers and agents of such society, for the management of its business, and to allow them a suitable compensation.

§ 3. The society so incorporated may annually elect from its members its trustees, directors or managers at such time and place, and in such manner as may be specified in its by-laws, who shall have the control and management of the affairs and funds of said society, a majority of whom shall be a quorum for the transaction of business; and whenever any vacancy shall happen among such trustees, directors or managers, by death, resignation, or neglect to serve, such vacancy shall be filled in such manner as shall be provided by the by-laws of such society.

§ 4. In case it shall at any time happen that an election of trustees, directors or managers shall not be made on the day designated by the by-laws, said society for that cause shall not be dissolved, but it shall and may be lawful on any other day to hold an election for trustees, directors or managers, in such manner as may be directed by the by-laws of such society.

§ 5. The provisions of this act shall not extend or apply to any association or individuals who shall in the certificate filed with the secretary of state, or with the county clerk, use or specify a name or style the same as that of any previously existing incorporated society in this state; nor shall they authorize the formation of any corporation which can be incorporated under the act entitled, An act to provide for the incorporation of religious societies, passed April 5, 1813, and the several acts amending the same; or the formation of any secret societies.

§ 6. Any corporation formed under this act, shall be capable of taking, holding or receiving any property, real or personal, by virtue of any devise or bequest contained in any last will or testament of any person whatsoever, the clear annual income of which devise or bequest shall not exceed the sum of ten thousand dollars; provided, no person leaving a wife or child or parent shall devise or bequeath to such institution or corporation more than one fourth of his or her estate, after the payment of his or her debts, and such devise or bequest shall be valid to the extent of such one fourth, and no such devise or bequest shall be valid, in any will which shall not have been made and executed at least two months before the death of the testator.

§ 7. The trustees of any company or corporation organized under the provisions of this act, shall be jointly and severally liable for all debts due from said company or corporation contracted while they are trustees, provided said debts are payable within one year from the time they shall have been contracted, and provided a suit for the collection of the same shall be brought within one year after the debts shall become due and payable.

§ 8. All institutions formed under this act, together with their books and vouchers, shall be subject to the visitation and inspection of the justices of the supreme court, or by any person or persons who shall be appointed by the supreme court for that purpose, and it shall be the duty of the trustees, or a majority of them, in the month of December in each year, to make and file in the county clerk's office where the original certificate is filed, a certificate under their hands, stating the names of the trustees and officers of such association or corporation, with an inventory of the property, effects and liabilities thereof, with an affidavit of the truth of such certificate and inventory, and also an affidavit that such association or corporation has not been engaged directly or indirectly, in any other business than such as is set forth in the original certificate on file.

§ 9. Every corporation formed under this act shall possess the powers and be subject to the provisions and restrictions contained in the third title of the eighteenth chapter of the first part of the Revised Statutes.

§ 10. The Legislature may at any time, amend, annul or repeal any incorporation formed or created under this act.

State of New York, Secretary's Office.

I have compared the preceding with an original law on file in this office, and do certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom, and of the whole of said original.

Fourteenth Annual Meeting.

THE Fourteenth Anniversary of the American and Foreign Bible Society was held in the meeting-house of the Oliver street Baptist church, in the city of New-York, on Friday, May 9, 1851, at 9 o'clock A. M.

The President, Rev. B. T. WELCH, D.D., took the chair, and the meeting was opened by singing the 387th Hymn.

Rev. G. S. WEBB, of New-Jersey, led in prayer.

Messrs. H. P. Freeman, of New-York, A. H. Taylor, of Rhode-Island, A. D. Gillette, of Pennsylvania, G. S. Webb, of New-Jersey, and C. Willett, of Connecticut, were appointed a Committee to nominate Officers and Managers for the ensuing year.

The Recording Secretary presented the following communication from the Board of Managers, in reference to the lease from the Corporation of the First Baptist church in the city of New-York, of the premises now occupied by the Society; which, on motion of Rev. I. Wescott, of New-York, was approved:—

Whereas, By resolutions passed Dec. 30, 1841, the Corporation of the First Baptist church in the city of New-York did formally tender to the Board of Managers of the American and Foreign Bible Society, as built for their permanent occupation and use, the rooms now in the possession of the said Board, which rooms were formally accepted by the said Society at its annual meeting in April, 1842, to be held and used so long as the Society might deem such occupation and use advantageous to its interests; and

Whereas, The Corporation of the said church did, on the 2d day of May, 1851, voluntarily tender to the said Board a legal evidence of the subsisting equitable title, reciting and confirming the same by lease, with such covenants and specifications annexed as to them seemed necessary to express the spirit and import of the original arrangements, and this Board felt itself bound, in the ordinary course of executive duties, to accept such lease, and execute it on its part; and

Whereas, It is believed by many, both in this Board and out of it, among the friends of this Society, that no title to occupy and use for the future, stronger than the equitable one hitherto subsisting, is necessary or desirable; therefore,

Resolved, That this Board will unite with the Corporation of the First Baptist church in the city of New-York in cancelling said lease; and that the President and Recording Secretary be and are hereby authorized and instructed to execute the necessary papers, under the seal of the Society.

Rev. J. N. Granger, of Rhode-Island, from the Committee on amending the second Article of the Constitution, presented a report, which was read, and made the special order of business at the commencement of the afternoon Session.

The business of the Society was suspended, in order to attend to the public exercises of the Anniversary.

PUBLIC SERVICES.

After singing, Rev. J. Girdwood, of Massachusetts, read the 19th Psalm, and Rev. David Benedict, of Rhode-Island, prayed.

The President then addressed the Society.

The Treasurer, N. C. Platt, Esq., presented and read an abstract from his Annual Report; which, on motion of Rev. S. J. Drake, of New-Jersey, seconded by Thomas Purner, Esq., of New-York, was accepted and ordered to be printed.

The Corresponding Secretary read the Annual Report of the Board of Managers.

On motion of Rev. M. J. Rhea, of New-York, accompanied with a brief address, and seconded by Rev. R. Babcock, D.D., the report was accepted and ordered to be printed.

Rev. R. A. Fyfe, of Rhode Island, offered the following resolution, and accompanied it with an address. The resolution was seconded by Rev. C. G. Sommers, of New-York, and adopted :—

Resolved, That the distribution of the pure Word of God among all nations is not only practicable, but is essential to the evangelization of the world ; and we recognize in the existing state of our own, as well as that of foreign countries, an increase of encouragement and consequent obligation to prosecute this work with zeal, faith, and hope.

Adjourned till half-past 2 o'clock P. M.

Benediction by the President.

The Society met. Prayer by Rev. A. D. Gillette, of Pennsylvania.

The special business was suspended, in order to receive the report of the Committee on Nominations.

The Committee then reported a list of officers and managers, who were duly elected. (See page 2.)

The report of the Committee on Article second of the Constitution was then taken up, and after discussion, was ordered to be printed with the proceedings of this meeting, and was referred to the Board of Managers, with power.

On motion of Rev. J. N. Granger, the Board was instructed to report in detail, at the next Annual Meeting, the disposition they may make of the suggestions contained in the Report.

The following alterations to the Constitution were made on the recommendation of the Board of Managers :—

Add to Art. IX. : "The Board of Managers shall have power to fill all vacancies that may occur in the executive offices during the year."

Add to Art. X. : "He shall also, on the certified request of the Board of Managers, call special meetings of the Society ; giving one month's public notice thereof."

On motion of Rev. J. Dowling, D.D., the newly elected Board of Managers were directed to hold the first meeting for organization, on Saturday, the 10th inst., at 4 o'clock P. M., at the Bible Rooms.

The time and place of the next Anniversary of the Society were referred to the Board of Managers.

The Minutes were read and approved, and ordered to be published under the direction of the Board.

Adjourned with singing the Doxology, and the Benediction by the President.

B. T. WELCH, President.

M. J. RHEES, Recording Secretary.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

ON THE SECOND ARTICLE OF THE CONSTITUTION.

NEW-YORK, May 9th, 1851.

To the American and Foreign Bible Society :

At the last annual meeting of the Society, the undersigned were appointed a committee, to whom was referred the consideration of the following resolution, to wit :—

Resolved, That the second article of the Constitution be so amended as to read as follows:

"It shall be the object of this Society to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in foreign lands."

Your Committee were instructed to report at the present anniversary, and, having attended to the duties assigned to them, respectfully submit the following statements and recommendations.

The proposition to confine the operations of the Society to the circulation of the Holy Scriptures in foreign lands, contemplates the relinquishment of the existing department of the Society's operations for the publication, sale, and donation of copies of the English Scriptures. The change which the proposed alteration of the Constitution would effect in the present methods of the business of the Society would be the discontinuance of what is called the Publication or Home Department. The property of the Society, now held for the benefit of this Department, and consisting of books now on hand, bound and unbound, stereotype plates, debts due, &c., would in that case be disposed of either in the common market, or to some local Society whose operations were confined exclusively to the publication and distribution of the English Scriptures.

The question submitted to this committee is then, in fact, the original question which was discussed in the Convention of the Baptist denomination in the city of Philadelphia, in 1837, subsequently to the formation of this Society in 1836. It is well known that at that time opposing views were held of the question, whether the new Society should confine its operations to the foreign field, or engage also in home distribution.

Under the peculiar circumstances in which the Society found itself placed at the time of its last anniversary, this question, evidently suggested by those circumstances, was again raised. After a careful examination of the published reports of the deliberations in that Convention, your committee are satisfied that had the language of some of those who were then the prominent advocates of a Home Department been understood as it was interpreted to the Society at its last annual meeting, and it could have been supposed that a department for the publication of English Bibles was to be maintained with a view to the issue of some amended or altered version of the Holy Scriptures, the decision of that Convention would have confined the operations of the Society to the foreign field.

After a lapse of fourteen years circumstances with which we are all familiar have again brought this important subject to the attention of the Society. It is not now, however, to be considered as an independent question. New facts are to be taken into the account. The Home Department is now an existing institution. Its affairs and history are interwoven with those of the Society for many years past. It has its auxiliaries and personal friends and customers in many parts of the land. It is not easy to ascertain what indirect benefit its ordinary business transactions may confer upon the foreign work of the Society. In the opinion of many persons the Home Department is made necessary by the demand for copies of the English Scriptures, which could be supplied in no other manner so well as by this Society. It is supposed that this Society has opened channels through which to reach the destitute, not open to the same extent to any other similar institution. It is supposed by many that the Home Department is indispensably necessary, as an advertising agency, to make known the foreign work in which the Society is engaged, and thus to increase the contributions to the general and more missionary purposes of the institution. On the other hand, there are those who take an entirely different view, and regarding the Home Department simply as a publishing firm, would place the question of its continuance on the same grounds as those on which this question was discussed in 1837. Such persons, especially in view of the unauthorized alterations in the received text of the English Bible which this Department has repeatedly made, and the further and more radical changes to which it so recently seemed to threaten to commit the denomination which supported it, are prepared to dispense with it altogether, to confine the operations of the Society to foreign versions, and to look to other quarters for a supply of English Bibles.

But, as your committee have already intimated, this measure cannot now be treated as a new question. The Home Department has been for so long a time an integral part of the Society's operations, that it cannot be suddenly abandoned by merely crediting its assets to the foreign work, and suspending all future operations in English Bibles. There is some weight to be attached to the argument in favor of continuing, drawn from the indirect service it is supposed to render to the missionary work. Nevertheless your committee do not consider that this service is so important as to require the maintenance of a large publication house, with all its complicated machinery of business, unless indeed there are other and more obvious advantages which it serves, besides the doubtful one of advertising the benevolent designs of the Society with respect to the nations of the earth. Whatever indirect advantages of this sort may flow from the present arrangement, your committee do not suppose that they alone can be regarded as the main reasons in favor of adhering to the old system. Those reasons, if they exist, must be found in an existing demand for the issue of English Bibles for the destitute, and in the ability of this institution to enter on the work of a supply which would be neglected were this Society to suspend its operations. How far a demand of this nature is likely to arise, can only be ascertained from the past history of the Society. Your committee have given careful attention to this point, and the result of their inquiries will be presented in a subsequent part of this report.

The department called the Home, or Publication, or Book Department, is a branch of the Society's operations, with no treasury of its own independent of the general treasury. Its work is two-fold. It is a publishing house, manufacturing its own books to a large extent, and entering the market like any other similar house, and offering its books at fixed prices to all who choose to become purchasers. Besides this, however, it is a benevolent institution, and under the guidance of general regulations, makes donations of books to the destitute, and annual grants to Life Members and Life Directors, who apply for their volumes.

During the first fourteen years of the Society's existence the sales of books amounted to $78,858 82; while the donations amounted to only $13,464 29, of which $3,631 86 were for books claimed by Life Members and Life Directors, leaving not quite $10,000 given away.

Through the assistance of the present Depository Agent, Mr. U. D. Ward, who has had the charge of the account books of the Society since October 1, 1850, and who has taken special pains to become well acquainted with the history of the money operations of the Home Department, your Committee have been able to obtain tables of figures, and data on which their present report is in part founded. Your Committee have the best reason to believe that the accuracy of these tables may be relied upon, they having been carefully compared with the original books and Annual Reports, from which they have been compiled.

The accompanying paper, marked "A," (see page 17,) is a "Statement showing the amount of Receipts and Expenditures of the American and Foreign Bible Society from the first year of its organization down to April 6, 1850." An abstract of this statement is here presented:—

		$148,475 08

In the preceding statement it will be seen that the amount appropriated in books is credited to the Publication Department. Notwithstanding this allowance, this department is still indebted to the general treasury in the sum already named. That is, the sum of $24,582 99 has been taken from the funds received for general purposes, or more strictly, from the Foreign Department, to meet the losses which have been constantly arising in the Publication Department. It is impossible to regard this as a proper loan to the Publication Department, inasmuch as there has never been a time when that Department was in a condition to offer any security, or to expect from its profits on sales to be able, first to meet its own expenses, and then to reimburse the Foreign Department to the amount of its present indebtedness.

That the Board of Managers should persevere in these operations, and that the Society from year to year should approve and continue them, appears at first somewhat strange. The only explanation which has presented itself to your Committee, is found in a remark of a distinguished individual, who has been connected with the Society from the time of its organization, that if the Publishing Department had cost the Baptist denomination many times the sum already lost, the investment would have been a good and economical one, provided the Society had been able to employ this agency in giving to the world a new and faithful version of the Holy Scriptures. The statements and explanations of many of the leading Managers of the Society, made at the last meeting, show very clearly that this has been a leading object with them from the beginning. The gradual alteration of the text, in many editions, which was practised notwithstanding the Society's prohibitory resolution, points to the same explanation. As the Society has taken ground on this subject which can no longer be mistaken, it cannot for a moment be supposed that the further existence of the Publication Department is made necessary for any such reasons.

We come now to the examination of the reasons for continuing this Department, which are found in its existing operations. These are, the making of English Bibles to sell again, and also to give to the destitute.

1. In the first class of operations, the accounts show that the sales have amounted to $78,858 82, as follows:—

Cash received from sales of books, - - - - -	58,058 82
Cash supposed to have been received for books, but credited to the Donation Department through mistake, - - - - -	6,000 00
Amount due for books, as per Ledger, April 6, 1850, - - - - -	14,800 00
In all, - - - - -	$78,858 82

If these books could be procured by auxiliary societies and merchants, who buy at wholesale, and by individuals who buy at retail, at no other places, or could not elsewhere be obtained of as good quality and at as reasonable rates, it would have been, and it will still be the duty of this Society to continue in the business, if not greatly to enlarge it. But your Committee cannot suppose that this is the case. Aside from other Societies, British and American, enterprising publishers in both countries are engaged in the same business, and are ready to fill all orders, whether from our Branch Societies, or from others, at rates as favorable to purchasers as those which this Department has established.

But this is not all. The books sold prior to the financial year which has just closed, have actually cost the Society more than the sum for which they were sold. The expenditures of the Publication Department, during the period named, for all purposes, amount, according to the most careful estimates of this Committee, to $143,475 03.

After deducting from this sum the amount in books appropriated and given away, and the amount of stock on hand, consisting of bound and unbound books, stereotype plates, fixtures, &c. &c., in all amounting to $40,033 22, there remain $108,441 81, an excess over the sales and cash value of the books sold, of $24,582 99, as follows:—

Total expenses of the Publication Department, to April 6, 1850,	$143,475 08
From this deduct,
For amount in books appropriated,	8,662 00
“ appropriations previous to 1842,	1,170 43
“ amount delivered to directors and members,	3,631 86
“ books on hand,	14,252 45
“ stereotype plates,	11,726 48
“ plate paper,	90 00
“ boxes, desks, fixtures, &c.,	500 00
	<hr/> 40,033 22
Leaving	108,441 81
From this deduct the cash value of books sold,	78,858 82
Leaving	<hr/> $24,582 99

This excess, as will be observed, is the sum already given as the difference between the receipts and expenditures of the Book Department during the period now under review. But the cash value of the books appropriated to the destitute, and claimed by Life Members and Life Directors, must have been below the actual cost in like proportion. In order then to ascertain the actual loss on all books issued, it is necessary to add the amount of appropriations and grants to the amount of sales. These together make $92,323 11;* a sum which represents the estimated value of all the books issued from the Society's Rooms during the first fourteen years of its existence. But these books actually cost the Society, according to the estimate of this Committee, the sum last named, plus the ascertained loss on all the operations of the Department for the period under review; that is, were estimated and either sold or given away, at rates 26½ per cent. below the actual cost.

Assuming, as this Committee are disposed to do, that the business of this Department has always been managed with a due regard to economy, and with ordinary prudence and skill, and that the deficiency now found is to be attributed to the inadequacy of the demand for books, as compared with the expensiveness of the Society's facilities for a supply, the objections which occur to your Committee against the method adopted may thus be briefly stated:

1. It is unnecessary. The books published by this Society are in no important respects superior to those which are offered in the market by other Societies, and by individual publishers and publishing firms.

2. It requires the constant diversion of funds from the channel of the foreign appropriations, to meet the large deficit in the Publication Department. No funds, so far as your Committee are informed, have ever been contributed to supply this deficiency. It has always been held, as stated by the late Corresponding Secretary to the Society at its last meeting, that the Domestic Department is intended to support itself. The funds contributed to the general treasury have been considered by the donors as contributed to the foreign work, and, excepting the expense attending their collection and administration, they have supposed that they were so appropriated.

Cash received for sales,	64,058 82
Amount due for books, per Ledger,	14,800 00
“ in books appropriated,	8,662 00
Appropriations before 1842,	1,170 43
Amount drawn by Life Members and Life Directors,	3,631 86

3. The method formerly pursued involves, in the annual appeals which are made for contributions, a representation of the necessities and wants of the Society, in the prosecution of its foreign work, which the above explanations show to be exaggerated. The actual income needed by the Society from year to year is not the amount paid in foreign appropriations, which is only 47½ per cent. on all the Society's receipts during fourteen years, but it is this sum together with the loss occurring in the Publication Department.

A benevolent institution should always be in a condition to enable its supporters fully to understand the objects for which their contributions are solicited, and to those objects all contributions should be sacredly appropriated. That no funds have ever been asked or been given to meet a deficit in the Publication Department, is doubtless owing to the fact that the attention of the Society has not been earlier called to the subject. In view of all these facts, your Committee do not find, in such of the operations of the Domestic Department as relate to the publication of books for sale, the reasons which, in their view, will justify the Society, before the churches and the public, in continuing to maintain this Department.

II. There is, however, another branch of the operations of this Department. We allude to its donations, and to its grants to Life Members and Life Directors. This has already been referred to incidentally, but the question is here to be considered, whether the Department ought to be maintained for the sake of the good which is thus supposed to be accomplished.

The grants of the Society under this head, during the period of time already named, amount in all to $13,464 2.

On the supposition that the books sold, amounting to $78,858 82, should be regarded as having been sold not below cost, then the whole burden of the loss in the Department would fall on the donation branch of its operations. But, as has been shown, this loss ought to be distributed in like proportion over the two branches of sales and donations.

It will be perceived that the donations are of two descriptions: one, under a general regulation of the Society which authorizes Life Members and Life Directors to draw books annually from the Depository, and the other, the Society's grants to the destitute.

Respecting the first of these, namely, grants to directors and members, it cannot be an object with the Society to continue them at rates below cost. They are of the nature of a claim upon the Society, in consequence of the sums originally paid to constitute memberships and directorships.

Your Committee have been informed that the original expectation was that the persons who should avail themselves of this privilege would become distributors to the destitute, and would draw only low-priced books; but that this object has been gradually lost sight of, until few books are drawn for distribution among the poor. As the number of Life Members and Life Directors increases, the loss by this means is annually greater. The cash value of the books thus drawn, for example, during the year which has just closed, amounts to $1,089 41, which is a little less than one fourth of the amount drawn during all previous years.

Considering that there is good reason to suppose that these books are generally drawn for the use of those who ordinarily can afford to purchase, your Committee think it important, even if this Department be continued, that the practice of the Society in this respect be changed. On the point of the Society's obligations to Life Members and Life Directors, who may claim that they have given their money on the condition of an annual return in books, your Committee are unable to offer any suggestions which are likely to obviate the difficulty. A large number might be induced to relinquish their claim; and the Society might adopt a new rule for the future.

Turning now to the remaining appropriations in books, the only proper donations made by this Department, they amount in all to $9,832 43, during the period to which the attention of this Committee has been chiefly confined. Strictly speaking, this constitutes the entire sum appropriated in the Home Department. On the supposition, which your Committee deem to be reasonable and just, that the orders for Bibles sold could have been filled elsewhere with equal advantage to purchasers, then the Department has existed for no other purpose, natural and apparent, save to make this donation of less than $10,000. This object has been accomplished only by making a draft on the Foreign Department, about *three and a half times** the market value of the books given away.

But if the cash orders for books can be filled with equal advantage to purchasers elsewhere, then the Society can itself become a purchaser, at the same rates, and, if need be, can supply itself with books for gratuitous distribution, at a saving of at least  $26\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. on the value of the books thus donated. If then it should be insisted that it is important for the Society to maintain a Depository for gratuitous distribution, which your Committee are not disposed to deny, it would not follow that the Society should continue in the business of publishing. On the other hand, the period now under examination appears to afford strong reasons against the further maintenance of a Publication Department.

But, looking at the small sums appropriated in English Bibles, being an average of only $702 annually, your Committee cannot resist the conviction that the demand on the benevolence of the Society, in this respect, is very small indeed, too small to justify the further support of a burdensome and expensive department.

But it has been said that the deficiencies in the Publication Department are owing to the business of the first years of operation, which were chiefly experimental. This is true to some extent. In order to ascertain the truth on this point, the Committee have prepared tables, showing the operations of the Department for the four years preceding the last. They are herewith submitted.

The loss on these books amounts to $9,501 98, which is 18½ per cent. on the original cost. In this estimate, however, there is not included the loss by bad debts, as in the preceding calculations for the entire period. This would increase the per centage of loss to at least 20 per cent. From this it will be seen that the difficulty under which the Department labors is not so much owing to the management during the first years of its history, as it is peculiar to the system.

The Committee have thus presented what they trust will be found to be an accurate statement of the financial condition and operations of the Book Department up to the time of the last annual meeting. It will readily be seen that the Committee cannot recommend that this department be continued, if it is to be maintained, in its present form and character. The Society is bound to provide that no portion of the funds given in aid of foreign versions should be lost to that object; and to accomplish this, it is necessary that the Book Department be made a self-supporting institution. It is better that it be given up than that it should become a burden upon the missionary operations of the Society.

The history of the Society for the two years last past, shows that it was a prominent object from the beginning, with those who have urged the Society to attempt a revision of the English version of the Holy Scriptures, to maintain a Publication Department, as the most convenient agency in that work. From this fact, from the present position of the Society on that subject, and especially from the facts set forth in this Report, your Committee are decidedly of the opinion that the time has come when the Society should take the ground advocated by a large part of the Convention of 1837, and then yielded chiefly at the solicitation of brethren who have now left the ranks of the Society, and are acting with a rival, although dissimilar institution, so far as to suspend all operations in the manufacture of English Bibles, and to maintain the Depository by the purchase of books made elsewhere.

While, then, your Committee cannot recommend the further prosecution of the business of this department as it has been conducted, they are not prepared to recommend an immediate and entire abandonment of the business. They find that the chief source of all the losses to the department is to be sought in the manufacture of books. The Society has never been in a condition to compete with large publishing houses. Its contracts for paper, printing, binding, &c., are comparatively small, and are made with many individuals. If, then, the business of manufacturing should be suspended, and the Depository be hereafter maintained wholly by purchasing of other Societies, and of private manufacturers and publishers, and at the same time the practice of allowing grants in Bibles to Life Directors and Members be discontinued, it is to be hoped that the objections to the further maintenance of the Depository would be removed. By this means the Depository would be relieved of its chief causes of embarrassment, and at the same time be able to retain the present branch Societies in connection with this Society, and to fill all orders for books.

If, after suitable trial, the Depository is still found indebted to the Foreign Department, the Committee recommend its entire relinquishment.

In that case it might be necessary to amend the second article of the Constitution of the Society. It would still be a question, however, whether the amendment referred to this Committee ought not to be changed in one particular. In order to enable the Society to engage in the work of giving the Bible to the foreign emigrant population in this country from France, Germany, and other countries of continental Europe, and to the native population of Mexico and New-Mexico, the second article of the Constitution might be so amended as to confine the operations of this Society to "foreign versions," instead of "foreign lands."

The Committee however recommend that the further consideration of this subject be deferred for the present; and that the Society suspend by resolution all future operations in the manufacture of the English Bible, except what may be required by existing contracts, or in order to bind unbound books now on hand, and that the Depository be kept supplied with Bibles by purchase only.

In accordance with these views, the Committee submit the following Resolution:—

Resolved, That the Board of Managers be instructed to discontinue all future operations in the business of manufacturing English Bibles, except what may be required by existing contracts, and that so much of the capital stock now on hand as is held for the purpose of manufacturing be disposed of in the most advantageous manner, for the benefit of the Depository.

Should the Book Department be continued as recommended by this Committee, or be continued either in its present form or in the one last suggested, then the Committee offer, as their final suggestions, the following:—

1. That a separate department be organized, called the Book Department.
2. That the Depository Agent present to the Society, at each annual meeting, a full and detailed statement of the condition and operations of his department for the year preceding, specifying the kinds and value of stock on hand at the beginning of the year, charging the department with the books purchased, with the compensation paid for all services rendered in the department, or for its benefit, with Depository and incidental expenses, &c.
3. That the regulation, under which annual grants of books have heretofore been made to Life Members and Life Directors, be suspended, so far as relates to those persons who shall become members and directors after the present time; and that the Board be requested to adopt such measures as they shall deem equitable and safe to diminish the large drafts which these grants now make upon the income of the Department.
4. That all donations and legacies to the American and Foreign Bible Society, not designated at the time as payments or donations to the Book Department, be regarded as exclusively and forever appropriated to the foreign work of the Society. In explanation of this suggestion, the Committee state that the late financial officer, Rev. Mr. Clarke, found that the business of the Publication Department and the books of the Society were embarrassed in consequence of the absence of some such rule as this, known to purchasers and donors. Societies and Associations have bought books on credit. Subsequently the same bodies have made donations to the general treasury, which, it afterwards appeared, they intended should be in payment of their former purchases. In the intention of the whole body of the contributors to the general missionary purposes of the Society, and on the grounds on which the appeals of the Society to the churches for aid have uniformly been made, and in the very nature of the case, the Book Department is to be regarded as a publishing firm, selling for cash and on credit. Its own interests, as well as the duty of the Society to its supporters, require that it should be governed by those regulations which are essential to the proper business management of all similar establishments. Purchasers who become indebted to it should pay to it in return, nor be permitted to plead that they have given as much money to a benevolent institution.

If the Society decides to adhere to the department, it is hoped that the above suggestions will be received with favor. Should they be adopted, they will at least assure the public that the Society is resolved to use its utmost exertions to preserve the department free from all pecuniary dependence on the Foreign Department, and to make it self-supporting. The true state of the department will at least be easily ascertained, and will be publicly exhibited each year.

All which is respectfully submitted.

J. N. GRANGER,

for the Committee.

We, the subscribers, a committee appointed by the Board of Managers of the American and Foreign Bible Society to audit the accounts of the Treasurer, do report that we have examined the accounts and vouchers of the Society for the last year, and find the same correct. The receipts from all sources, including a balance of three hundred and eighty-nine dollars and sixty-eight cents from the previous year, have been forty-five thousand three hundred and seventy-three dollars and forty-one cents; and the payments have been, including one thousand dollars unavailable funds loaned to Platt & Brother, on interest, forty-five thousand seven hundred and twenty-nine dollars and eighty-eight cents; leaving a balance this day due the Treasurer of three hundred and fifty-six dollars and forty-seven cents. The one thousand dollars unavailable funds, mentioned above as loaned to P. & B., was a legacy from the estate of Thomas Burton, late of Maine, to be invested, and the interest only to be used.*

Fourteenth Annual Report.

IN fulfilling the duties committed to their trust, the Board of Managers, at the commencement of their term of office, adopted a general course of conduct which they have continued to the close. This course was, to adhere as closely as possible to the established methods of administration, studying meanwhile such changes for future adoption as a careful scrutiny of the Society's experience might indicate as desirable. The members of the Board brought with them to their posts no spirit of criticism with reference to past administrations, nor any desire to signalize their term of office by the adoption of new plans. They looked upon their work as a simple and practical one,—to collect the offerings which Christian disciples might contribute to the treasury of the Society, for “the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands,” and to dispense those offerings so as best to reach the poor and perishing. They believed the Society to be worth to its friends and to the world just what it might do practically in the work of the world's evangelization. They loved it, and believed its friends loved it, for its work's sake. Its works, therefore, engrossed their attention. And they have now the privilege of coming before the Society, at the close of their official term, to present a brief statement of what they have been permitted to accomplish, with a few suggestions as to future plans. They offer to the Society their congratulations that the year has been one of unsurpassed prosperity. The receipts have been larger by some thousands of dollars than those of any preceding year in the Society's history, and the calls for disbursements, which have been of the most urgent and practical kind, have been met to a degree which cannot fail to awaken general thanksgiving to the Father of Lights.

DEATH OF REV. DR. JUDSON.

The Board of Managers received, in the month of September last, the painful intelligence of the decease of this distinguished servant of Christ. His long and eminent labors as a Christian missionary, and especially his services as a translator of the Holy Scriptures, seemed to require at the hands of the Board some special notice of the event; and, in the resolutions passed upon the occasion, a public service commemorative of his life and labors was appointed. This service occurs on Sunday evening next, at the Tabernacle Baptist church, in this city, and the Rev. Rufus Babcock, D.D., formerly Corresponding Secretary of this Society, has been invited to deliver the discourse. The appointment of such a service supercedes the necessity, in this connection, of any extended remarks upon his character, or narration of his various and valuable labors; yet in a brief allusion, the Board cannot refrain from reminding the Society, that it was his fidelity to the true principles of translation, which, in great part, gave occasion for the rise of this organization, and they would express the hope that his illustrious example may perpetually stimulate and encourage its labors, till, not Burmah alone, but all the lands which sit in darkness, shall see the light of God's uncorrupted Word.

It is worth while to pause at this place to consider for one moment the relations of this Society to the American Baptist Missionary Union. It is well known that the American and Foreign Bible Society had its origin in a necessity cast upon the Baptist denomination to sustain the translations of its own missionaries. The principles of translation which those missionaries had adopted, both as impelled by their own convictions and by the instructions of the Baptist Board of Missions, requiring a fidelity to the divine originals so scrupulous as to permit no words to be transferred which could be intelligibly translated, were unacceptable to those with whom Baptists had hitherto co-operated in the work of Bible distribution, and no resource was left them but to assume and carry on their share in that work upon their own responsibility. There were some differences among Baptists as to the best methods of conducting their Bible operations, but there was a wonderful unanimity among them as to the principles on which such operations were to be based. On this essential point it is hardly too much to say that they uttered one voice. The translations of their missionaries were to be sustained. This was the practical work which summoned the energies of the denomination, and to furnish the necessary means for performing it, was the immediate occasion of the formation of this Society. True, the Constitution of the Society was so framed as to embrace "all lands" within the sphere of its appointed benefactions, and its ministry of love has blessed many at home and abroad for whom our foreign missions have not been designed; but the chiefest work of the Society has been to attend on those missions, and through them to bear the bread of life to the famishing nations. An honorable work this has been, and well fulfilled. At first limited and humble, it has increased in magnitude and importance with the success of missionary labors, and vindicates itself to-day as sustaining no inferior rank. Catholic missions may perform their work of nominal conversion, and establish a commingling of heathenism and Christianity in which it is difficult to determine the larger ingredient of the two, without the written Word; but the higher and more blessed ends of Protestant missions demand a Bible for every Christian convert, and for every family in which it will be read. As converts are multiplied, as Christian schools increase and Christian civilization starts up among the wastes of idolatry and superstition, in that ratio the work of Bible distribution must increase likewise. Its relative importance grows just as the cause of missions succeeds. In the early years of this Society's existence, when the numbers of Christian converts in heathen lands were few, when there were few Christian families, and Christianity was making its first impress on social life, it was a limited sum only, a few thousands per year, which could be advantageously spent in the Bible department of our missionary operations. Now, for a single year $14,750 are imperatively required by the Missionary Union, besides near half that sum, additional, which has been expended by the direct agents of this Society, on fields which the missions of that Union have opened. And this is but an illustration of what is yet to be. If it pleases God to grant success to the labors of our foreign missionaries, the calls for Bibles will continue to increase relatively precisely as they have done, and the work of this Society, as the coadjutor of the Missionary Union, will increase in the same proportion. It is not therefore too much to say, that the friends of the Missionary Union should be friends of this Society likewise,—its supporters the supporters of this Society,—and that the prayers which ascend to heaven for blessings on the one should supplicate blessings upon the other.

It is worthy of being noted, and should serve to awaken gratitude to God, that this Society has been able during the past year to meet the entire demands of the Missionary Union upon its treasury. The sum required, originally fixed at $15,750, but reduced to $14,750 on a re-examination, when first stated seemed a large sum to be raised; and when the numerous other calls upon the Society, and the untoward circumstances of the year were considered, it was a faint encouragement only which could be given, that the money should be forthcoming. But God, who is rich in mercy, was better to us than our fears, and the whole of this large sum, supplying fully the necessities of the Missionary Union for the year, has been appropriated.* The Board do not doubt that the Society will unite with them in congratulations at such an event, and join with them in fervent prayers that the same may be true of the operations of future years.

As already intimated, the Board have appropriated moneys through other channels.

GERMANY.

For many years the operations of the Society in Germany, under the wise and efficient superintendence of the Rev. Mr. Oncken, have been of the happiest and most satisfactory character. It has pleased God to make Mr. Oncken and his excellent co-laborers the means of a religious movement so wide in its range, and so happy in its results, as to merit the title of a new Reformation. Where Popery still prevailed in some sections, and where in others a State religion, declined from the Protestantism of Luther to Rationalism and Infidelity, had abandoned the people to a spiritual darkness not less gross, these heralds of salvation have spread themselves in every direction, preaching the gospel in its simplicity, restoring the ordinances to their primitive form and significance, and scattering broadcast among the people the written Word of God. The hand of the Lord has been with them; thousands have become obedient to the faith; numerous churches have been formed and supplied with pastors; and the Bible has been welcomed with a new love to thousands of homes and hearts. Thus has a new element of spiritual life been planted among the German people, and its growth and development are no longer doubtful. Progress in the same ratio for a few generations would effectually change the character of Germany. It would cover the land with churches,

* In a note acknowledging the receipt of the last appropriation of the year, the Rev. E. Bright, Jun., Corresponding Secretary of the American Baptist Missionary Union, says: "Your favor of the 7th, with the remittance of $5,750, was received in due time. Your Board will accept the thanks of our Executive Committee, for grants within the year, sufficient to meet all the demands, so far as we know, of Scripture translation, printing, and distribution, in missions of the Union to March 31, 1851."

such as once were planted in Judea, and make it as the garden of the Lord.

The part which this Society has borne in that work has been no unimportant one. It has, from year to year, supplied Mr. Oncken with Scriptures as required, and has sustained a large number of colporteurs in circulating them through the German States. These men bear them from house to house, reading and teaching as they go, and this humble instrumentality becomes in numerous cases the power of God unto salvation. The total sum expended by the Society in Scripture operations in Germany, (including $1,500 appropriated to Denmark and Norway,) has been, in fourteen years, $34,957 50. The appropriations of the year now closed, $7,111 76.

In consequence of the absence of Mr. Oncken from the country during several months, and of his sickness on his return, the correspondence of the Society with him has not been as ample as usual, and the details of the Society's operations in Germany which we are able to give, are therefore less numerous than those given in some former reports. The year has been one of marked activity and success.* Bibles and Testaments to the num-

* In a letter dated May 28, 1850, Mr. Oncken says:—"The work of God in which we are engaged, especially the circulation of the Holy Scriptures, is constantly on the increase, and we only need a half a dozen more colporteurs to enter on yet unoccupied fields of usefulness."

In a letter dated June 28, 1850, he says:—

Some of your colporteurs are setting the parts in which they labor into a complete uproar. Brother Schlessier, of Schleswig, has roused the clergy against him and the Baptists to such a degree, that several of these gentlemen have published it to the world, that the Church is in danger from the spread of Baptist sentiments. In the ensuing month there will be a convocation of the Duchy of Schleswig, when, among other things, the question is to be discussed, what means can be most successfully employed to rescue the Church, and to prevent the spread of Baptist principles. We have recently sent a brother, supported by the Northwest Association of our churches, to help brother Schlessier, as he cannot any longer draw the net alone. A little church has already been formed at Schleswig, and the opposition of the clergy is only helping the good work on, as many persons begin to attend the religious service there, who otherwise would most likely never have come. Our indefatigable brother, Feltang, at Oldenburg, in the Grand Duchy of that name, is laboring with great success among Protestants, Roman Catholics and Jews. He has left his isolated abode on the lake, in the Marsh, and has settled at Oldenburg, the capital of the Grand Duchy. As a native of that part of the country, and having prayed for more than thirty years for its spiritual renovation, I rejoice exceedingly that through your colporteurs, and by other faithful brethren, the good seed is now sown far and wide. In the middle part of next month I hope to visit that part. Brother Rittman, your colporteur for Hamburg, is laboring incessantly, and has now commenced to go from house to house, by which many copies of the Holy Scriptures are introduced into the families of the rich. From his journal you will learn a little of his experience in this work. Our Female Missionary Union distributed in May and June 206 copies of the Scriptures.

January 25, 1851, Mr. Oncken writes:—

Our efforts in the work of Bible circulation during the past year have been most encouraging.

I am now printing from the plates of the 64mo Testament, 15,000 copies of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, the Epistle to the Romans, and the Psalms. These I propose to distribute as tracts, stitched singly. They are chiefly designed for Cath-ber of 29,045 copies have been circulated in Germany at the expense of this Society during the year, and if to these are added 2,554 copies circulated by our agents for the Edinburgh Bible Society, the total number of copies is 31,599. It is, too, a gratifying and encouraging fact, as indicating the value placed upon the Bible by the recipients, that very many of them were purchased from the colporteurs. Moneys so received were paid over to Mr. Oncken, and put into use again in the same process of spreading the Word of God. It is difficult to estimate the probable spiritual results of such a year's labor. They can be fully known to Him only who is wonderful in counsel and excellent in working. With our dim vision, however, it is given us to see enough in the results to awaken the heartiest thanksgiving, and to stimulate us to cheerful and increasing labors.

Mr. Oncken has urged increased appropriations in all his letters, and it has been the aim of the Board to meet the wants of his field as far as made known to them. He has expressed a desire to print an edition of 10,000 copies of the Danish New Testament, but the Board have as yet taken no definitive action upon the subject. The ability of the Board to perform this work will depend on the liberality of the friends of the Society. It should be early understood and remembered, that the operations of the Society under Mr. Oncken cannot be sustained effectively during the coming year, without large expenditures. During the past year the work has been facilitated greatly by receipts from the sales of Bibles and Testaments, but this is a resource which is rapidly exhausted, and large replenishments will be indispensable at an early date.

The Board are reluctantly constrained to add, that they know of no authority for statements which have been made in this country, to the detriment of the Society's work in Germany, that Mr. Oncken or his coadjutors had conscientious scruples about circulating Luther's version, and, specially, that the word "taufen," used to denote the ordinance of baptism, was an offense to them, and the occasion of a new translation projected by Mr. Oncken. Mr. Oncken and his coadjutors have circulated thousands of copies of Luther's version, every year for many years, and every letter from Mr. Oncken comes with accounts of the happy spiritual results, and with appeals for more means for the same work. He has, indeed, projected a new translation of the New Testament into the German language, a thing not uncommon in Germany, but his letters to the Society have expressly indicated it as a private enterprise, to be carried olica. These 105,000 single portions of Scripture will cost about £100, and I trust your Board will readily make this sacrifice for the good of many precious souls, who are not able to purchase a New Testament. As my funds are, however, now quite exhausted, I shall be greatly obliged by an early remittance, to enable me to pay colporteurs, &c.

One thousand dollars were sent to Mr Oncken at once, on the receipt of this letter.

forward at his own expense, which he would refrain from requesting the Society to participate in, lest injury might ensue to its established work of circulating the common version of the German people. Mr. Oncken's reason for the project of a new translation, as given in his letters to the Society, is of a general nature. He believes there might be a translation more scrupulously faithful to the original than Luther's, and his purpose is to make a trial with that view. Should his attempt prove successful, unquestionably he would be glad to see the new translation circulated by such patronage, but he would not cast away an experienced and known good for an experiment which might fail. His views are entirely those of a judicious and practical man. As to the use of the word "taufen," he says, in a letter dated Feb. 22, 1850, a part of which was published in last year's Report: "Though the undeniable meaning of 'taufen' is to dip, yet has its misapplication to infant sprinkling greatly weakened its force and meaning. This, however, would not induce me as yet to give it up to the sprinklers. I believe Christ has rather made it our duty, by restoring his long lost ordinance of believer's immersion, to restore the full import of 'taufen.' As Baptists, we speak therefore always of Christ's ordinance as a 'TAUFE,' and of this invention of man as a 'Be-sprengung.'" He communicates substantially the same views in a later letter, dated May 28, 1850.

FRANCE.

An appropriation of $500 to the American Baptist Missionary Union, for the distribution of the Holy Scriptures in France, was made by the Board of the preceding year, and paid over from that year's receipts. Another appropriation of the same amount was made directly to the Rev. T. T. Devan, M.D., by the same Board, and paid from the receipts of the year just now closed. These sums, with a small amount received from the sale of Bibles and Testaments by colporteurs, constitute the full amount of means expended in France during the past year.

A letter was received from the Rev. E. Willard, Missionary of the American Baptist Missionary Union at Douay, some time in the last summer, asking instructions in regard to the expenditure of the money received by him, this being the first appropriation for the distribution of the Scriptures which had reached him from this Society. Instructions were accordingly sent, but the Board have received no intelligence from him since, and are not able therefore to inform the Society of the results of their bounty in that quarter. Mr. Willard seemed greatly pleased with this remembrance of the French mission, and hoped it would be an earnest of future supplies. "Permit me here to express my joy," he says, "on the reception of this token of your liberality, which it would have made my heart glad to receive years ago. The most glorious work that France has of late seen, has been sadly retarded by want of means. One hundred men could be employed in our field, at this moment, to the best advantage, and we have but nine. Pray for us, and do what you can, for I am fully persuaded that, some later, all will have occasion to rejoice who shall have extended a helping hand to us. The work of the Lord is truly wonderful, and overcomes all opposition."

The measures commenced some years ago for securing a revised edition of the New Testament in French are well known to the Society. Such an edition was issued by the Board of the preceding year, as stated in the last Annual Report, and "a number of copies sent to France for distribution and examination." The result has not been such as to warrant the Board in attempting to extend the circulation of this edition. The Corresponding Secretary has placed copies in the hands of several persons competent to judge of its merits, and of the desirableness of circulating it, with a view to the recommending of some course of action in regard to it, but has not been able to arrive at any satisfactory conclusion. The whole question is therefore left for further consideration. Dr. Devan's views upon the subject were indicated in a letter to the Corresponding Secretary, dated Lyons, July 6, 1850. He says:—

"Permit me to ask for instructions as to the disbursement of said bill, [meaning funds received from this Society.] You are aware, doubtless, that I have received a box containing 100 French Testaments issued by the American and Foreign Bible Society. But for reasons which I have already communicated to the Rooms, I should think it unwise to distribute that book until it should have met with some further revision, and this will require considerable time, to do it as it ought to be done. In the mean time what is to be done? If I may be allowed to suggest, it would be that you let me employ the funds at once, in the distribution of the present very good current French versions."

Instructions in compliance with Dr. Devan's suggestion were immediately sent to him, and your funds were thus employed in spreading the Word of Life among the destitute. In the communications received from Dr. Devan from time to time, he has given the most painful views of the spiritual darkness and gloom with which he is surrounded, and has urged in terms of the most earnest importunity your increased liberality on behalf of the French people. From no quarter of the world have the Board received more pressing solicitations, and they are convinced that it is the duty of this Society to do more for France, so soon as its means will allow. They beg to call the attention of the friends of Bible distribution to the wants of a great nation, made superstitious and infidel by a corrupt Church, and doomed to its present or a worse condition, until regenerated by the preaching of a pure gospel, and the distribution of God's uncorrupted Word.

The whole amount appropriated to France during the last fiscal year was $921 51.

ITALY.

• It has been announced in reports of former years, that a translation of the New Testament into the Italian language, for this Society, was in course of preparation by the Rev. Dr. Achilli. This work, which was interrupted by a call for more active labors on the part of Dr. Achilli, during the brief existence of the Roman Republic, when the Bible and preaching were free in Rome, and by his imprisonment in the dungeon of the Inquisition on the reinstatement of Papal authority, when the Bible and preaching were again proscribed, has been resumed since his Providential deliverance, and is now completed. A part of it has been received, and the Epistle of James has been printed for examination as to the general merits of the translation. This, however, has been done within so brief a time that no expressions of opinion have been received by the Board in relation to it. The methods of examination and issue are necessarily made over to the Board of the coming year.

It is manifest that the calls for the distribution of the Scriptures among Italians will increase from year to year, and the friends of the Bible should prepare themselves to engage in the important work. Italians abroad, exiles from Italy for freedom's sake, in many cases have become interested in the Bible with all the warmth of a first love, and the methods by which these exiles communicate with their friends at home, and propagate their opinions, are beyond the control of the spiritual police of Italy, and of the foreign bayonets under which that police is sheltered. It is too late in the world's history to prohibit the circulation of Bibles. The word of God is not bound. Ten thousand avenues open at its approach, that it may have free course and be glorified.

ORISSA.

This interesting portion of India has from time to time received the appropriations of this Society for Bible distribution, and has largely repaid the spiritual cultivation which has been bestowed upon it. The missionaries of the English General Baptist Missionary Society laboring there, among whom are the Rev. Amos Sutton, D.D., and his wife, well known and greatly beloved in this country, are a band of godly and devoted servants of Christ, whose praise is in the churches of every land. Their seat of operations is at the very Mecca of Hindoo idolatry, beneath the shadows of Juggernaut, and there it has pleased God to bring many sons and daughters to himself through their pious instrumentality. A long letter from the Rev. John Buckley, interesting for the spirit which it breathes and for its illustrations of the nature of the work of evangelization there going on, is given in connection with this Report.

During the late visit of the Rev. Dr. Sutton to this country, he made application to the Board for the aid of this Society in a work of Bible distribution to which he proposed to devote himself personally. Dividing Orissa into five parts, it is his plan in the course of five years to traverse the whole country himself, distributing the Word of God, and accompanying the precious gift with suitable oral instructions. The expense to this Society he estimates at from $1,000 to $1,200 per year, or $6,000 for the entire period. It is believed by the Board that no dispensation of funds could be more judicious, and they have accordingly made the first appropriation of $1,000. With the blessing of God, large ultimate harvests may be looked for from such a cultivation.

In this connection it should be stated that the interest in the Orissa mission which has been manifested by this Society, has won for the Society an encouraging measure of regard among the Free Will Baptists of this country, who are in close fraternization with the General Baptists of England. In many cases their pulpits have been open to the agents of this Society, and their contributions have been liberal. The Board believe that this Society would warmly welcome the Free Will Baptist brethren to closer sympathy and co-operation in the work of Bible distribution.

BURMAH.

Under this general head are embraced our Bible operations in the several languages and dialects spoken in Burmah Proper, and in the Provinces of British Burmah. The annual statement of Mr. Thomas S. Ranney, Missionary Printer at Maulmain, has been received, and many interesting items of intelligence are gleaned from it. There have been issued at Maulmain, Tavoy, Mergui, Akyab, and Sandoway, during the last year, (1850,) in Scriptures and parts in of Scriptures, 6,901 copies, in the Burmese, Peguan, Sgau Karen, and Pwo Karen languages. There were printed at Maulmain during the year (1850) 4,000 copies of the New Testament in Sgau Karen, second edition, 12mo, revised by Rev. Messrs. Vinton and Mason; 300 copies of Mr. Mason's English Preface to the same, (pp. 12;) 500 copies of the Gospel by Matthew in Pwo Karen, second edition, 12mo, revised by Mr. Mason; and 5,000 copies each of the Ten Commandments, and How do we know there is an Eternal God? which are Scripture extracts in the Burmese language; making in all, of Scriptures and parts of Scriptures, printed during the year at that press, 14,500 copies.

In regard to the practical work of distribution, the information received from the mission stations is much less ample than it should be. A branch of service so important to the cause of missions as is that which is supplied by this Society, should be furnished with such intelligence as would enable the Society to bear directly to its patrons and friends a full and satisfactory statement of the means and appliances by which the destitute are reached, of the reception which the Scriptures meet when distributed, and of the fruits resulting, so far as these are from time to time developed. The attention of missionaries is respectfully called to this important matter, and amid their many duties they are urged not to overlook this. It will at once be seen that the work of raising funds would be greatly facilitated, if this Society were able to maintain a closer connection between its patrons and the practical work which their benefactions are accomplishing in distant parts of the world. It is not to be understood, however, that this suggestion is intended to have any special application to the mission stations of Burmah. It relates to a lack of intelligence which is felt with reference to our operations generally in connection with foreign missions, and in the hope that the suggestion may lead to the desired improvement.

BURMESE SCRIPTURES.

In regard to the work of distributing the Burmese Scriptures, concerning which there has been so much of solicitude and inquiry in this country, Mr. Ranney's letter furnishes some general statements which will be received with interest. In his letter of January 18, 1851, he says:—

The work of distributing the Burmese Scriptures is performed almost wholly by Burmese Assistant Missionaries, who are daily employed in zayats, in going from house to house, or itinerating in jungles in the interior. These men, as a class, are men of prayer, of advanced piety and approved cleverness,—such men as American Christians would cordially embrace as brethren in Christ. Among the thousands and tens of thousands of Burmese and Talaings, though few have abandoned idolatry and embraced the Christian religion, yet of that few there are a goodly number who may be classed among the first in the land, who command the respect of their countrymen, and are listened to as St. Paul would have been, where the unlearned and ignoble fishermen of Galilee might have been contemned. Having such men for assistants, though sickness and death have reduced our mission circle the past year in a degree unparalleled, there has been no decrease in the circulation of the Scriptures. That the Word of God is exerting a mighty influence in these Provinces is apparent enough, and few men can be met with who would deny that the Sacred Scriptures are the gift of an Eternal God to a fallen world. Reason is convinced, while the will remains unchanged. Unceasing and fervent prayer is needed that the heart may be reached.

Such statements are eminently encouraging, and justify the hope that when in the providence of God Burmah Proper shall be open again to missionary labor, there will not only be a large demand for the Burmese Scriptures, but such spiritual results as will repay a thousand fold the toils of the translator, and the faith and prayers of those who have borne this unspeakable gift to a benighted empire. Should Mr. Kincaid effect a footing at Ava, it is his intention, as mentioned by him to the Corresponding Secretary, to put the Sacred Writings into wide circulation through the commercial and other facilities which are furnished at the great Burman metropolis.

KAREN SCRIPTURES.

In his letter already referred to, Mr. Ranney says:—

The printing of the Sgau Karen New Testament has been completed, and it is in rapid circulation. More than half the entire edition (of 4,000 copies) is already bespoken for the Karens of Burmah Proper and Arracan. The printing of the whole Bible in that language will doubtless be commenced in a few months, either in Maulmain or Tavoy.

The important announcement here made will be received with unmingled satisfaction by the friends of this Society. From the time when the Karen apostle, Ko Thah-byu, awaking to a new life under the regenerating power of the Spirit of God, went forth to the jungles of his countrymen on his missions of mercy, and the dying Boardman, from his couch on the bank of a wild mountain stream, witnessed the baptism of thirty-four Karens as the first fruits of evangelical labors among that interesting people, the triumphs of divine grace, continued gloriously to the present hour, have commanded the admiration of the Christian world. Their language has been reduced to writing; schools have been established among them, some of them of high grade, where young men have been fitted for the service of government, and others, theological schools, where candidates for the ministry have been trained for their work; a population of sixty or seventy thousand has been altogether redeemed from the superstitions of heathenism, and from twelve to fifteen thousand converts, embraced in Christian churches, honor a Christian profession. For such a people the whole Bible has been prepared, that they may read in their own tongue the wonderful works of God. The Board are not in possession of the details of the translation, and are unable to say what part has been borne in the noble work by different hands. In the ultimate revision the Rev. Francis Mason has been for some time engaged, and his known qualifications, both as a translator and as a devoted missionary, promise a version as satisfactory as is attainable thus early in the Christian history of such a people.

The Board have the happiness to inform the Society that the privilege and honor of presenting this first edition of the Karen Scriptures to that people have fallen to the lot of the American and Foreign Bible Society. At the solicitation of the Corresponding Secretary of this Society, a statement of the wants of the American Baptist Missionary Union for the year, in the department of its Bible operations, was furnished at an early period by one of the Secretaries of that body, and it became the purpose and aim of your Board, as expressed in reply, to meet those wants if possible. Particularly was it made an object to meet the large demand of $6,500 on behalf of the Karens, of which sum $3,500 was to be expended in giving to that people the first edition of the whole Bible. By the blessing of God this Society was able to pay the whole $6,500, and the work of printing is doubtless at this moment going on, sustained by your benefactions, on the other side of the world. The great treasure of a whole Bible will soon bless the homes and the hearts of the Karen converts, and their joyful thankgivings and Christian edification will be the ample reward of the friends and patrons of this Society.

The Board regret to say that no intelligence has reached them from the printing establishment at Tavoy, though there is reason to suppose that a letter has been forwarded by Mr. Bennett, and been miscarried or lost on the way.

ASSAM.

From Assam we have no further intelligence than that Mr. Brown has completed and carried through the press a revised (third) edition of the Assamese New Testament. The sum appropriated by this Society for revising, printing and distributing Scriptures in Assam during the last year, was $1,750.

THE TELOGOOS.

From the mission among this people the Board have learned only that since March, 1849, over four thousand copies of portions of Scriptures have been distributed, and are received with avidity by the natives. Very few of them, it is ascertained, are destroyed. The Board have appropriated during the last year, for printing and distributing Scriptures among the Telogoos, $1,000.

SIAM.

The intelligence received by the Board from Siam assumes a character more encouraging than is usual from that land of thick moral night. A new edition of the Siamese New Testament, revised by the translator, the Rev. John Taylor Jones, D.D., has been printed and put in process of circulation. The missionary printer, Mr. J. H. Chandler, testifies to the thoroughness of the revision, and speaks of the edition as an "advance in biblical translations." "The completion of this edition is a source of joy to us all," he says. "The Word of God is the great instrument by which we are to overthrow the false systems of religion which have so long prevailed in these Eastern lands. Buddhism has been the prevailing religion of Siam for hundreds of years. Three thousand six hundred and eighty-three volumes of Buddhist Scriptures have already been translated into the Siamese language, and the people have drunk in the system to its very dregs. But, alas! instead of exalting them, it has only sunk them in ignorance, vice, superstition, oppression and misery in a multitude of forms in this life, and everlasting punishment in the world to come.

"To cure these numerous and terrible evils," he continues, "God has in these last days sent his servants into this land, and through his blessing has enabled them to acquire the language and translate His Word. Life and immortality are now brought to light. A way of salvation through the vicarious sufferings and death of the Son of God is made known, bringing peace on earth and good will to men; assuring all who believe and accept this salvation, freedom from sin and its consequences, and eternal happiness in heaven. It should be the constant and fervent prayer of every Christian that the distribution of the leaves of the tree of life among this people may be for the healing of the nation."

The Board learn from the same letter that Dr. Jones was then (Aug. 3, 1850) making arrangements to translate the Old Testament, and hoped to have Genesis ready for the press by the close of the year. "It seems desirable," he says, "to have Dr. Jones employed in biblical translations; and so long as the demand for books continues, it becomes us to circulate the Word of God as extensively as possible. We have at present little else to distribute, and full one third of the present edition of the New Testament has already been given away. Should we travel and distribute as much the coming cold season as we have been accustomed to do, we should not have a single book left."

In the letter of Mr. Chandler, and in Dr. Jones's Preface annexed, both of which are communicated herewith, will be found an interesting account of the edition of the New Testament just published, and of biblical labors in Siam generally. The Board have appropriated during the year, for the further prosecution of the work of translating and printing the Scriptures in Siamese, $1,200.*

CHINA.

When it is considered that a version of the Scriptures prepared for the Chinese, renders the Word of God accessible to a portion of the human family larger by far than any other portion reading one language, and that this immense population are in certain ways and to certain extents a civilized and refined people, the work of a Bible Society in relation to such a field becomes one of transcendent importance. It is much to be regretted that the biblical labors of former years by missionaries and translators have been so imperfect and unsatisfactory. Perhaps, however, such a fact should occasion no surprise. It is comparatively an easy thing to translate the Bible into a language like our own, spoken by a people whose religious ideas have been for centuries in the general line of its teachings, but another and an immensely laborious thing to translate that Bible into the language of a people whose religious ideas of every grade and character are essentially different, and whose language itself is one of the most peculiar and arbitrary to be found in the world. Such difficulties can be overcome only by long and patient labor, and by the action

* After the preparation of this Report, the painful intelligence reached this country, that the mission premises and property at Bangkok, including the type foundry, the printing office, and the larger part of the edition of the New Testament above alluded to, have been destroyed by fire. Mr. Chandler is understood to be on his way to the United States to procure means for repairing the loss, which is estimated at from $10,000 to $15,000. By a vote of the Missionary Union, special collections for this purpose are to be taken in the churches, which it is to be hoped will be liberal and sufficient; and it should be further remembered by the patrons of this Society that increased appropriations for Scripture operations in Siam will be rendered necessary by this calamity.

Dr. Jones's Preface and Mr. Chandler's letter will be found at the conclusion of this Report.

and reaction of many minds. That the difficulties are developed and that progress is made, are in themselves large attainments. In this state the work of translation in China is found at the present time. The crisis, it may be hoped, is passed, and future advances will unquestionably be more rapid.

With the associated labors of the Committee at Shanghai, and the difficulties which have arisen in that body on the rendering of the Hebrew and Greek words employed in the Bible for God, gods and spirit, this Society has not been specially connected. The controversy alluded to has been one of great moment, and it is a gratifying fact that in some of its features it has developed an adherence to the principles of translation which gave rise to this Society. The refusal to use the transferred terms Aloho or Eloah for God, rests upon the same grounds on which the Baptist missionaries refused to transfer baptizo to Eastern versions. "It conveys no thought to the Chinese mind, and must be explained by some other intelligible word or phrase. But if such an expression can be found, it would undoubtedly be better to employ it at once than to use it merely as an exegetical medium, whereby to interpret a foreign term transferred into the language."* This is essentially what was affirmed in the Salem resolutions of the American Baptist Board of Foreign Missions, passed in 1833.† On the question agitated in China the Baptist missionaries are understood to be agreed among themselves, and to concur in opinion with the majority of the Protestant missionaries of that Empire.

The work of translation in China, under the patronage of this Society, has been carried forward in an independent, but not unfraternal, way, by missionaries of ample competency, and their progress and success thus far have been in an eminent degree encouraging. Portions of Scripture have been put in circulation with happy results, but Bible operations in China remain still so much in the line of translation only that few incidents are furnished of general interest. These incidents will begin to appear when the work of translation shall have been accomplished, and * Report of the Committee on Versions, of the American Bible Society, adopted unanimously by the Board of Managers, Dec. 5, 1850.

† These resolutions were in the following words:—

Resolved, That the Board feel it to be their duty to adopt all prudent measures to give to the heathen the pure Word of God in their own languages; and to furnish their missionaries with all the means in their power, to make their translations as exact a representation of the mind of the Holy Spirit as may be possible.

Resolved, That all the missionaries of the Board, who are or who shall be engaged in translating the Scriptures, be instructed to endeavor, by earnest prayer and diligent study, to ascertain the precise meaning of the original text; to express that meaning as exactly as the nature of the language into which they shall translate the Bible will permit; and to transfer no words which are capable of being translated.

colporteurs and teachers traverse the country freighted with the Word of Life. For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater; so shall His Word be that goeth forth out of his mouth; it shall not return to Him void, but it shall accomplish that which he pleases, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto he sent it. Those that bear it shall go out with joy and be led forth with peace; the mountains and the hills shall break forth before them into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.

At Hong Kong there have been printed during the past year, 3,000 copies of the Acts, translated by the Rev. William Dean, and 3,000 copies of the Gospel of John, translated by the Rev. J. Goddard. A new translation of Genesis, by Mr. Dean, with notes, has been prepared. Of this, 3,000 of the first six chapters, and 2,100 of the six next succeeding, have been printed as tracts, and many of them circulated. Over 500 copies of Mr. Dean's Matthew, with notes, have been distributed.

At Ningpo there have been printed during the year 4,000 copies of Genesis in 8vo, and 1,200 copies have been issued from the depository; 10,000 copies (one half for brethren at Shanghai) of the first five chapters of Genesis, with notes, have been published in a tract, and 400 copies issued from the depository at Ningpo; 10,000 copies of the first chapter of Genesis (one half for Shanghai) have likewise been published in a small tract, with a few introductory explanations and brief notes; and of these, 2,000 copies have been issued from the Ningpo depository.* There have also been issued for distribution 127 copies of Matthew, 9 copies of Acts, 110 copies first five chapters of Genesis, 8vo, and 110 copies of the first six chapters of the same book.

The appropriations made by this Society to the American Baptist Missionary Union, during the year just closed, for carrying forward Bible operations in China, amount to $3,000.

* "These portions of Scripture," says the Rev. Mr. Goddard, (Ningpo, May 23, 1850,) "fitted to direct the minds of the Chinese to the Creator, the only true God, we distribute freely, and hope they may produce their effect on the mass of the people. The Chinese have no idea of a Creator; they do not ascribe the work of creation to their gods, and, indeed, the common people have almost no idea as to the origin of things. Still they feel the force of the question, Who made these heavens and earth, the sun, moon, and all things? They see that it is a proper question, and it furnishes a most palpable criterion whereby to distinguish the true God from false ones. Hence these most early portions of sacred history are peculiarly suited to the present circumstances of these heathen people."

HOME OPERATIONS.

The history, the condition, and the prospects of the Home Department of the Society's operations, have engaged the diligent attention of the Board during the entire year. They have endeavored to conduct its affairs with economy, and, by attentive study of its details, to prepare the way for any improvements in methods of business which might seem to be required. They have been able to arrive at certain conclusions, in which they believe the Society will concur, viz. : That the stock should be reduced to the actual necessities of annual sales ; that it should consist of such varieties only as are in positive demand ; that Bibles and Testaments should be procured by manufacture from plates on hand, or by purchase, according as the one method or the other may be cheapest ; and that in the manufacture of Bibles and Testaments, contracts for editions, bound and delivered, should be preferred to contracts for paper printing and binding separately. They are agreed likewise in the opinion, that the Department of Donations and the Department of Publication and Sales should be kept entirely distinct ; and they have accordingly directed the opening of the accounts for the new year under such a plan. By this method, all donations to the Society will go for the purposes of practical benevolence, and the department of publication and sale will be, as its title imports, a commercial department, whose actual losses and gains will become apparent. The property now invested in that department will, it is believed, furnish the necessary capital for its business, and the opportunity of proving whether such a department can be made to sustain itself. The only practical difficulty in pursuing the plan relates to the division of expenses. This question, however, has engaged the attention of the Board, and general rules have been fixed. It will be observed, that under this plan, whatever appropriations are made to the destitute in our own country will be charged to the Department of Donations. That is to say, if the Society makes grants of Bibles and Testaments to the destitute at home, it will do it on the same grounds, and from the same resources, as in the case of appropriations of money for the benefit of the destitute abroad ; and the Department of Donations will pay into the Department of Publication and Sales the cost of all appropriated books. The latter department would soon be exhausted of its resources, if the former might draw upon it for appropriations without making payment.

This plan of operations is adopted on the supposition that the Society will continue its Home operations. The question of continuance was referred by the Society, at its last annual meeting, to a large and respectable Committee, and the Board of Managers would by no means anticipate the views which that Committee may regard it as their duty to present to the Society. They feel bound, however, to express their unanimous and anxious conviction, that the Home operations of the Society should be continued; and that the remedy for any evils which exist in connection with those operations should be sought in improvements of practical administration.

In some cases the calls for appropriations have been of the most urgent character, and instances of appropriations have been attended with happy results. The Home field, though shared by many laborers, presents demands which all laborers combined fail to meet. Our immense domain is filling up, not by natural increase only, but by unparalleled immigration. The foreign population which comes in upon us, so far as it is Catholic, comes without Bibles, and without Bibles will remain, till Protestant benevolence tenders the Word of Life. Every consideration of patriotism and religion requires it at the hands of all who love our institutions, and the Book which has made them what they are, and of all who love the souls of men, that they bear a suitable part in dispensing the heavenly gift. In the great Central Valley, in the distant States rising on the Pacific shore, in the strange interior recently brought within our borders by conquest, and even here in the Atlantic States, beneath the very shadow of our churches, are to be found all forms of spiritual destitution, the grossest superstition, and bold and vaunting irreligion. It may be a limited share only in the work of Bible distribution on this field which will fall to this Society, but certainly the contributors to this Society will not be content to bear no part in such a work.

The Board are happy to announce, that by a recent arrangement with the American Tract Society 1,000 German Bibles, published by this Society, will be put in circulation by the colporteurs of that noble institution. These Bibles are furnished at $1,000, and of this sum this Society makes a grant of $250, to meet the necessities of such as may be too poor to purchase. Bibles thus circulated go accompanied with the instructions of godly and self-denying men; and the harvests which shall spring up from such sowing eternity alone can disclose. The promises of God insure an ample reward. The hope is entertained that this movement may prove the pledge of long and happy co-operation in the same direction.

PUBLICATIONS.

The number of copies of the Sacred Scriptures published at the Depository during the year has been 34,087. These, added to those of former years, make the whole number 368,414.

ISSUES.

The issues of the year have been 10,940 Bibles, and 28,078 Testaments, making a total of 39,018.

BOOKS ON HAND.

There were on hand at the Depository, at the close of the fiscal year, 6,494 Bibles, and 6,388 Testaments; total, 12,882. Of these, 681 are German, 1,600 are Welsh, 467 are French, and 71 Italian.

LIFE MEMBERS AND DIRECTORS.

Four hundred and twenty-five Members for Life have been added during the year, and eighteen Directors. The Life Members and Directors have received from the Depository during the year 884 Bibles, and 1,842 Testaments; and the total value of their quotas received at the Depository, and at other places, has been $1,089 41.

It is to be feared that the purpose of this grant by the Society is not in all cases understood by the recipients. It is not the purpose to pay back to Life Members and Life Directors a certain per centage on the money which they have paid into the treasury of the Society, but to enable the Life Members and Life Directors to aid the Society in supplying the destitute with the Word of God. The books which they receive are placed in their hands to be circulated among the needy. Grants of high-priced books, or of books for complimentary presents to friends, are not designed; and it is to be hoped that calls for such purposes will be in all cases avoided.

RECEIPTS, AND DISBURSEMENTS.

The receipts for the year, including a balance of $389 68 from last year's account, have been $45,373 41. The disbursements have been $45,729 88. The balance due the Treasurer at the end of the year was $356 47. By comparing the Treasurer's account with that of the previous year, it will be seen that the amount received from sales of Bibles and Testaments was increased by the sum of $386 91; that the amount from legacies was increased by the sum of $3,319 60; that the amount from donations from churches, individuals, &c., was increased by the sum of $3,888 34; and that the amount received from donations from Auxiliaries was diminished by the sum of $5,916 82,—a fact which is to a large degree explained by the withdrawal of the auxiliaryship of the Kentucky and Foreign Bible Society. The resignation of four agents, the Rev. Dr. Maclay, and Messrs. J. Farquharson, L. Moore, and G. Williams, rendered extensive changes necessary in this department of service, and in some cases the employment of individuals for a short time. These circumstances slightly increased the amount paid in salaries to agents, the difference between the two years being $165 01. The total receipts from all sources exceed those of the preceding year by the sum of $3,990 67.

It is gratifying to observe that so many of the departed friends of this Society have remembered it in the final disposition of their worldly possessions. Themselves passing to the eternal world in the hope which the gospel reveals, they would still communicate to others the inestimable blessing. In the case of Mr. Thomas Burton, late of Warren, Me., the legacy, amounting to $1,000, was left with the provision that the principal should be invested, and the interest only be used, for ever. In conformity with this provision, the Board have sought a safe investment, on bond and mortgage, at seven per cent., and the writings in the case have been duly executed.

The Board would take this occasion to say to those who may contemplate similar remembrances of the Society, that their benevolent intentions may be frustrated, without proper attention to details in the solemn instruments in which they dispense their estates. The name of this Society might be supposed to be well known among its friends, but it is found not unfrequently misstated in wills; and in all such cases there is liability to doubt and controversy, and perhaps to loss. A little care would obviate every difficulty, and secure, beyond question, the fulfilment of the testator's intention. A form in blank is always inserted upon the cover of the Annual Report.

CONCLUSION.

In concluding this summary of the year's operations, the Board cannot refrain from expressing their profound regret that they have found the work of the Society obstructed by misapprehensions concerning the force and intent of the doings of the last annual meeting in relation to a revision of the English Scriptures. These misapprehensions the Board have, to a certain extent, labored to remove, not at all by embarking in controversial discussions or appeals, but by explanations which they believed to be reasonable, and which they hoped would be satisfactory. Something, they are assured, has been gained by these explanations, but the objection has been raised, that it is the Board only, and not the Society, which has spoken, and that the explanations therefore have no authoritative force. To remove this objection, the Board would here refer to this point, and submit their views to the Society,

The Constitution of this Society proposes as its object "to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands." The circumstances of the rise of the Society, and all its history, however, prove beyond question that it proposes this object on certain principles, well defined and understood; viz., that all mankind are entitled to receive, and that it is the duty of those who enjoy the precious possession to give, the Bible fully and faithfully translated; so that every man may read in his own tongue, wherein he was born, the complete record of God's revealed will. It is not expected that this Society, either now or at any future time, will actually reach all mankind with its benefactions, for, according to the Constitution, its object is only "to aid" in the work; but it is expected that whatever it does in this great and noble enterprise will be done with a careful regard to the principles here stated. Hence the excellence of the versions which it circulates becomes to the Society a matter of just solicitude; and accordingly, at the very meeting of the Society at which it was determined to make the field of the Society's operations as boundless as the world, we find significant resolutions relating to this point:—

1. Resolved, That this Society will expect of their Board of Managers, in carrying into effect the second article of the Constitution, ["It shall be the object of the Society to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands,"] the most sedulous care in patronising such versions only of the Sacred Scriptures into the languages of the heathen as have been or may be faithfully made, and are approved by competent examiners.

2. Resolved, That in the distribution of the Scriptures in the English language, they will use the commonly received version, until otherwise directed by the Society.

These resolutions, it will be seen, covered the ground of versions in "the languages of the heathen" and the version to be distributed in our own tongue. For some reason, no allusion was made to any language not heathen, excepting the English. It is a fair inference, however, that the principles governing in the specified cases respectively, would properly govern in corresponding cases not specified, as they might arise.

No practical difficulty or misunderstanding under these general rules has ever arisen, except in the case of the English Scriptures. In "the sedulous care" exercised in relation to versions in heathen languages, there has been unanimous concurrence. The resolution pertaining to the English Scriptures was, as any specific resolution in such case should be, either in form or fact, qualified and temporary. There were special reasons in this case why it should be so in form as well as fact. There had been fears widely expressed at that time that it was the purpose of leading brethren in this Society to bring out a new English version under its patronage, and these brethren now affirm that this was their purpose. Under such circumstances, a resolution defining a present rule of action, and waiving the disputed question in such form as to involve no sacrifice of principle, was undoubtedly a wise course for brethren desiring to work together. For many years it was the bond of union. Fears were allayed on the one hand, while no man's hopes were crushed on the other. The question was surrendered to the course of Providence.

At the annual meeting two years ago, the resolution restricting the Board to the circulation of the commonly-received version in English was rescinded, and measures looking to a new or corrected English version were immediately taken in the Board. The public announcement of this fact became at once the occasion of revived fears, and of discussions which pervaded the whole body of members and patrons of the Society. There was unquestionably point and severity given to these discussions in many instances, by the feeling that the movement involved a violation of pledges given in divers forms, and in some cases with the understood sanction of the Board of Managers. It is not strange that in the heat of such a controversy, with few attempts at explanation, language was sometimes used without those kindly qualifications which soothe the heart and rekindle love. In how far there was ground for the understanding of pledges, it is not now perhaps material to say. Official documents exist which are certainly liable to such construction, whether so intended or not; and that they were actually so construed, and that in undefinable ways such understanding did very generally arise, are simple matters of fact. Under such circumstances, your Board believe that the reasons which required and justified the original restriction more strongly demanded a similar measure now. These were not the indications of a providential call for a departure from the former policy of the Society; and to leave the question again to Providence, on the same grounds as before, was, as your Board believe, the true line of duty. Thus, as then, brethren might labor together so far as agreed, waiving the question in debate; or if to any the correction of the English Scriptures seem a duty too imperative and immediate to be postponed, such a work might be the separate and distinct one of all disposed to join in it, while still the ranks of this Society should be unbroken, and the whetted sword fall upon the "King's enemies" only.

Was this, in fact, what was done by the society last year? Clearing our way through all the husks and rinds of the transaction, and seeking studiously the real intentions which the resolves of last year were designed to express, do we find substantially a renewal of the restriction of 1838? Such is the belief of your Board; and this interpretation they accordingly communicated to the members and friends of the Society, in the Periodical Paper of October last. To that paper reference is here made.*

* The action taken at the late meeting of the Society (1850) assumed the form which was naturally occasioned by the circumstances of the case. At the business meeting preliminary to the public anniversary of 1849, a meeting usually attended, and in that case actually attended, by but few persons, (the number is variously esti-

It has been stated that this Society, by the resolves in question, has put its seal upon the present version as too sacred and perfect for amendment, and even that it has virtually determined "to stereotype" its errors and obscurities. Your Board have seen nothing in the action of the Society (estimated at from thirty to one hundred,) the restrictive resolution of 1838 was rescinded, with no previous notice to the Society, with an opportunity for but a few minutes' discussion upon so grave a matter, and by a small vote. The announcement was received by the denomination with surprise, and the question whether any action, and, if any, what action would be taken by the Board under such a vote, became immediately, in many minds, one of anxious interest. There was, however, no occasion for protracted suspense. At the next monthly meeting of the Board, held June 6, 1849, a special committee of five was raised to inquire into the expediency of publishing a New Testament altered from the common version. The views of this committee soon became known, and two reports, a majority report, in favor of proceeding to publish a "corrected" version, on the authority of the Board, and before the next annual meeting of the Society, and a minority report dissenting, were expected. The presenting of these reports, however, was waived, and after the lapse of several months, during which time there had been several discussions of the question, the differences of opinion which existed in the Board were made the ground of "awaiting the instructions of the Society." The Board took no further action on the subject. Individuals, however, occupying the highest executive offices of the Society, on their own responsibility, and as their own work, proceeded to the preparation of a version of the New Testament, "with several hundred emendations," and in an address to the members of the Society, in advocacy of the principles on which it had been constructed, gave the information that the stereotype plates of this version would be offered to the Society as a donation at the next annual meeting.

Under these circumstances the Society met. At nearly the same stage in the preliminary proceedings at which the restrictive resolution of 1838 had been rescinded in 1849, the following resolution was presented:—

Resolved, That this Society, in its issues and circulation of the English Scriptures, be restricted to the commonly received version, without note or comment.

In entertaining this resolution, instead of waiting for the presentation of the plates, the Society made an election to which it was entirely competent. Those who brought forward the resolution, it is well known, gave it the particular form which it assumed, for reasons which were declared in the course of the discussion. They inserted the words "without note or comment," because editions of the Scriptures had been published, bearing the imprint of the Society, which departed in several particulars from the received English text.* They made the form unqualified as to character, because, not being a fundamental law, it could be modified under any providential change of circumstances, and because the words, "until otherwise directed by the Society," in the resolution of 1838, had been construed as involving permission to proceed to a revision whenever the resolution should be rescinded, without waiting for any further action by the Society.

These circumstances being taken into account, the resolution of 1850 means precisely the same thing which the Society proclaimed in the resolution of 1838. The * Several members of the Board, who were members likewise in previous years, desire it to be noted in this place, that they had no knowledge whatever of these variations until public attention was called to them, and that they believe no authority for them ever to have been given by the Board.

ciety which is justly susceptible of such an interpretation, and they believe that the Society will concur with them in meeting it with an unqualified disclaimer. They neither regard the version as without faults, nor have they any desire to perpetuate its faults. As a translation, it is a hu-one resolution has the same force precisely with the other. As the resolution of 1838 was intended, not to violate the Society's fundamental law as to "faithful versions," but to indicate the Society's estimation of the English version, as suitable for circulation,—so the resolution of 1850 is no violation of the fundamental law, but a simple indication that the Society has not changed its mind as to the character of the English version. It regards it now as it did then, not as a perfect translation, but as one of substantial and distinguished merit, which has been, and remains yet, a safe guide to the knowledge of God's will, and worthy to be circulated among all that speak our tongue. It holds it in no superstitious veneration, but approves it as having borne the tests of time and criticism, as having been the solace of our individual hearts, the light of our homes, the statute book of our churches, and the glory of our civilization. It cleaves to it as the common bond of our English Christendom, an antidote to our tendencies to divergence and division, and a pledge of returning union among those who love Christ and revere his laws. For such reasons the Society adheres to the excellent common version,—because it is excellent, because it is common. Nor in this does the Society set itself against the possibilities or possible necessities of the future. It may be among the designs of Providence to combine good men in the work of revision; there may be fruits of higher Biblical learning and higher spiritual religion yet to be bestowed upon the Church, which are to come to us in this form. All good men will accept such gifts with joy. If "God has new light to break forth from his Word," it will not be difficult to detect its presence. The sheep of Christ will hear Christ's voice. When that day comes, a day which many expect, which some long for, then this Society may adapt itself to the new developments of Providence. Circulating our present version for the reasons that it is excellent and common, it may take another when these same reasons apply to another; when another has passed the necessary tests; when it is approved as more excellent and equally received as common. This Society would neither anticipate the designs of Providence, nor refuse acquiescence in them as they are developed. It would take up and perform from day to day the work of practical benevolence; never engaging in questions which gender strife, but applying itself at all times diligently to the work of circulating the Scriptures more widely "in all lands," on the principles originally assumed. The Board believe this to be a work which a benevolent piety will best approve, and in this work they hope to see the Society blessed with the approbation of God.

In this view of the restrictive resolution of 1850, is to be found the true explanation of the resolution which accompanied it. That resolution was in these words:—

Whereas, by the Constitution of this Society, its object is "to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands," therefore,

Resolved, That it is not the province and duty of the American and Foreign Bible Society to attempt on their own part, or to procure from others, a revision of the commonly received English version of the Sacred Scriptures.

It is here recited that the business of this Society is to CIRCULATE the Scriptures. It is not, therefore, its duty to engage in translation, or in revision, which is virtually the same thing, unless the circumstances of particular cases require it, which, in the judgment of the Society, they do not in the case of the English Scriptures. In some cases it is necessary to translate in order to circulate. In such cases there can be no doubt of the Society's duty. But in the case of the English Scriptures, man production, and bears the marks of human infirmity; and this would be true of any version which might be made. It is a translation of many and established excellences. Its merits place it above the reach of sweeping attacks, at the same time that its defects are the just subjects of Christian and scholarly criticism. It deals with the highest truths, and should be handled with solemn reverence. It is the treasured repository of the faith of millions, as it has been the guide to heaven of many more millions already departed in hope; and all changes of its language should be well considered, conceived and sustained in the spirit of meekness, and at the farthest possible remove from the censorship or interests of sects and parties. That the version will always endure in its present form, no man has the right to say; it may please God to open methods by which it shall be improved; and such manifestations of His will should command, and will receive, the acquiescence of His people. It is the interest of all to possess in the highest perfection the sacred oracles, and the duty of all to look with kindness and hope upon all true progress in Biblical translation. It would be a sad and reprehensible dereliction from principle and privilege to bind the world to present attainments in sacred learning, or to prohibit for ever the application of that learning to the state of our common version.

But supposing the time for attempted revisions of the common version of the Scriptures to have arrived, and that the Holy Spirit, from whom we have the inestimable gift of a divine revelation, is calling many hearts to the work, it may still be a question whether this Society should take up and carry forward such an undertaking. There are limitations to the duties and responsibilities of societies, as there are to the no such necessity exists. We have a version entirely suitable for circulation, and therefore circulation, and not translation, is our only duty in the premises. What is here intended may be illustrated, to a certain extent, by the case of the Burman version. Such a version is in existence, ready and waiting for circulation. Faultless it unquestionably is not, but it is, as a whole, faithful and approved. It is in the hands of wise and good men, who understand its merits and defects, and who, though anticipating revisions and improvements in future years, regard it as entirely suitable, under present circumstances, for distribution among the benighted and perishing. Now, in such a state of affairs, what is the duty of this Society? Turning to the Constitution, we find that its object is the "wider circulation" of the Scriptures, and is not translation, therefore, in such cases, rather its duty than translation? The circumstances of the case do not require translation in order to circulation, and therefore translation is not the duty of the Society in the case of the Burman Scriptures. This is really the argument of the resolution under notice. The duty is the same here, and for precisely the same reason. * * * Under such circumstances, the practical work of giving the Word of God to the destitute is the urgent necessity and the only duty. This is the true significance of the preamble and resolution under notice. It has its force as a rule of administration in existing facts. It is not intended in any sense to be a departure from the principles of the Society, but to express the application of those principles to the line of duty in a particular case.—Periodical Paper, A. and F. B. S., October, 1850.

duties and responsibilities of individuals. The great Commission itself is addressed to every disciple of Christ, and yet it is not the duty of every one to become a missionary. Each one is bound to bear such part in the work as in his circumstances may be within his power. This Society is by its Constitution bound "to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands." It assigns to itself not the whole of this work, but the duty of aiding in this work, and the practical sphere in which it shall operate is left to be determined by circumstances. In the nature of the case, it must leave many things undone. What it does it must do well, but it is neither within its power, nor its duty, nor its responsibility, to do all things which are embraced in giving the Bible to the world.

Thus, against this Society's engaging in the work of revising the English Scriptures, there are divers and strong objections. Its members are not agreed as to the duty, and would differ widely on the scope and character of the revision, if it were attempted. The attempt would wound the hearts of vast numbers scattered over the country, who regard the Society as under virtual pledges to bear no part in such a work. Their confidence lost to this Society would soon be lost to others, and a general injury to the cause of religion, of most painful character, would ensue. Besides this, there are among the best learned, whose learning entitles their opinions on such points to respect, the gravest doubts as to whether a Society whose business it is to circulate the Scriptures in our own language, could under any circumstances engage with propriety in the work of English revision. A Society engaging in this revision, and with circulation in view as the ultimate purpose, is in danger of anticipating the merits of its work, and of bringing the weight of its influence and authority to bear in circulating a version which, if left to the dispassionate judgment of the world, might be little esteemed. Such persons believe the revision of our version, whenever attempted, to be the proper work of a few Christian scholars, shut away from the din of controversy, in calm converse with the God of the Bible, supported in their work by the munificence of individuals, or of an association of individuals for that purpose only. Their work, when finally committed to the public judgment, say these persons, should be left, under the safe guidance of Divine Providence, to find its true position, and perform its allotted mission. If it should be indeed a better version, they maintain that it would work its way gradually into the ascendancy, and that, when once it should have commanded general confidence, it might with all propriety be circulated by Bible Societies, according to the demand for it. Such persons refer to the manner in which our present received version came into the ascendancy, as illustrating their views; for that version, say they, when prepared, was never enforced by authority, but was published side by side with earlier versions, until its merits had excluded all rivals, and won for itself the field. Others still, favoring a new version, desire a preliminary correspondence of Bible Societies and Universities, and in some way a union of all denominations of Christians in making a version which should be worthy the confidence of all. Such a union for such a purpose, they suppose, might require a considerable period for its formation, but they believe the object worthy of the effort.

Now, under the pressure of objections arising from these diverse and irreconcilable opinions, would it be wise, would it be likely to eventuate in good to the cause of religion, for this Society to take up and prosecute the revision of the English Scriptures? Within the broad purpose "to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands," is there not enough of labor, which is less questionable and more urgent, to occupy the means and energies of this Society? Is there not enough in the calls of perishing millions to demand of us to abstain from questions which gender strife, and give our united strength to the practical work of dispensing to the dying the bread of life?

The Board believe that views like these have been the governing ones with this Society, and furnish the true interpretation of the resolutions of the last annual meeting. Far be it from this Society to decline from that high reverence for the Word of God, as revealed in the original Scriptures, and that profound sense of the claims of all mankind for a full and complete translation of those originals, which first gave the Society existence, which have won for it the love of its thousands of patrons, and which will make it honorable in the history of the world's evangelization. Never was needle to the pole more true than this Society to its principles; nor will it ever falter from any part to which it may properly be called in fulfilling practically the object stated in its Constitution.

With these views, your Board have been unable to see any just cause for a division among brethren who for these many years have been the friends of this Society. Do any desire a revision of the English Scriptures? This Society places no obstacles in their way. Let such a work be an independent work, to stand or fall on its own merits, and let brethren who are agreed in principle go together in details so far as agreed. Your Board believe this the apostolic rule, and that the adoption of it would be the harbinger of peace and concord to our churches, and a blessing to a dying world. "Let there be no strife between me and thee, for we be brethren." We are agreed in our labors for the destitute abroad, and even in regard to labors at home we are agreed in so far as this, that our common version should be diligently circulated until, in the providence of God, it shall be superseded by a better. In these labors there is ample room and imperative call for the most enlarged benevolence; and your Board believe it should not be the fault of this Society if all do not rally upon this common ground. Believing this, they have felt it to be their duty to suggest the tender of this branch of peace, in the earnest hope that it may be accepted. If it is declined, you will have the consciousness of an honest and earnest effort in the right direction. You will proceed to the accustomed work of the Society with the feeling that, if obstacles meet you, and you are unable in consequence to do what you would to give the lamp of life to souls in darkness, they are obstacles for which you are not responsible; and you will be able with stronger faith to cast your care upon Him who works mysteriously, according to his own will, and brings forth light from the midst of gloom. If this branch of peace is accepted, your Board recommend an administration of the Society carefully adjusted to such relations, which shall inspire mutual confidence by illustrating the spirit of fraternal love. They believe that such acceptance would have the approbation of God, and that this approbation would be attested by enlarged prosperity and usefulness.

Is it said that, in all this, this Society concedes nothing? Certainly it will not be required that it should concede any thing from its great object, "to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands." From this it cannot decline. But it comes to old friends temporarily estranged, and in the spirit of generous conciliation offers explanations, and tenders confidence and love. It comes to invite them to co-operation in the essential things on which we are agreed, and to assure them of non-interference on the single labor about which we differ. It declares our fast adherence with them to the principles which gave rise to this Society, and to ask only that on the question of the practical application of those principles in a single case, none shall coerce the consciences of their brethren, or suffer prejudices or reproach for differences of opinion. On such grounds there may assuredly be union, which will commend itself to Christian hearts.

The Board of Managers here yield the trust which has been confided to them, invoking the Divine blessing upon the future labors of the Society.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Members of the American and Foreign Bible Society.—Personally, and on behalf of the Board, I tender to you, my brethren, affectionate and Christian greeting. Through the mercies of God and the favor of his kind providence, I am permitted to congratulate you upon the auspicious circumstances under which we have convened to celebrate the fourteenth anniversary of the American and Foreign Bible Society. They are such as should awaken our grateful sensibility, and call for our devout acknowledgment of the Divine goodness. The entire retrospect has been so marked with the gracious interpositions of his hand, as to furnish the clearest evidence that God approves of our work, and cheers us onward with the smiles of his favor. To the circumstances under which the Society entered upon the last year, I need not advert; neither the place nor occasion would sanctify censure, or render controversy graceful or appropriate; and I would ever cherish in my heart the most sincere regard for my brethren from whom I am constrained to differ in judgment. It is sufficient for us this day to know that God has been better to us than our fears; that he has dispelled the clouds and shone forth upon us in the gracious indications of his providential favor. It will be seen from our Reports that the liberal benevolence of the churches has placed in our treasury the means of responding to every claim from abroad, and all that was requisite for ordinary home distribution. While, therefore, some of our resources have been diminished by mistaken apprehensions and by the social and political agitations of the times, and a less amount, for that reason chiefly, derived from auxiliaries, our receipts exceed those of the preceding year by near $4,000.

This result is beyond our most sanguine expectations, and claims our grateful praise to the Author of all good; and it is the more gratifying, as it presents the strong practical evidence that the confidence of the churches has not been disturbed by the shocks we have sustained, nor their zeal in this noble and holy cause in the slightest degree abated. Especially would we discover and gratefully acknowledge the Divine hand. Obscure as are our perceptions of the Infinite One, whose ways and works and glories are "past finding out," yet may we discover something of the principle upon which this gracious interposition proceeds. God loves and honors his own Word, that comes forth from the inspiration of his Holy Spirit, that makes known the glory of his perfections, and the clemency, righteousness, and grace of his wise and holy government; and he will vindicate its truth and purity, not in the storm and tempest of impassioned conflict, but in the veiled and tranquil, yet resistless movements of his sovereign and almighty hand! He, whose gracious voice is heard, not in the whirlwind, nor in the earthquake, nor in the fire, but in the gentle whispers of his Spirit communicating with man, when, in calm and solemn thought, the heart is humble and passion still, cheers us with the assurances of his faithful Word: "Fear not, I am with thee; be not dismayed, I am thy God; I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee." In conducting the operations of the Society during the past year, the Board have not, for a moment, supposed that the principles that should govern their action are at all doubtful; a plain path had been previously prepared before them, clearly indicating their course. They believed that they understood the will of their constituency, so emphatically expressed at their last anniversary, and it has been their earnest desire to execute it with single-hearted fidelity. They believed that they understood the exclusive object contemplated at our organization, for some of their number were personally and actively engaged in that important work, and participated in the conferences and were conversant with all the circumstances connected with it; nor has the passage of time obliterated those interesting scenes from their memory. They believe that they have correctly understood the sufficiently intelligible, and certainly very explicit statement of your Constitution, avowing, as the single object of the Society, "to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands." Your Board has as yet discovered nothing to warrant a departure from the uniform course of the Society, from the date of its institution to this day; still less could they derive from its object or history any justification for engaging in new enterprises, of so doubtful a character as to divide the sentiments of the denomination, and gender disunion and strife where all should be unity and peace. The present English version of the Holy Scriptures, that receives the united confidence of all the pious, that speaks the language that has enlightened, directed, sustained and comforted their fathers "in the house of their pilgrimage," is yet dear to their hearts, and is by them venerated, loved, and inculcated as the Word of the living God. That it has imperfections is admitted, for so have all things human; and none, I believe, have ever assumed that our English translators were inspired men. But the question of its revision, in the only way in which it ever can be successfully revised, by such means as the concentrated wisdom of the churches may suggest, and by ability in some degree equal to the momentous responsibility, and of a character so unquestionable as to secure universal acquiescence and confidence, has never been submitted to this Society, and certainly is not comprehended within the limit of its constitutional objects. Whatever, therefore, may have been their individual opinions upon this subject, it is a question that could not be consistently entertained around their table. The Bible—the Book by eminence—that discloses to us, in precept and promise, the will and purposes of God, the wisdom and beneficence of his gracious government; that sheds its hallowed light upon the redeemed Church and a sin-wrecked world, upon ages past and the life to come, upon the duties, hopes, and destinies of mankind; the book that has been "the lamp to our path" from our earliest years, whose lessons of love are inseparable from all the interesting recollections of life; its language endeared to our hearts by its frequent repetition from a mother's lips and in a father's prayer; that has been our sweetest solace in sorrow, a well-spring of life in our souls, the basis of our faith and the confidence of our hope, when anticipating the dark valley and the revealings of the spirit-world beyond it, can never be by us lightly regarded, or committed to any but unquestionably competent hands for improvement. We should regard it under any circumstances as an exceedingly hazardous experiment, unless of that competency there was the most convincing evidence, and the strongest assurances of its sanctified integrity. Of this we are confident, the received version surpasses every other in fidelity and excellence, and is rendered the more precious from its interesting and holy associations. Another, and a better, must be furnished to us, sanctioned by the confidence of our entire communion, and by all others "who hold the Head," ere we can say to our good old English Bible, Depart from our pulpits, our closets, and our confidence. Until then we are confined to it by our own strong convictions, by the expressed will of the Society, and by the purpose stated in the Constitution.

Our work, dear brethren, combines the most exalted privilege with solemn responsibility. Engaged in a holy enterprise, contemplating results that involve the glory of God and the dearest interests of mankind, we should realize at once the condescension and grace that call us to it, the honor it confers upon us, and the obligations under which we sustain the trusts and prosecute the labors confided to our hands. A menial service in the cause of the Saviour confers an honor upon him who renders it, far surpassing the titled dignities of the world, because it identifies him with the interests of God's moral government and the advancing glories of that kingdom that is destined to encompass the earth and to shine above the brightness of the firmament. But the honored agent must see to it that his service is performed in obedience to the laws of his King, and in accordance with those immutable principles of truth and righteousness that will secure the sanction of His approval. The service in which we are engaged involves peculiar grace and peculiar responsibility. To give the destitute the Word of God, to unite in effort with the ancient prophets in diffusing the light of his glory, to become the donors instrumentally of the richest gift God bestows upon man, is certainly a position of no common interest and importance. To meet the claims of duty inseparable from it, may involve toils and sacrifices of a peculiar character. The consciousness of imperfection, a strenuous conflict with antagonist influences within and without, require a voluntary immolation on the altar of truth and duty. This is to be expected as long as the god of this world ruleth in the hearts of the children of disobedience. But this should not discourage; it should only convince us of the necessity of bringing to our work the impulse of devoted hearts and willing minds. The results cannot be doubtful, for they depend not upon fortuitous events or contingencies; they are included in the predictions of the prophets, and God's Word cannot return unto him void. These results are secured by his faithful promise, that "at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow." The God of truth hath spoken it, he will bring it to pass. The Lord hath given the Word of truth from heaven. Let the company of them who publish it be great and devoted, humble and faithful.

ADDRESS OF REV. R. A. FYFE, OF WARREN, R. I.

Resolved, That the distribution of the pure Word of God among all nations is not only practicable, but is essential to the evangelization of the world; and we recognize in the existing state of our own, as well as that of foreign countries, an increase of encouragement and consequent obligation to prosecute this work with zeal, faith, and hope.

Mr. President.—The Bible itself first imparted to men the great idea of a radical moral reform; and multitudes, in our day, catching up the outlines of the thought, without paying attention to the sole means by which this moral improvement can be effected, have gone wild with theories as absurd as any that ever came out of Bedlam. Every body means to reform some thing or some body. There are those who tell us that they intend to turn this whole world into a second garden of Eden, and that there need be no innocence in the paradise of their creation. Schemes for effecting this wonderful revolution are gravely paraded before us, and we are assured that they must succeed in "the good time coming." The life that we now live in the flesh need not be a life of faith—a life of trial or probation, necessarily involving inequalities and reverses; but should be made one of pure enjoyment, where all men, of whatever character, should be perfectly equal in possessions, privileges, and happiness. It seems possible, if not probable, that we shall yet have societies to give all men the same physical constitution, the same amount of strength and symmetry, of intellect and character; societies to banish disease and death from our world; (indeed, we are already, if we may believe all that is printed, well provided with this class of philanthropists.) We may soon have societies to make all trees of the same size, and to level down every hill; to give four legs to the eagle, and wings to the ox. These aims are no more absurd or impossible than some of those on which professedly rational men are now experimenting.

But it is matter for gratitude that the great schemes for evangelizing the world, which stand in opposition to these devisings of weak and erring men, and which have engaged the attention of Christians for the last forty or fifty years, are no longer to be viewed as experiments. Many projects of so-called reform are destined to perish like the prophet's gourd, but not so the Bible Society, the Missionary Society, the Tract Society.

While some dreamers persist in the vain and endless pursuit of the moral alchemy by which the world is to be at once converted into a paradise of happiness, the Society whose anniversary we are now celebrating contents itself with less showy but more certain aims. We pretend not to change this world into heaven, but to give men the means of learning the way from earth to heaven, and of soothing, comforting, and sustaining them on their journey thitherward. We do not profess to transmute all things into gold, but to put into the hands of men a book which teaches how treasures more precious and enduring may be laid up, where gold is trodden under foot. Though we cannot lengthen men's days upon earth, yet we would furnish to every man the true elixir of life—the waters of which, if men drink, they will never die.

But can the Bible be given to every man? Is not the undertaking so gigantic as to merit the epithet visionary? I answer, certainly not. Every thing that God has required his children to perform can be done, if good people are only heartily disposed to obey him. Great souls are not terrified by the magnitude of an undertaking. The greater the work, the more firmly do they brace themselves for its performance, because they rest not upon themselves, but upon God. They have found, out of the world, the something for which the heathen philosophers vainly sighed, on which to rest the lever that must raise the world morally and intellectually. Every year increases, by a kind of geometrical progression the facilities for the accomplishment of this great work. Missionaries are becoming more and more numerous; printing and publishing are growing cheaper; the languages of the earth are being more thoroughly mastered; modes of intercommunication are becoming more free and rapid, and the desire to possess the Word of God is waxing stronger every year. All these, besides the many collateral influences tending in the same direction, favor this important undertaking. Then as to the pecuniary ability, why, the sums expended in England and America yearly upon the single article of intoxicating liquors would in one year furnish the means to put a copy of the Word of God into the hands of every family on the face of the earth. Oh, we have not yet begun to approach the region of self-denial in our gifts for God. The Jews had to give ten per cent. of their income for God. Did he overcharge them? Did he make a hard bargain with them when he "chiefly committed to them" the oracles of God, and required them to give one tenth of what they made in return? And yet do Christians in modern times, do we as Baptists, on an average, give five or even three per cent. of our income, for all religious objects put together? I know we do not. Why is this? Is not the gospel as good or better than Judaism? Are not the silver and the gold the Lord's? I believe there are business men in New-York and elsewhere who would be glad to give three per cent. for money to any human creditor. And will they not give to God even legal interest, to say nothing of sacrifice or of generous dealing with Him in view of his great goodness? I believe Christian men may be taught this grace more perfectly, just as they may be taught any other. What we require is the disposition to give, not the means; and to create this disposition, the facts relating to this great enterprise must be laid before the world, and before Christian men. We must show clearly, again and again, what the Bible has done for man in his civil and social relations, and for man as a religious being. We must remind men that the diffusion of true civil freedom, and of pure Christianity, depends upon the free circulation of the Scriptures. In the age in which we live, a few weeks suffice to shake to their fall the oldest dynasties, and raze to their foundations bulwarks which men had been laboriously throwing up for centuries for the protection of hereditary monarchy. The excited masses rush at thrones and trample them in the dust, proclaiming, in trumpet tones, freedom and equality. But after the roar of the tempest is hushed, and the dust is cleared away, we find freedom and equality very much as it was before the storm. Revolution after revolution occurs, and despotism still remains in spirit and character the same, administered under new names, and by different hands. The more sagacious are beginning to see that true civil freedom never was and never will be obtained by violent revolutions, and they are looking beneath these surface changes which occupy the attention of so many, to see what it is that gives national prosperity and true civil freedom. When men once learn the fact that these great blessings depend not altogether nor chiefly upon the form of a government, they can scarcely fail to go yet deeper, till they reach the hiding of that wondrous power which brings peace in one hand and prosperity in the other. Nations having governments of every mould and shape have prospered more or less rapidly, while others with constitutions quite as favorable have declined and dwindled from the earth. Why? Because the Bible was circulated among the thriving nations, and not among the others. Men must be made to see that self-government in individuals lies at the foundation of all national and social freedom and prosperity; nay, more, that it is only by self-government upon the principles of God's Word that these blessings can be secured.

Why have the Protestant nations of Christendom progressed steadily in wealth, science, literature, and arts? Not merely because of the form of their governments, for these have been of every form; not because of their geographical position, nor of the wealth with which they began the race; but chiefly, if not exclusively, because they have had the Word of God among them, and have given more or less attention to its teachings. And yet further, those nations where this book has been most freely circulated have advanced most rapidly in the acquisition of every thing that is really valuable to man. The Bible seems ever to be a sacred possession.

On the lands where it is known and revered, the sun of prosperity and peace shines most brightly, and on them the dews of heaven most gently fall. God blesses them as he did the house of Obed-edom where his ark rested. Such views appeal not merely to the Christian, but to the man of the world, and to the statesman. It is sometimes laughingly and sometimes seriously said to be the destiny of America to diffuse over the whole earth the principles of freedom. In whatever tone this sentiment is uttered, it is in itself a noble one. And the speediest, the best, the only way to have it realized, is to give the Bible to all mankind.

I believe in my soul, that the colporteurs and others who are distributing the Bible through France, are doing more to establish a free, equitable, and permanent government in that volcanic country, than all her politicians put together, from Guizot downwards.

The world owes a debt to the Bible for its most valued blessings which it has never yet acknowledged. I defy any man in a Christian country to lay his hand upon any thing which he esteems really valuable, and say, For this I owe nothing directly or indirectly to the Word of God. As religious liberty is beginning to confess her indebtedness to the Baptists, so are some worldly men and politicians reluctantly confessing the important services which the Holy Scriptures have rendered even in their departments.

One difficulty is deeply felt in nearly every department of benevolent effort. Men are so impatient for immediate results, that they grow weary in well doing, unless they can accomplish by one or two efforts all that they intended or wished to do. We are living so fast at the present day, and are so eager to see present brilliant effects, that we are apt to become impatient and discouraged with the apparently slow progress that truth and righteousness are making in the earth. Though the present is only the seed-time, men reason as if it were the harvest, and they are unwilling to wait till those "high-born" reapers are sent forth to gather in the harvest of the world. They overlook the fact, palpable in the whole history of our race, that vast changes may in a short time take place in every thing pertaining to man's outward condition, but that every thing permanently affecting human character—every thing which is pure and lovely and of good report—every thing which sanctifies and ennobles the soul of fallen man, is of slow growth. To make progress in real goodness, notwithstanding the cry of reformers, we must have "line upon line, line upon line, precept upon precept, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little." Excitements of various kinds may convulse society, but after they have all subsided, how homoeopathic is the amount of good which we find as a residuum. We also forget in our impatience God's method of working in the moral world—in its slow but magnificent development. It required forty centuries to prepare the world for the rising of the Sun of righteousness with healing in his beams; and it required four centuries to raise the Anglo-Saxon race to the position in which they exercise a wider influence upon the destinies of the world than all the other nations put together. Though we do not find therefore that the Bible makes the degraded heathen, in a single generation, equal to those who have enjoyed its blessings for centuries, still give to the most abject race on earth the oracles of God, and in time they will do their work, for God's Word will not return to him void.

It is for the friends of the Bible to keep such facts before the minds of men; to keep the truths of history and experience disinterred from the dust and rubbish with which this hurrying age is apt to cover them, till they make their impression and compel men to pay to God's poor what they owe for the Bible. For thus alone can we show our gratitude and discharge our obligations. I believe in the mighty power of truth, and also that Christian people will bow to it when it is faithfully and perseveringly set before them, for they are the children of truth.

Who has not been struck, on perusing the history of the Church, with the feebleness of Christian character, the proneness to error and superstition, the utter inability to stand before the rage of persecution, exhibited by those who were destitute or ignorant of the Scriptures! On this view, however, I cannot at present dwell. It may be observed further, that not only is the general distribution of the Scriptures essential to true national freedom and prosperity; not only is it essential to preserve Christianity in its purity where it is already possessed; but this free circulation of the Word of God must precede, or at least accompany, the successful missionary. Illustrations of the truth of this position come from all parts of the earth.

As at Berea of old, it will be found true in all time, that whenever men search the Scriptures many will believe. Cases of this kind have come to the foreign missionary stations, from remote towns and cities where the foot of the missionary has never yet trodden, asking an explanation of what they had read in the Word of God. They have emerged also from the heart of the thickest jungles, to tell the messenger of Christ that though they had never heard his voice they had read and believed the living oracles. In nearly every place in Canada, where the gospel has obtained a foothold among the French Canadians, the ground was first broken by the colporteur, or by the perusal of the Sacred Scriptures. At Grande Ligne the first convert was an old lady who had, more than six and thirty years before Mr. Roussy crossed the ocean, obtained a copy of the Word of God during her short sojourn in the neighborhood of Boston. Her family soon followed her in the example of her faith. At Ste. Pie the Bible had been in the possession of the first family afterwards converted to God for over forty years before they had ever heard of an evangelical minister speaking their own language. The seed which had here lain so long buried in dust was quickened into life in a remarkable manner. A neighbor of the family alluded to had been residing for a time in the United States, and had returned to his native place with a copy of the Scriptures in his possession. About that time a wandering beggar from the same neighborhood had called at Grande Ligne in his rounds, and had obtained among other good things a copy of the Scriptures. When he reached home he spoke of the strange alms he had received. At length seven persons met for the purpose of comparing the three copies of the Scriptures; and, to the amazement of the negligent possessors, the old family Bible was found to be precisely like the others. And these three witnesses for God stimulated seven people to send for Mr. Roussy, that he might explain to them the way of God more perfectly. These persons were converted, and they formed the nucleus of the Ste. Pie church. At Ste. Marie, where the labors of our lamented brother Côte were so greatly blessed, and, alas! so soon terminated, a colporteur had long before said, "I have visited every house in this region with the Word of God." Facts without number of this kind might be produced, illustrative of the important part which the Scriptures must exercise in the evangelization of the world. The patriot who wishes his country to prosper, the philanthropist who desires to see the human race elevated, the Christian who wishes to diffuse and sustain a pure faith on earth, are all interested in the vigor and efficiency of the Bible Society.

Not to go out of this wide country, how vast and how unspeakably important is the work of the Bible Society even here! From one to two hundred thousand souls every year land on these shores, from every country on which the sun shines, who are utterly ignorant of God's Word, and who daringly scoff at what they do not understand. They come with all their follies and vices, to spread contagion and moral death around them. And it should be borne in mind, that while folly and vice are contagious, virtue and truth are not. These exotics on earth can be diffused only by special care and effort. In the great valley of the Mississippi, along the all but interminable shores of the Pacific, away by the streams and mines of the interior, we have men of every color and kindred. Some are transient visitors in search of gold; oh, let them carry with them as they return a treasure more precious than all the gold of Ophir—a copy of the Word of eternal life. Others are permanent settlers, but they have never read, or, it may be, seen the Book of books. Such are pouring into the great valley, and into every city and town of this country, not by thousands merely, but by hundreds of thousands. And yet, if there be any truth in the pages of history, if any thing can be learned from the history of the past, if any truth is enforced by the sanctions of the great Book itself, it is that even national prosperity cannot long continue where the Scriptures are not possessed and honored; much less can true religion flourish. That worst of despotisms, Roman Catholicism, which fastens its accursed fetters upon the mind and conscience, can only be checked in its progress by the Bible. Other means may help, but this is the chief instrument for the destruction of that mystery of iniquity. The priests know this well, for when hard pressed they will grant any liberty to their deluded followers but the free, unrestricted use of the Scriptures. Let it be graven, as with the point of a diamond, on the heart of every patriot and Christian, that nothing but a universal circulation of the Bible can save this country from the evils of Catholicism, Infidelity, and Socialism, which are setting in so strongly from foreign shores. All the instrumentalities now in use for the evangelization of this country should be plied with increased faith and zeal; but specially should the Bible Societies see to it, that every family which takes up its abode in this land is supplied with a copy of the Scriptures in its own language.

When we glance at foreign lands, our minds are almost overwhelmed by the vastness of the field, and by the rapidly increasing facilities for the performance of our work. God has ever gone in advance of his people, and has opened before them the brazen gates of empires, long ere they were prepared to follow. He designs we should trust Him in this respect. Did we give an hundred times the sums we now contribute for benevolent objects, He would open up fields for their immediate and profitable use. Were three hundred thousand dollars placed now at the disposal of this Society, I am persuaded that the next Annual Report would show that the whole had been profitably expended. But God is hindered, if I may so speak, by our unbelief, as the Saviour on one occasion was prevented from performing many miracles by the faithlessness of the people. Asia, India, indeed the whole East, with its teeming millions, is wide open before us. Europe is opening more rapidly than we are preparing to enter. Germany has been unable to close her doors against the Scriptures, although she has feebly attempted to do so in one or two instances. France is constantly having Bibles thrown in through the windows of the glass palace which she is trying to build for her protection against the artillery of heaven. And even the walls of the "Eternal City," all battered and decayed, let in new light through chinks that time has made. The "reaction," of which we hear so much and know so little on this side of the water, will "react" again. The great pendulum will swing in the opposite direction. Such an inquiring spirit is abroad among the many, that it will not rest—it will have free access to knowledge and the Word of God. One who sympathized fully with the masses of England and Europe, and who contributed as much as any man of his day to the recent awakening of mind in the Old World, compared the beating pulses of Europe, which he carefully watched, to the stirring life diffused by the dawn of light on the third day of creation! Full of the imagined glories brought to view by the first rising sun, he vehemently asks:

"And shall the mortal sons of God
Be senseless as the trodden clod,
And darker than the tomb?
No! from the mind of man,
From the swart artisan,
From God our Sire,
Our souls have holy light within,
And every form of grief and sin
Shall see and feel its fire!"

It is for the Bible Society to put into the hands of such the Word of Truth, that they may learn what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God. We should be prepared at a moment's warning to supply, more fully than ever before, the nations of Europe with the Scriptures. Thus they may learn not merely that they want something, but what it is they want, and how they may obtain it. The circulation of the Scriptures, especially among the nations of Europe, will spare the effusion of blood, will help to emancipate them, and give them not only true civil freedom, but that higher and nobler liberty by which the Son of God makes his disciples free. Surely, such considerations should encourage us to prosecute our work with increased zeal, faith and hope.

ORISSA.

LETTER FROM REV. J. BUCKLEY TO THE CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

CUTTACK, Orissa, April 23d, 1850.

My Dear Sir:—I have the pleasure to acknowledge having received from our beloved Secretary, the Rev. J. G. Pike, the sum of £163 8s. or C. Rpa. 1674, being three fourths of the grant made by your Society, the other part having been appropriated to our brethren Hudson and Jarram in China; and I am deputed by my brethren to convey to your Board our sincere and hearty thanks for your fraternal and Christian aid, which we trust will be continued, and which you may be assured will ever be highly appreciated.

The Lord of the harvest has committed to us, His servants in Orissa, a wide field to cultivate; but it is not permitted to us, while engaged in the pleasurable toil of making known the life-giving Word, to know all the effects of our labors. In reference to the destruction of the mighty and ancient system of idolatry in India, we are called to walk by faith, and it is fitting we should patiently and prayerfully labor unto the end, seeking above all things the approval of our gracious Master. "The husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it until he receive the early and latter rain;" how much more should we patiently wait for those showers of blessing which will mature a far more precious crop! Yet I would not convey the idea that we have not encouragements in our work, and that those encouragements are not numerous and abundant. Such an idea would be entirely opposed to the truth, and would indicate a criminal forgetfulness of the goodness of the Lord to his servants; but I wish all who love the Saviour, and who love us for his dear name's sake, to lay to heart the melancholy fact that the masses of the people are forgetting God and going to hell, and, feeling its solemn weight on their spirits, to pray most earnestly that the Spirit of God may be given in large measure. I feel encouraged, greatly so, when I compare the present with the past state of Orissa, and I think what we know of the effects of Bible distribution should be regarded as a most ample recompense for the time, toil, and money expended on the enterprise; but let us not forget, that while ones and twos and tens are converted, hundreds and thousands and tens of thousands are living and dying unconverted. Let us therefore, with sanctified zeal and humble reliance on the Lord, gird ourselves for the work before us.

During the past year, the brethren in Orissa have visited and preached at many markets, festivals, and other places where multitudes of people were congregated together; and on these occasions many portions of God's blessed Word have been distributed, and occasionally things have come to our knowledge which show how extensively our Christian books are read, and how great an influence they are producing on the minds of many. But the effects of Bible distribution in the past year will doubtless be better known in future years than now; one and another pleasing case of which we are now entirely ignorant will then come to light; and never let us forget that all will be fully disclosed when our Lord shall appear in glory, and we shall stand before Him. Mr. Miller, who is zealously and successfully laboring at Piplee, a new station, mentions a pleasing case of a gooroo and his disciples having derived considerable Christian knowledge, without the instruction of any missionary, from the Gospel of Matthew, which the gooroo appears to have obtained ten or twelve years since.* He met with these persons while on a missionary journey six or seven weeks since, and his hopes are raised in reference to some of them; but whatever the issue may be, the knowledge they have obtained of important and saving truth from reading the gospel is remarkable, and should encourage us in our work of distribution. Mr. Miller in a recent letter says: "I am glad to inform you that the old gooroo whom I met at Khonas arrived at Piplee on Lord's day morning last, bringing, carefully wrapt up in a piece of cloth, the old Gospel of Matthew from which he had obtained his Christian knowledge, and several tracts obtained more recently. From the date of the Gospel, which was printed at Serampore in 1836, he may have had it twelve or thirteen years. One of his disciples accompanied him to Piplee, and he informs me he is one of about twenty persons who have met every evening for some years at the old gooroo's place, at Bajepur near Khonas, to read and hear explained Christian books: they have entirely forsaken the gods and Hindoo Shasters, and profess to make our books, especially Matthew's Gospel, the rule of faith and practice. This man as well as the gooroo seems quite enraptured with the character of our Lord, and professes to believe on him for salvation. I have had several conversations with the old man. His Christian knowledge, considering the manner in which it has been acquired, is surprising. The whole of the Gospel seems familiar to him, though the meaning of some things he could not make out; for instance, draky saros (fruit of the vine) proved a fertile source of speculation: whether it was milk or ghee, or something else, neither he nor his friends could decide." But it is not to isolated cases that I would especially refer. I would rather direct the Board to the certain truth, that the circulation of the Bible and the proclamation of its saving truths must, with the Divine blessing, be productive of "much fruit," and fruit, too, "that will remain." The sun cannot shine without enlightening the world, nor can the Bible be circulated and read without communicating much holy and heavenly light. God "magnifies his Word above all his name," and we know that "the entrance of his Word giveth light."

I cannot but refer with pleasure to the fact that our Christian community is happily enlarging, and that we have in consequence an increasing number of dutiful and prayerful readers of the Orissa Bible. Her Bible is Orissa's greatest treasure. Oh that all her children knew its value! The possession of a faithful translation of the Word of God in the language of any country, is a boon precious beyond computation. Well does the martyred translator of our English Bible remark, when assigning his reason for undertaking the work: "I had perceived by experience that it was impossible to establish the lay people in any truth, except the Scriptures were plainly laid before their eyes in their mother-tongue, that they might see the process, order and meaning of the text; for else, whatever truth is taught them, these enemies of all truth quench it again." Some, to whom the sacred pages of the Orissa Bible were precious, have died in the Lord since I last wrote, and have left a sweet savor behind. To one of these, Nimi, who was for a considerable time in the Asylum at Cuttack, I will briefly refer. Nimi was an orphan, and was at an early age admitted into the Female Asylum at Cuttack, then under the care of brother Sutton. About three years since she was baptized in the name of the Lord; and a little more than twelve months ago she entered the married state, and afterwards resided at Choga, a flourishing Christian settlement about seven miles from Cuttack. Her last illness was short and severe, and did not admit of her saying much respecting the state of her mind; but to Bella, one of her school companions, she said that she felt happy and should soon be in heaven with the Lord. The general consistency of her course secured for her the affectionate esteem of her pastor and Christian friends; and many tears were shed over her early removal. Her pastor justly describes her as "a burning and shining light" at Choga. She was a young person of a meek and humble disposition—of a gentle and tender spirit. Her soul lived by the words which proceeded out of the mouth of God, and at family worship she supplied her husband's deficiency by reading a portion of the sacred Word, and he afterwards offered prayer. The Orissa Bible was a lamp which daily enlightened the path of this youthful pilgrim. It was a fountain at which her fainting soul was refreshed by draughts of life-giving water, of which he who drinks shall thirst no more. She is now, we cannot for a moment doubt, with Him whose love the Bible reveals, and therefore needs its grateful light no longer. I do not mention this as a case of any very special interest, but rather as a specimen of a goodly number of cases that have occurred amongst us; and no doubt in future years, by the abounding grace of Him who will "multiply the seed sown, and increase the fruit of righteousness," the number of such cases will be greatly increased.

Believe me, yours in Christian love,

JOHN BUCKLEY.

LETTER FROM MR. J. H. CHANDLER.

It affords me much pleasure to be able to inform you, that the second revised edition of the New Testament, in Siamese, is out of press. * * *

The form of the work is small octavo, and makes a book of 595 pages. It is bound and circulated as follows: 1,000 copies of each of the Gospels separately; also, 1,000 of the Gospels and Acts; 1,000 of Romans; 500 of first and second Corinthians; 500 from Galatians to Philemon; 500 from James to Jude; 500 of Revelation, and 1,000 copies of the entire work in one volume. Binding the work in this way, gives us 9,500 books, and enables us to circulate the Word of Life more extensively. We should be glad to be able to give a Testament, or at least the Gospels and Acts, to every reader in the country; but the limited appropriations to this station do not enable us to give so much as one Gospel to one in five thousand. God, in his providence, seems to have given the work of Bible translation to our mission; and, if the friends of the "BIBLE TRANSLATED" are sincere in their professions, they ought to encourage and sustain our translator in going through the Old Testament, re-revising the New, and enabling us to print and circulate the whole Word of God throughout the length and breadth of the kingdom.

The publication of this edition of the New Testament is a great advance in our missionary labors. But, to profit by it, we need more missionaries, to enable us to go about among the people, in the towns and villages, preaching the glad tidings of salvation, and distributing the Word of Life. There is, probably, no country in the East, under a native government, where missionaries are more free to travel about, and pursue their appointed work, than in Siam. The people are ready to listen to our instruction, and eager to obtain books. Oh that the friends of the Bible were more alive to the importance of this field! * * *

For the history of Bible translations in this country, you are referred to the following Preface.

Yours truly,

J. H. CHANDLER.

PREFACE TO THE REVISED EDITION OF THE SIAMESE NEW TESTAMENT.

In issuing a second Complete Edition of the New Testament in Siamese, it seems proper to give some account of the circumstances under which the translation has been made. In doing so, the topics which will claim attention are: 1. The history of Biblical translation into this language; 2. The text made use of; 3. The principles adopted in prosecution of the work.

1. Catholic missionaries from France have resided in the country about 200 years,* and have translated such portions of the Christian Scriptures as they required for their service, but it does not appear that they have ever printed any of their translations. I have seen a translation of the Gospel by Matthew, made by them, evidently from the Latin. It was in manuscript, and in the Roman letter. The Latin words, sacerdos, penitentia, &c., are retained. It has a marked leaning to the Latin idiom, but is generally executed with perspicuity and fidelity.

The time when the translation of Matthew was made I have no means of ascertaining, or by what individual, except that it was executed before the destruction of Ayuthiya, the old capital of Siam, more than 80 years ago.

By the kindness of Bishop Pallegoix, I have recently seen another manuscript copy of a translation of Matthew, which, I am persuaded, is an entirely distinct version. It is divided into parts and sections quite diverse from the preceding; and scarcely a single complete sentence can be found which is not characterized by numerous Pali words, even where pure Siamese would be quite as clear, and wholly exempt from objection that it wanted dignity.

It is said that many translations were made in the earlier days of their mission, but some were destroyed in the ruins of Ayuthiya, and some perished in the wreck of vessels in which they were embarked for preservation. In recent years, several religious books have been published by them, but no translation of the Holy Scriptures.

The first attempt made by Protestants in this work was in 1818-20, at Rangoon, in Burmah. Some thousands of Siamese who had been made prisoners of war at that time resided in and about Rangoon, where, by constant intercourse and some study, many made themselves familiar with the Burman language. Their case drew the sympathy and efforts of the American missionaries to the acquisition of the Siamese language; and resulted in the preparation of a small tract, and the translation of the Gospel by Matthew. The latter was never published. On examination, it was found to be rather a free paraphrase than a strict translation.†

The next endeavor was made by Rev. C. Gutzlaff, in 1828-32. It will sufficiently characterize his translation, to say that it embraced the whole of the Old and New Testaments, executed, with two other translations of the same extent, in three years, without any previous knowledge of either of the three languages—Siamese, Kambojan, and Laos—and executed, too, while the translator was preaching in Chinese, making Siamese and Cochinchinese vocabularies, and practising medicine and surgery. The only part ever published was a small edition of Luke, in 1834, printed at Singapore.

Availing himself of all the aid he could gather from his predecessors, the writer of this notice prepared the first edition of Matthew, which was printed at Singapore in 1835—1500 copies. Acts succeeded in 1836-7. Then a second edition of Matthew—a second edition of Acts; and eventually, in 1842, all parts of the New Testament were completed in one volume, though generally published and circulated in parts. A free expression of views, and suggestions of emendations, were sought from all engaged in the study of the Siamese language. Valuable hints were received from the late Rev. C. Robinson and others. The work was under revision, and a second edition commenced, in 1845, but had proceeded only to Luke, 16th chapter, when illness, absence, and other causes, suspended it till March, 1849. The parts published had been circulated, and this new edition was then begun. All the best of my time and energies for the last four years have been spent in revising it, in which, for a season, I received many valuable suggestions from my dear friend and Christian brother, the late Rev. Jesse Caswell. I should feel very glad to spend four years more of uninterrupted labor upon it. It has many defects. I may sometimes have misapprehended the original. I may have failed to express it fully in the translation. Verses or parts of sentences may sometimes have been overlooked. Things of this nature will only be understood by those who have attempted a similar work, and their judgment will be lenient. For suggestions by which any such errors may be corrected, the translator will ever be grateful. I may here add that the translation of some portions of the Old and New Testaments was undertaken by the late Rev. Charles Robinson, and more or less revised by the late Rev. Jesse Caswell, but their decease left them incomplete.

2. The text used in the original translation was that of Knapp's Third Edition, from which I scarcely ever deviated. Having no access to original manuscripts, I became, of course, dependent upon the investigations of others. Where the text was contested, I availed myself of such information as I could glean from Kuinoel, Rosenmuller, A. Clark, G. Campbell, McKnight, Doddridge, &c.; but generally, Knapp's text was followed pretty closely. Even his bracketed passages were inserted in the translation. In the first revision, the Textus Receptus, as found in Bloomfield, was constantly used, but with some scrupulosity. Throughout the last revision, the edition of Hahn, as edited by Dr. Robinson, has been my guide. It would be easy to enlarge on this topic, and give reasons for preferences, but it is feared that little benefit would result from it. Where passages are indicated as doubtful in the text, they are indicated in the translation by being included in parenthetic marks, and a note explaining their design is prefixed to the volume. The Siamese, having been only accustomed to manuscript books, are familiar with the fact that copies differ—not only from design, but from various causes, which involve nothing of a censurable nature—and will readily appreciate the attempt to represent the matter to them as it really is.

3. In regard to the principles on which the translation has been conducted, the main and primary one is, that the meaning of an author should be given by the translator, and as much of his manner as the idioms and circumstances will allow. If the translation is to be merely verbal, or strictly literal, the Scriptures might just as well be given in Hebrew or Greek. The Scriptures themselves assert that they are given "for instruction." Instruction can only profit where it is understood. It may be urged that an attempt to give the meaning makes the translator an expounder. This is true. He cannot be otherwise if he would do any good. When a mercantile or political document is put into the hands of a translator for rendering, what is the object? It is, that the meaning may be known through the medium of another language. There are cases where a strictly literal rendering from one language into another gives the meaning fully and perfectly. In all such cases strict literality is preferable, but, at all events, a translation should be made intelligible. So far as it is not so it is labor lost to make it. There are idioms in Hebrew, Greek, and English, which are unknown to the Siamese. Some of these would be perfectly intelligible. By these, the Siamese language would be enriched without detriment. Some would convey no meaning, or a decidedly false one. They must be changed till they shall convey a meaning, and the true one.

The Siamese designate the hours of the day by one word, those of the night by another. They reckon from sunrise to noon, six hours. From noon till sunset, six hours. They have no "ninth hour" of the day. How, then, shall Acts iii. 1 be translated? What does it mean? Unquestionably, three o'clock P. M. I translate it so. The Siamese have no word for week. The name of the days, as Sunday, Monday, &c., corresponding to western nations, they have—well known to all. How, then, shall Matthew xxviii. 1 be translated? If we seek the meaning, no one questions but what it is this: "In the end of the Sabbath, as Sunday was dawning." So then I translate it, giving the meaning, and not the words, for this is impossible.

Following out the principles above stated, the words synagogue, episcopos, presbiteros, ecclesia, diabolos, angelos, &c., have been rendered by words intelligible as far as the language would allow. Where these words have different meanings, I have not hesitated to render them by different words: e. g., angelos means sometimes a heavenly messenger, sometimes an emissary of the devil, sometimes a spy, and sometimes a church officer, and has been so rendered; but an earnest endeavor has been cherished to render the same word by the same equivalent when the meaning was the same.

After having labored to determine the meaning of the original, I have asked myself, "If an intelligent Siamese had full possession of this idea, how would he express it?" In general, I would aim to express it in the same way—I say, in general; in peculiar cases there may be reasons for deviating from their idiom and enriching their language by a foreign one, if it is not unintelligible.

There are other cases of this sort. Whenever the Siamese speak of a city, or country, or officer of distinction, they cannot neglect to join some designation, by which these shall be rendered definite, as the city of London, the country China, the ruler Herod. As the Siamese have no capital letters with which to commence proper names, this is the only resource left them whereby to guard against misconception. When a name has become familiar, it is not indispensable to repeat the epithet in every case, though it is generally done. Were I to use Herod, Jerusalem, Samaria, Athens, without prefixing ruler, city, country, the reader would be at a loss to know whether these were proper names or not; and if he decided that they were proper names, he might class them all as names of men or cities promiscuously. Hence, though such epithets are not found, or not always found, in the original, I have not hesitated to use them, because the genius of the language into which I translate requires them.

In regard to style, perspicuity and simplicity have been aimed at, rather than loftiness or elegance. Though some words of Bali origin have been used, it has been more a matter of necessity than ornament; and very few are employed at all, except such as have become, by long use, almost or quite as familiar as those of strictly Siamese origin.

That the translation throughout will be at once understood, even by intelligent and reflecting readers, cannot be expected. To secure this, there must be such aids as are found requisite every where—a knowledge of customs and facts, which can come only in the way of commentary, either written or oral. It is confidently believed, however, that so much is fully intelligible as may leave the honest and candid reader inexcusable for not understanding God's plan of saving sinners. May His blessing make it effective for this great object.

J. T. JONES.

ACTION OF THE BOARD OF MANAGERS

UPON THE REPORT ON ARTICLE SECOND OF THE CONSTITUTION.

At the meeting of the Board of Managers, held May 10, the Report on Article Second of the Constitution, presented to the Society by Rev. J. N. Granger, and referred to the Board with power, was referred to a special committee, consisting of Rev. S. S. Cutting, Rev. C. G. Sommers, Rev. E. L. Magoon, W. Carter, Esq.,* and Rev. J. R. Stone, to report as far as practicable at the next meeting of the Board.

The result of this action was presented in the following report, which was adopted by the Board of Managers June 12, and ordered to be printed with the Annual Report.

REPORT.

The Committee of the Board of Managers of the American and Foreign Bible Society, to whom was referred the report of the Committee on Article Second of the Constitution, presented at the late Annual Meeting of the Society, have given to the duty assigned them such attention as has been practicable, and beg leave to submit the following report:

The document placed in the hands of the Committee surveys the publishing department of this Society's operations for a series of years, and arrives at the conclusion that the business of publishing, as conducted hitherto, has been attended with losses. On this view of the Society's affairs, certain practical conclusions and suggestions are based, which have been referred by the Society to the Board of Managers, with power to act in the premises as to them may seem wisest and most useful. The responsibility thus cast upon the Board is a grave one, and ultimate decisions should be fixed only after very studious deliberation. Some of the suggestions contained in the document are necessarily reserved for future consideration;—on others a present course of action seems sufficiently clear. Many of the matters discussed are not new to the Board, a series of examinations and inquiries having been carried forward by the Board during the past year, for the purpose of ascertaining the actual condition of the Society, and providing as rapidly as practicable for such changes in methods of business as a wise economy might require. It will be observed by examining that part of the report of the Society's Committee, which contains its conclusions and suggestions, (pp. 14, 15,) and that part of the Annual Report of the Board of Managers which relates to the same subject, (p. 35,) that the views taken are not widely dissimilar. In both a remedy is pointed out in improved methods of business rather than by destroying the department, and the remedy itself in many important features is the same.

The report of the Society's Committee finds, "that the chief source of all the losses to the department is to be sought in the manufacture of books." In this view the present Committee concur. While it may be true that in the case of some particular styles or editions, the Society may be able to produce at specially favorable rates, it is not reasonable to suppose that, generally, Boards, or Committees, or Secretaries, chosen without reference to skill or sagacity as book-manufacturers, can compete successfully with men whose business and profits lie in that line. And this view is sustained by inquiries which have been instituted by the Board during the past year. They have found that generally they can buy cheaper than they can manufacture; and in this belief, they several months ago disposed of a contract for stereotype plates which had been entered into previously to the annual meeting of 1850, and which, when disposed of, had been partially executed. Happily, the Board were able to dispose of it without loss to the Society, by agreeing to take certain quantities of the Bible when completed. They likewise procured by purchase a quantity of twenty-five cent Bibles, (with the imprint of the Society,) instead of manufacturing them from their own plates. The style purchased is likely to become a favorite at once, and can at all times be procured at advantageous rates. The further these inquiries have been pursued, the profounder has been the conviction that the true course of business was to rely mainly on purchases for supplies of stock.

The resolution, however, which embodies the chief practical suggestion of the Society's Committee," goes further than this: it interdicts manufacture in every case, except where it may be necessary to fulfil existing contracts, and proposes the sale of all manufacturing stock for the benefit of the Depository. It follows, of course, that the policy of purchasing exclusively is designed to be adopted.

Of the wisdom of this policy there would be no doubt in the minds of the present Committee, were it not that the Society is already in possession of stereotype plates, which it can contribute to the manufacture of books with possible advantage in a few cases. Whether in these cases the plates could be sold for such a price as would make an offset for this consideration, there has, as yet, been no opportunity to learn. Further inquiries should be made before a definitive conclusion could safely be ventured. This Committee are clearly of opinion that no more stereotype plates should be made or purchased by the Society, and they are likewise as clearly of opinion that none now on hand should be used in manufacturing unless in the special cases above named. All other plates it would be wise to dispose of as soon as they can be sold to advantage.

* Resolved, That the Board of Managers be instructed to discontinue all further operations in the business of manufacturing English Bibles, except what may be required by existing contracts; and that so much of the capital stock now on hand as is held for the purpose of manufacturing be disposed of in the most advantageous manner, for the benefit of the Depository.

Happily there is no necessity for a hurried settlement of the final question. The stock of sheets on hand remains so large that no immediate replenishment of the stock from the plates, about which doubts are entertained, is required, and the question can therefore be waived for a more intelligent decision. By a resolution of the Society, the Board of Managers are required to report in detail their doings upon this whole subject, at the next annual meeting, and in presenting such a report, they will have an opportunity to give the facts upon which the Society itself can judge in the case. It may be found that the best of the plates can be disposed of during the year at favorable prices, and, if so, it may be wise at once to cut off the manufacturing of Bibles and Testaments entirely, as proposed in the resolution under notice. Without doubt the progress of the mechanic arts, and the growing competition of business, point to this method as the ultimate policy of the Society, and it is equally clear that this policy will greatly simplify the business of the Society, without at all obstructing its efficiency or usefulness.

It should be mentioned in this connection that in the case of the 6½ cent Testament, there cannot be an immediate abandonment of manufacturing without essential loss to the Society. The Society has on hand a considerable quantity of paper purchased for an edition of 10,000 copies of the 12mo 25 cent Bible, under a contract for manufacturing, which was made before the annual meeting of 1850. The Board, in the belief that the getting out of so large an edition was premature, and that purchases of 25 cent Bibles could be made to better advantage, (as the result has proved,) induced the contractor for the printing, some time last summer, to abandon the contract. This he did in a most liberal and courteous manner, for which he merits the thanks of the Board. The paper, however, remained on hand, and being of peculiar and unsaleable size, it could be used to advantage only in the manufacture of the 6½ cent Testament. There has been already manufactured from it an edition of that Testament, of 10,000 copies, and another edition of 15,000 copies will be immediately required. The Board cannot expect to do better than to use the whole of this stock of paper in the same manner.

On the whole, the present Committee, under the considerations here named, are prepared to recommend the supplying of the Depository with Bibles and Testaments by purchase, as the ultimate policy of the Society, and that the present exceptional cases be left as above named, for maturer consideration. They recommend the manufacture of the 6½ cent Testament until the paper now used for it is exhausted, but that no other plates of English Scriptures be used until after the final report on the whole subject shall have been presented to the Society. They recommend further, that measures be taken to dispose of all manufacturing stock, excepting that above named, for the benefit of the Depository.

In regard to the remaining suggestions found in the report of the Society's Committee, the present Committee are not required to offer extended remarks.

In respect to the division of the business of the Society into Departments, their spheres and designations, and the methods of keeping accounts, this Committee would refer to the previous action of the Board covering the same ground, and reaching substantially the same results. This Committee, however, greatly prefer the designations adopted by the Board to those named in the report under consideration. "Foreign Department" and "Book Department" are not, as it seems to this Committee, expressive of the real distinctions in the case. This Society has a part of its work in supplying the destitute at our own doors, and these destitute increase with every ship-load of immigrants landed on our wharves. The Society makes its grants to the destitute at home, from the same resources from which it makes grants to the destitute abroad. A more general title, therefore, for the department into which funds are received, and from which funds are dispensed, for supplying the needy with the bread of life, seems preferable; and this Committee would recommend therefore an adherence to the titles which have been already adopted by the Board, viz., "Department of Donations," and "Department of Publication and Sales." They submit herewith an extract from a paper on the business arrangements of the Society, prepared by the Corresponding Secretary, at the request of the special Committee to whom that subject was referred, which paper was approved by the Board.*

The subject of quotas to Life Members and Directors demands the early and deliberate attention of the Board and the Society. The rapid increase of Life Members and Directors creates a claim upon the Depository of serious prospective magnitude, and indicates the imperative necessity of timely modification and relief. If quotas were called for only in the spirit of the grant,—to supply the destitute with the Word of God,—there would be less objection to the system. But it is difficult, not to say impossible, to restrain applications within those limits, as the experience of the officers of the Rooms too plainly testifies. This Committee recommend the thorough examination of this whole question during the year, and that it be reported upon to the Society at length for definitive action.

The Committee, in compliance with suggestions made at the last meeting of the Board, would here allude briefly to one or two points of practical importance in estimating the value and feasibility of a department for supplying English Bibles and Testaments, which are not fully developed and explained in the report presented to the Society.

It may be inferred from the report in question that the sum of $9,882 42, or, in-

* In compliance with the request of the joint Committee on the Rooms, the undersigned presents the following suggestions:

"The Donation Department, and the Department of Publication and Sales, in the operations of this Society, are essentially distinct, and should be so administered. The one is a facility through which the benevolent in the churches may reach the destitute, to supply them with the Word of God. The other is a commercial facility through which the churches may procure supplies of Bibles for individuals, families and Sunday-schools in good editions, and at prices only sufficient to pay the costs of production and incidental expenses.

"The two Departments may be for many reasons conjoined in one institution, but essentially they are distinct, and will best work together when that distinction is observed in the administration of affairs. To a certain extent this distinction has always been observed: There have been "Donation Ledgers" and "Book Ledgers," and the receipts into the treasury of the Society have been recorded as for the one Department or the other, according to the facts; but these receipts, when in the treasury, have constituted a common fund, and in appropriating money, that common fund has been drawn upon without any attempts, so far as I know, to discriminate between portions properly belonging to the one or the other, except in cases of specific designation by donors.

"I would suggest that the moneys belonging to the different departments remain distinguished in the treasury; and that each department be confined in its drafts upon the treasury to its own income. Thus the proceeds of sales would go to the replenishment and maintenance of the stock, and the moneys which pious benevolence has consecrated to the sacred purpose of supplying the destitute with Bibles, would go for that purpose only. The expenses of the departments should be judiciously defined, and each department, for its own expenses, be a debtor to its own treasury. In this way it could readily be ascertained at any time whether the Publication and Sales Department was self-supporting or not, and the churches could understand that the means of the Society to reach the destitute were at all times exactly according to the liberality of their contributions. By this system, moreover, the indefiniteness and doubt which hang over the Publication and Sales Department, and the prejudices thence arising, would be at once and for ever removed. I think the above suggestions easy of application, and would suggest that the Books be kept accordingly."

cluding the grants to Life Members and Directors $18,464 28, covers the full amount of gratuitous distribution of the English Scriptures accomplished by this Society during the term of its existence. In fact, however, this is but the smaller part of the work effected in that direction. This Society avoids direct grants for gratuitous distribution wherever this work can be effected by its Auxiliaries. The Society has Auxiliaries scattered over the whole country, some of which are large and efficient, and a very large amount of the sales to such Auxiliaries (which sales are the chief ones of the Society) has taken the direction of gratuitous distribution among the destitute. These Auxiliaries would not have existed, nor would their work have been done, but for the home work of this Society. In estimating, therefore, the amount of gratuitous distribution accomplished by the Society, the relations and labors of its Auxiliaries should not be overlooked. The only practical question would seem to be, so far as this particular point is concerned, whether the full amount of gratuitous distribution accomplished directly and indirectly by the Society and its Auxiliaries, has been an adequate and reasonable result from the funds and labor expended in producing it?

And this leads to another and more comprehensive inquiry, namely,—how is the term "losses," as applied to the home department of this Society, to be understood?—and by what rule is the profitableness of the department to be determined? The terms loss and losses are frequently used in the report of the Society's Committee in a broad sense, as they would be in reference to a commercial house existing for the sake of gains. There are, however, qualifications in the reasonings of the report, which indicate that the terms in question were not intended to be received without some abatement of their ordinary force. The point is so essential as to require further elucidation.

The department does not exist for pecuniary gains. It is not its purpose to manufacture Bibles at the lowest possible rates, and sell them at rates the highest possible, that it may grow rich in traffic. Its design is to reduce the price of Bibles and so to facilitate the widest possible circulation of the Word of Life. The practical question is, whether it does its work with prudent management and at reasonable cost? The aim should be to procure and sell good copies of the Scriptures at such rates as will meet the expenses involved, and no more. Whether this can be accomplished is the problem to be solved. It may fail of accomplishment from two causes, one of which is errors of management, the other the inevitable liabilities of trade. If Bibles and Testaments are manufactured or purchased at ill-judged rates, or in immoderate quantities and suffered to depreciate on hand; if depository expenses are unnecessarily large, and bad debts accumulate by indiscreet sales or inefficient collection, the failure of the experiment may be altogether the fault of erroneous administration. On the other hand, where all these mistakes are avoided with wise and scrupulous care, it may still be the case that the vicissitudes of trade in various ways may so affect the receipts as to show a deficiency in the end. Auxiliaries fluctuate in character, and there can be no insurance against bad debts. Sales will sometimes fall below anticipations, and stock will inevitably depreciate to some extent. These are liabilities which are necessarily involved in a department of publication and sale, and where no margin for profits is calculated, a deficiency is no improbable thing.

But is the deficiency necessarily a loss, furnishing an argument against the department? Other questions arise before this can be answered. Has the deficiency been occasioned by errors of management? If so, let these errors be corrected. To reform is better than to destroy. Lessons of experience are oftentimes necessary to indicate ways of improvement. But, supposing that even under the best conceivable management, a deficiency still occurs in the end. Then the question is, does the department work any advantage to the cause of Christ compensating for the expense of sustaining it? In answering this question, a wider range than the present Committee can now traverse opens itself. Why are Bibles and Testaments so cheap to-day in Great Britain and the United States, and wherever the English language is spoken? Why is it that they are found in bountiful abundance in common schools and Sunday-schools, and every where in the habitations of the poorest of the people? It is because Bible Societies, reducing the cost of Bibles, and calling into existence every where auxiliary societies for distributing them like autumn leaves, have carried forward their benevolent designs at an annual outlay beyond the receipts from annual sales. It is a glory of the age that Christian benevolence has sustained the expense. This outlay, however, should always be as economical as possible in relation to the work done. It may be believed that the improvements in the book-making arts which have occurred during the last few years, have rendered this outlay no longer necessary in the process of manufacturing Bibles and Testaments. In depository expenses, however, and sometimes to meet a deficiency occasioned by the feebleness or the breaking up of an Auxiliary, which has bought Bibles and Testaments and distributed them among the needy, but is now unable to pay for them, outlays may still be demanded, which create a just and reasonable call upon the benevolence of the churches and friends of the Bible. In relation to our own Society, suppose that after every wise step has been taken to procure Bibles and Testaments at the lowest costs,—steps which it is the settled purpose of the Board to take,—it should still be found that an outlay of a few hundred dollars per year is required to meet the expenses of the Depository; is there not a sufficient compensation for it in the fact that the existence of the book department keeps in life and operation a large sisterhood of Auxiliaries which, from Maine to Oregon, are distributing the Word of God? These Auxiliaries, by the very force of their relations to the Society, maintain a wide-spread sympathy with the great foreign work for which the Society was chiefly established, and which this very sympathy has enabled it so honorably to perform. To drop the book department, at the cost of dropping these Auxiliaries, should be an ultimate measure, adopted only after every improvement of practical administration has proved that the department is too expensive for the good which it accomplishes. Held in high esteem by the larger portion of the patrons of the Society, and constituting to them an essential link in the chain of their connection with its great objects, its abandonment would be an experiment too serious to be hazarded, except for the most imperative and manifest reasons.

In concluding this report, the Committee would re-express their profound sense of the importance of the matters involved in the present deliberations and doings of this Board. The Committee are glad to see, in the document submitted to them, a looking to remedies for existing evils rather than a breaking up of the depository. The patrons of the Society, however, have a right to look for and demand the most scrupulous economy in the administration of its affairs. Such economy should be, and will be, the studious care of the Board. By the system of business adopted the real condition and cost of the Department will, as stated in the Annual Report, be at all times apparent. If the Department can be made a vigorous and useful agency in spreading the Word of Life, at a cost which is reasonable, all will rejoice to sustain it; and to make it so will never cease to be the aim and care of the Board of Managers.

PREAMBLE AND CONSTITUTION OF THE AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY.

WHEREAS, the inspired Scriptures, the Hebrew of the Old Testament and the Greek of the New Testament, are the only authoritative Divine standard containing the revelation of God for the whole human family: And whereas, the Council of Trent, in 1546, declares that a Latin translation, called the Vulgate, "shall be held as authentic, and that no one shall dare or presume to reject it under any pretence whatever," and the Romish Testament was translated from the Vulgate into English, in 1582,—the translators declaring that the Vulgate "is not only better than all other Latin translations, but than the Greek text itself in those places where they disagree;" which assumptions have been generally repudiated by all enlightened Christians, not in the Romish Church:

And whereas, the American Bible Society, in 1836, approved of the following resolution, viz.:

"Resolved, That in appropriating money for the translating, printing, or distributing of the Sacred Scriptures in foreign languages, the Managers feel at liberty to encourage only such versions as conform in the principle of their translation to the common English version; at least so far as that all the religious denominations represented in this Society can consistently use and circulate said versions, in their several schools and communities."

The remonstrants against this resolution, believing it to be a virtual abandonment of the great principle of Protestantism, and the adoption of that of the Council of Trent, as well as a departure from the basis of the original compact of the Society, which states their object to be "the dissemination of the Scriptures in the received versions where they exist, and in the most faithful where they may be required," and having in vain taken every Christian measure to prevent its passage and enforcement, were constrained to form, provisionally, in 1836, and fully organize, in 1837, THE AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY: FOUNDED UPON THE PRINCIPLE, that the originals in the Hebrew and Greek are the only authentic standards of the Sacred Scriptures; and that aid for the translating, printing, or distributing of them in foreign languages, should be afforded to such versions only as are conformed as nearly as possible to the original text; it being understood that no words are to be transferred which are susceptible of being literally translated.

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I. The name of this Society shall be, THE AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY.

ART. II. It shall be the object of the Society to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures IN ALL LANDS.

ART. III. Each contributor of three dollars annually shall be a member; each contributor of thirty dollars, a member for life; and each contributor of one hundred and fifty dollars, a director for life. Life-directors shall have the privilege of participating in the deliberations of the Board.

ART. IV. All Bible Societies agreeing to place their surplus funds in the treasury of the Society, shall be auxiliaries, and the officers of such Societies shall, while in office, have the privilege of life-directors.

ART. V. A Board of twenty-five Managers residing in the city of New-York, or its vicinity, shall be annually elected to conduct the business of the Society, with power to fill their own vacancies.

ART. VI. The President, one Vice-President, the Secretaries and Treasurer, shall be members of the Board.

ART. VII. The Managers shall meet monthly, or oftener, if necessary, at such time and place as they shall adjourn to, a majority of whom shall be a quorum.

ART. VIII. The Managers shall have the power of appointing such persons as may have rendered essential services to the Society, either members for life or directors for life.

ART. IX. The Annual Meeting of the Society shall be held at New-York, on the day after the Second Thursday in May in each year, or at any other time or place, at the option of the Society; when the accounts of the Treasurer shall be presented, and a President, Vice-Presidents, Secretaries, Treasurer, and such other officers as they may deem necessary, together with a Board of Managers, shall be chosen for the ensuing year, by the members entitled to vote on the Treasurer's books the beginning of the said month. The Board of Managers shall have power to fill all vacancies that may occur in the executive offices during the year.

ART. X. The President shall, at the written request of six members of the Board, call a special meeting of the Board of Managers, causing at least three days' notice of such meeting to be given. He shall also, on the certified request of the Board of Managers, call special meetings of the Society, giving one month's public notice thereof.

ART. XI. The whole of the minutes of every meeting shall be signed by the Chairman and Secretary.

ART. XII. No alteration shall be made in this Constitution, except by the vote of two-thirds of the members of the Society present at an annual meeting.

ADDRESS

TO THE MEMBERS AND FRIENDS OF THE SOCIETY.

It has been customary at this season of the year to call the special attention of the friends of the Society to its condition and wants, for the purpose of maintaining a general familiarity with its operations and promoting contributions to its treasury. In conformity with that custom, and to promote those ends, the members and friends of the Society are now addressed.

While this Society has never been unmindful of the wants of our own country, and has endeavored to perform its share in the work of circulating the Sacred Scriptures at home, its chief design and labor have been to circulate those Scriptures in foreign and more destitute nations. Indeed, its distinctive existence and work originated in the necessities of that foreign labor, necessities which cast upon Baptists the imperative duty of sustaining their own translators and translations in heathen countries. In fifteen years the Society has expended in circulating the Scriptures in foreign tongues $218,887 01, an average of nearly $14,600 per year during the Society's whole existence. This money has been expended in translating, revising, printing, and distributing. Those whom it has reached and blessed with the light of life dwell upon every continent and upon the islands of the sea. The distant Chinese, the Siamese, the Burmese, the Peguans, the Talings, the Karens, the Assamese, the inhabitants of Hindostan speaking several dialects, have been reached by its benefactions, and thus to multitudes emerging from heathenism through missionary labors, the Scriptures have proved an inestimable blessing. The Society has done likewise a vast work in Europe, specially in Germany, under the wise and energetic labors of Mr. Oncken, where numerous churches have sprung up, in which are gathered thousands of converts illustrating a primitive Christianity and primitive ordinances. And these efforts to spread the light of life go on still, enlarging by every success, and demanding more and more the energy of Christian zeal and devotion. Translators, revisers, printers, and distributors are engaged at this moment in all these countries, sustained by the funds of this Society; and even while the eye of the Christian reader rests upon this page, the precious gift which the Society dispenses, by the labors of colporteurs and missionaries, is perhaps falling for the first time into the hands of benighted souls whom it will make wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.

The impossibility of carrying forward the missionary enterprise without the accompanying work which this Society performs, is matter of frequent consideration among the friends of missions. While it is true that the conversion of the world could not be expected under a system of labors which should be confined to the circulation of the Scriptures without oral instruction, it is true on the other hand that oral instruction without the circulation of the Scriptures would be as little likely to attain that result. What God hath joined together man may not put asunder. He that sent forth his disciples to preach the gospel, himself bade the people "search the Scriptures." In the midst of the zealous missionary labors performed by the Apostle of the Gentiles, that inspired teacher declared the Sacred Scriptures to have been given "that the man of God might be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." The rule of Christ seems to be that the preacher of the gospel should bear the Scriptures with him, as the source and authority of his own doctrines, and communicate them to those whom he teaches, that they too may be established in the faith. Setting at naught this rule, the Romish Church proposes to the heathen a semblance of Christianity, and makes impressions easily, it may be, upon minds which feel the need of something better than heathenism, but works no permanent spiritual benefit, for the reason that she withholds the Word of God. Here lies the secret of her missionary failures in the East, in Canada, Mexico, and South America. Protestant missions remain permanently beneficent in their effects, because they bear to the heathen the Scriptures,—God's revelation to all men. The progress of Christianity in the English race attests in like manner the general truth here stated. Our fathers advanced in Christian character and in social elevation precisely in proportion as the fountains of divine truth were unsealed and permitted to pour out their sanctifying floods upon the people. A free Bible made a Christian and free people.

The labors of Missionary Societies and Bible Societies are therefore joint labors. Neither can dispense with the other. In Europe this Society carries on its work in part independently, through its own agents, but in the more distant countries of the East it avails itself of missionary laborers. In pursuance of the divine plan, it enables the preacher to follow up his oral teachings with the distribution of the Word of God. The Society has sometimes reached the heathen with its benefactions through English Baptist missionary operations in India, but its main work has been carried on through the missionaries of the American Baptist Missionary Union. Through these missionaries it expended last year $14,750, supplying the full amount required by the necessities of that body in the department of Bible operations, and enjoying, as one of its labors for the year, the high honor and privilege of providing the whole Karen Scriptures for that singular and most interesting people.

But the work of the Society is sadly incomplete. The day still remains in the far distance when every man shall possess, faithfully translated into his own tongue, God's revelation of mercy to sinners. Millions will descend to the grave unblessed with its light, uncheered by its hopes, before that day dawns. It is the work of this Society to bear some part in hastening its dawning. To enable it to do so, it makes this appeal to its friends. Year after year they have sustained the work which it has in hand,—the same work which the Society has always performed it is still performing, with the same scrupulous regard to the fidelity of translations, with even more urgent calls, and with the accompanying blessing of God. This work is strictly a practical one;—its sole design is to give God's Word to those who are perishing for the lack of it. It cannot be doubted that those who love Christ will find their hearts in sympathy with such a work, and it is hoped that their contributions to the treasury will be early and abundant.

S. S. CUTTING, Cor. Sec.

AMERICAN BAPTIST MISSIONARY UNION.

The Home Secretary of the American Baptist Missionary Union, under date of Sept. 13, informs the Board that the necessities of the Union for the year, in the department of Bible operations, will be about as last year. Some of the reports have not reached the Mission-rooms, and yet, from the information already gained, he has "no hesitation in saying that the following sums will be needed during the current financial year:—

" For Translating, Printing, and Distributing Scriptures in Chinese, .	$3,000
" For Translating and Distributing Scriptures in Assamese, . . . . .	1,250
" For Printing and Distributing Scriptures in Teloo goo, . . . . .	1,000
" For Translating and Printing in Siamese, . . . . .	2,500
" For Revising, Printing, and Distributing in Karen, . . . . .	2,500
" For Distributing Scriptures in France, . . . . .	1,000
" For Distributing Scriptures in Germany, . . . . .	1,000

He says, "You will regard this list as including the wants already ascertained," and anticipates that this amount will be considerably increased on the receipt of further intelligence.

Particular attention is requested to the above schedule, as it indicates the specific objects for which funds are appropriated to the Missionary Union by this Society. It will be observed that the schedule embraces TRANSLATING, REVISING, PRINTING, and DISTRIBUTING. The Society pays the salaries, as translators, of Rev. Dr. Dean and Rev. Mr. Goddard in China, Rev. Mr. Brown in Assam, Rev. Dr. Jones in Siam, and Rev. Mr. Mason in Burmah. The matter of printing includes the heavy cost of paper, as well as the process of printing and binding. The whole work of the Society, as a coöperator with the Missionary Union, is therefore one of indispensable necessity, and if the Union fails to receive the necessary appropriations for Bible purposes specifically, it has no resource left but to fall back upon its general funds, which are needed and designed for other uses. Hitherto this Society has stood fast by the Missionary Union, meeting faithfully its calls in this department, and it is to be hoped that the members and friends of the Society will enable it to perform this service for the present year with equal promptness.

ORISSA.

It will be remembered that last year Dr. Sutton commenced anew the work of Scripture distribution in Orissa, giving to it his personal attention. Dividing the province into four parts, he hopes to traverse the whole in five years, visiting cities, towns, and hamlets, and giving oral religious instruction at the same time that he dispenses the Word of Life. This work is carried forward by this Society, at an expense of $1,000 per year. It should be here stated, and it is stated with pleasure, that many Free Will Baptist brethren in this country have assisted with cheerful liberality in enabling the Society to sustain this work. Extracts from Dr. Sutton's letters will be found on subsequent pages of this Periodical Paper.

EUROPE.

The work of the Society proceeds in Europe with unabated interest and encouragement. The Board have already made appropriations amounting to $1,000 to Mr. Oncken, and about $2,500 more, in addition to what he will receive on account of books donated, will be necessary to sustain the Society's operations in Germany. These operations embrace the expense of printing and distributing through colporteurs. The Society supports near twenty colporteurs, who traverse the countries of Germany over distances reaching to 500 miles, always making it their business to impart religious instruction while distributing Bibles and Testaments. Their labors have resulted in spiritual harvests which call abundantly for grateful acknowledgments and continued prayers and contributions. Extracts from Mr. Oncken's late letters are given on subsequent pages.

Dr. Devan's letters from France have been almost painfully importunate, but the funds of the Society have not yet enabled the Board to make appropriations in that direction. The increasing demand for the Scriptures, which has been observed of late in France, is one of the best omens of the times in that country.

SPANISH AMERICA.

Applications from Spanish America have been made to the Board for Scriptures, and a small appropriation has been granted. It can hardly be doubted that this field will be one of growing interest, and call for larger expenditures.

DOMESTIC APPROPRIATIONS.

These appropriations, as was anticipated, will be larger than those of last year. The call for German Scriptures is especially large, and more active measures will need to be taken to supply this growing class of our population with the Word of God. A striking feature in the correspondence of the Society during the last three months relates to the destitution of the German population of our own country, and the importance of reaching them through colporteurs and by other available channels. The Home appropriations of the Society for the present year will require to be at least $3,000, to meet with any tolerable adequacy the increasing demands upon the Society's benevolence.

It will be seen from the above summary statements that the operations of the Society for the year require an advancing liberality on the part of its friends, like that which has distinguished the Society's past history. That the work of the Society grows is but God's answer to our prayers, and his blessing upon our labors. The true method of showing our gratitude for his mercy is to follow the lead of his Providence, and perform with cheerful alacrity the growing tasks which he imposes. It is doubtful whether our contributions at all merit the name of sacrifices, and even if they did, how poor a return would this be for the precious blood through whose efficacy we have hope of eternal life.

The condition of the Treasury Sept. 1, as compared with last year, was as follows:—

Receipts for five months, ending Aug. 31, 1851, .....	$10,367 18
Receipts for same period, ending Aug. 31, 1850, .....	9,965 66
In favor of 1851, .....	$401 52

Letter from Rev. WILLIAM DEAN, D.D., to the Corresponding Secretary.

HONG-KONG, 23d May, 1851.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—Your very gratifying letter of Dec. 24th, 1850, with one of a previous date, have just been received by the "Hersalia" as the overland mail is about to close; but I am happy of an opportunity thus early to acknowledge the favor, though I may not be able at length to reply to all your inquiries. In relation to the condition and progress of Chinese translations generally, much might be said, and much in various ways has been done; but the actual progress in the work, and the amount of translation really accomplished, may be told in a few words. You need not be informed that it requires no little amount of labor and time in preparing to begin a work of this kind, and that its progress, to be satisfactory, must ever be slow. The committee formed at Hong-Kong in 1843 of various Protestant missionaries for the revision of the Scriptures in Chinese, has been engaged in the work proposed up to this time; but from the early proceedings of this committee the members of our mission, who were present at its organization, saw good reasons to decline any coöperation with the committee, and have since had neither connection nor responsibility in its proceedings. Recently the members of the London Missionary Society have withdrawn from the committee, and have, as I understand, organized a committee composed of members of their own Society, and are proceeding with their translations at Shanghai. Before leaving the committee they had jointly gone through the New Testament, but the results of their labor, so far as I learn, appear unsatisfactory to their constituents at some of the other stations. The missionaries at Fuchau, I am told, decline coöperating with any committee in the work. There are now connected with the Shanghai committee, since the withdrawal of the London missionaries, Dr. Bridgman of the A. B. C. F. M., Mr. Shuck of the Southern Baptist Convention, and Mr. Culbertson of the Presbyterian Board, who are proceeding with their revisions. How far the various members of their respective missions coöperate with them in the work I am not informed. Questions have arisen, particularly the one in relation to the translation of God into Chinese, which have awakened much discussion, and some, we fear, of an unprofitable character. I am happy to say that this has never been a question on which there has been a diversity of opinion among the members of our mission. We have individually, according to our circumstances, been engaged in endeavors to furnish a faithful and intelligible version of the Bible to the Chinese. Mr. Goddard at Ningpo has translated and printed the Books of Genesis and Exodus, and I have also gone over the text of these two books and added explanatory notes, which are now being printed, Genesis at Canton and Exodus at Hong-Kong. I am now spending a portion of each day on the Gospel of Matthew, with the view of preparing it for publication, having the text alone, as well as with the commentary in a separate form. Mr. Goddard is also at work on the New Testament, and I have before me his revision of Matthew and John; and it is proposed to prepare and print a version of the New Testament entire as soon as possible, and such portions with notes as we may be able, finding that the publication of notes not only enables the Chinese to understand the text, but aids us in correcting the text, by calling forth remarks from Chinese readers. As Mr. Goddard has devoted himself from his arrival in the East to the work of translation, and as several portions of the New Testament have at different times been carefully revised and published by him and myself, it is hoped that the time may not now be distant when we may be able to present to the Chinese the entire New Testament in a form in which we may feel some good degree of confidence. Feeling our need of Divine aid, for which I trust you will devoutly pray, we go forward tremblingly, but with the hope that our service may be accepted of God, and result in good to the heathen.

Sincerely yours,

W. DEAN.

Letter from the Rev. Dr. SUTTON to the Corresponding Secretary.

CUTTACK, [Orissa,] May 29, 1851.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—In my last letter I engaged to note down any instances of good that might come to my knowledge arising out of the distribution of the Word of God. The following are furnished by our brethren. They serve to illustrate what we have often expressed, that “Though seed lie buried long in dust,

It sha'n't deceive our hope.”

Mr. Buckley writes: “At a place in the Hurrikurpore district, a man came to Seebo Pátrá, one of our native preachers, and asked for a book. He sat down, and our native brother had a long conversation with him. He said that he had read some Christian books, and by reading them he had seen the evil of things in which he formerly delighted. He perceived that the worship of idols, gooroos, devotees, &c., was sinful; and that he had now no pleasure in their observances, festivals, and such things. He felt much concern as to his future condition. He had read of the great judgment-day, when the sheep and the goats would be separated,—the sheep placed on the right hand, and the goats on the left of the Judge; and as he read fear seized his mind. ‘Oh! if I should be placed on the left hand at that day,’ he exclaimed; ‘if I should, hell will be my portion.’ Our brother adds: ‘After some further conversation, the Word of Christ and several tracts were given him.’”

Should some Christless Christian read this page, let him ask himself, ‘And if I should be placed at the left hand of the Judge at that day, what will my portion be? Where shall I find my everlasting place, I who have heard of Christ only to neglect or reject him?’ Pitiable is such a heathen’s case; but how wretched is the prospect for one who has lived without Christ in a Christian land!

Last year, I believe, Mr. Miller of the Pipplee or Jugernath district reported a case that came under his observation of an old gooroo or spiritual guide to a number of disciples being benefited by a Gospel of Matthew. It appears that thirteen or fourteen years ago a copy of an edition printed at Serampore, under my superintendence, the year before we had a press of our own, was given to a man at the car-festival at Pooree. He carried it from that carnival of Satan to his village, eighteen miles distant, and there gave it to his gooroo. The old man was interested and impressed by the perusal of it, and he was especially struck with the account of Christ's death on the cross. Ultimately ten persons renounced Hindooism among themselves, and professed to receive the Lord Jesus as their teacher. They have endured much persecution; but having become acquainted with the missionary, their courage has revived, and the old gooroo appeared especially hopeful. I have the happiness now to quote Mr. Miller's words in his last report of his station:—

"One of the party baptized was the old gooroo of Kanas, to whom reference was made last year. His baptism took place in the presence of a goodly number of spectators, near his own house, several of whom had been his disciples, and all had worshipped him as a god. The scene was novel and exciting. He continued to reside at Kanas, and, according to his ability, to hold forth the Word of Life amidst a people sitting in darkness and in the region of the shadow of death." Let us hope he will prove the first-fruits of a goodly harvest from that hitherto barren desert. Long since has that tract of country been traversed by the devoted Bampton, but it has remained for the still small voice of God-inspired truth to break up the fallow ground.

The same brother mentions another case of good arising from our tract and Scripture distribution at the Pooree saturnalia. To me these hopeful cases are especially interesting. Depressing indeed has been the work of preaching and distributing books at that head-quarter of the wicked one, and many a tear and many a sigh have escaped us as we have preached the Word amidst much contention there. Thanks be to God, that amidst all those raging floods of iniquity, a little under-current for good is yet discoverable even there. Mr. Miller says:—

"While laboring at the Chundan festival at Pooree, we met with a Brahman from the neighborhood named Balabhadra Sahu, who from a volume of bound poetical tracts had obtained an amount of knowledge that astonished us, and excited the indignation of our hearers. We have subsequently twice visited and spent several days at his village, and from our frequent interviews with him have been led to regard him as a true and an intelligent, though in some respects feeble, disciple of our Lord Jesus Christ. He almost daily makes known the gospel in his own or in an adjoining village. Many of his neighbors often assemble at his house to read the Word of God or Christian tracts, and are well informed on the great and saving truths of Christianity. During our stay we were continually engaged in conversation with persons who came to the tent; and at night Balabhadra and his friends came and sat conversing on religious subjects, and singing Christian poems or hymns till a late hour. With two persons named Banamali and Loknath we had much conversation. They have not only the clearest views of sin and its desert, with the plan of salvation, but also, with Balabhadra, profess to be trusting in the Lord Jesus. Believing them to be fit subjects for baptism, we urged their paying attention to this ordinance; but were met with a variety of reasons for its postponement, of no real force, but which appear very formidable to a poor Hindoo. We do not however despair of their eventually coming out. No, our hope is in God; who 'having begun a good work in them will perform it until the day of the Lord Jesus.'"

During the year 1850 there were twenty-five baptized in our southern stations, and three by our American brethren in the northern. Several more have been baptized since this year has commenced, which will be reported in due time.

Here I think I may close for this report. Our special work of Scripture distribution however is not to be judged of by such occasional instances of personal benefit, though these are valuable as proofs that our means are adapted to the end sought; that what is thus seen to be efficacious in various isolated instances may be so in vastly augmented numbers of cases. I look at judicious distribution of the Word of God as upon the rolling on of a mighty river, or the annual bestowment of our rains: some branches of the great current may wander into sandy deserts and yield no results, and many clouds may drop their treasures on barren rocks and fruitless wastes, yet of the grand general beneficial effects no man doubts. It were an impeachment of Divine wisdom and goodness to do so.

I am daily engaged on the Harmony of the Gospels. The two first forms are gone to press, and I hope to have all ready for the ensuing cold-season campaign.

Believe me, yours faithfully,

A. SUTTON.

DR. SUTTON ON TRANSLATION.

In an earlier letter, dated April 25, in reply to some suggestions as to reports put in circulation in this country on Dr. Sutton's views of translation, to the prejudice of this Society, Dr. Sutton says:—

“In relation to the important matter noticed in your letter, I cannot delay assuring you that I hold sacred the wishes of the Society. No copy of the Scriptures, or any portion of them, has ever been printed or published under my editorship, with baptizo and its cognates transferred, or translated in any but one way. The word we have used is dub, the same, I suppose, as the Dutch dup, and I can assure you that no copy will be published under my charge at variance with your known principles. I believe that my colleagues and myself are perfectly unanimous in this matter.”

Letter from Rev. J. G. ONCKEN to the Corresponding Secretary.

HAMBURG, July 9th, 1851.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—In my last, I was not able to give a reply to your question as to the amount required during the present year for carrying out the operations of the A. and F. B. S. in Germany. Since then I have examined into our wants, and find that I shall require about 9,000 marks more, or about $2,616. This will cover the expenses of the two editions of the Testament in German and Danish, of 15,000 copies each, in as far as the paper and printing are not yet paid for.

Our colporteurs at Hamburg meet with much encouragement in the circulation of the Gospels among the Austrian soldiers, and one instance of usefulness has already come to our knowledge. The soldier to whom I now allude is a native of Galicia. He has purchased a pocket Bible, attends at our chapel, and is not only convinced of the errors of Popery, but also that he is a sinner, and that salvation is only to be obtained through faith in Christ. He has enjoyed a liberal education, is acquainted both with the German and Polish languages, and has translated one of our German tracts into Polish, for the benefit of his Polish comrades who do not understand German. As his time of service is expired, he intends to quit the army, and we hope that, by the grace of God, he may yet become useful to his countrymen.

At a village near Tilait, between Königsberg and Memel, a pious schoolmaster has recently left the Lutheran Church and joined our community. This brother has been, and still is, actively engaged in the circulation of the Scriptures, and I would recommend him to the Board to be engaged by them as colporteur for that part of Prussia.

The powerful political reaction which is setting in like a flood, must ere long circumscribe our efforts in the spread of the gospel very much, and we ought therefore to embrace the opportunities which are still presented to us with more zeal than ever. I trust therefore your Board will sustain us, to the utmost of their power, to enrich the millions on the continent with the Word of Life, certain that in due time we shall reap, if we faint not.

Yours in the gospel of Christ,

J. G. ONCKEN.

Letter from Rev. W. P. UPHAM, Missionary among the Cherokees, to the Corresponding Secretary.

BAPTIST MISSION, Cherokee Nation, March 3, 1851.

DEAR BROTHER :—Your kind letter of 28th Sept., 1850, was received in due course of mail, and the box containing your very acceptable and timely appropriation of Bibles and Testaments for gratuitous distribution among the Cherokees arrived a few weeks since, having been detained by low water on the Arkansas. Notwithstanding the shortness of time since the arrival of the books, they have gone off rapidly, and to such persons as will, I think, be much benefited by them; I mean Cherokee youth who have learned to read well the English language, and are quite advanced in English literature, but who have not been, heretofore, in possession of the precious boon of Heaven,—the Words of Eternal Life. There are connected with the National Schools in the Cherokee Nation 553 pupils who read the English language, and the number of such is rapidly increasing. There are thousands not connected with the schools, both old and young, who speak and read the English, and very many—perhaps most of them—exclusively.

How important, while we are unsealing the fountains of English literature to these “sons of the forest,” that we endeavor to cultivate their hearts as well as their intellects, or “their last end will be worse than the first.” I know of nothing calculated to accomplish so desirable an object, in the present state of advancement among this interesting tribe of Indians, more than the circulation of the Word of God, especially in the English language. It has been to me a source of pain to see how little has been attempted in this important department of missionary labor among this people, and I have determined to exert myself to the utmost to circulate the Holy Scriptures, especially among the Cherokee youth; and it has given me much encouragement to find what little I have been able to do meet with so much gratitude from those who have received the Bibles and Testaments, and such words of encouragement from your Board.

Your affectionate brother in Christ,

WILLARD P. UPHAM.

Another appropriation of Bibles and Testaments was made on the receipt of this letter, and before this time they have doubtless reached their destination.

AUXILIARY SOCIETIES AND OUTSTANDING ACCOUNTS.

AUXILIARY SOCIETIES and individuals indebted for books, are reminded that our credits are limited ordinarily to four months; and as we pay cash for our paper, printing, binding, &c., it will be seen at once that we need returns of money thus expended at the earliest possible period. Will our friends take immediate measures to cancel outstanding claims?

Remittances should be made if practicable in current money, or drafts made payable to the order of our Treasurer, Nathan C. Platt, Esq., No. 20 Maiden Lane, New-York city.

The stock of Bibles and Testaments at the Depository is ample, and the prices have been revised. Particular attention is requested to the quality and price of our 25 cent Bible, (24mo.) and to a small Reference Bible, (32mo.) which will be ready in about one month.

PERIODICAL PAPER

NEW ARRANGEMENT

OF THE PERIODICAL PAPERS, AND THE ANNUAL REPORTS OF THE SOCIETY.

In August last, it was determined that henceforth the Periodical Papers of this Society should be issued quarterly, the first of January, April, July, and October, of each year; that the July number should be a double one, and contain the Annual Report; and that a sufficient number of these papers be reserved and put up in suitable covers at the end of the year, to be entitled Annual Transactions of the American and Foreign Bible Society.

It is believed that a threefold benefit may be secured by this arrangement.

1st. The requisite information in regard to the various and important operations of the Society will be diffused at regular and not remote intervals throughout the year.

2d. It may reasonably be expected that these brief papers will be more thoroughly read by all to whom they are furnished than would the one large pamphlet containing the Annual Report, and other documents usually accompanying it, which has the further disadvantage of being issued contemporaneously with similar Reports from all the other benevolent organizations, and, like them, remains for the most part, we fear, unperused.

3d. The saving of expense. It is believed the present arrangement, while really more effective than the former, will not cost more than half as much. This, at a period when incidental expenditure in some organizations of this character has become so unreasonably large, will be hailed, we trust, as an indication of earnest desire to exercise a rigid economy by those to whom the management of this Institution has been intrusted. The Annual and Life Members and Directors, to whom these Papers will be regularly forwarded as they are issued, will readily perceive the desirableness of preserving the successive numbers, that they may be united at the year's end, and kept for future reference.

*.* This notice should have accompanied the last Periodical Paper, but was inadvertently omitted.

CHANGES IN CORRESPONDING SECRETARY AND AGENTS.

During the last quarter, several important changes have occurred in the persons serving the American and Foreign Bible Society. The Rev. S. S. Cutting, Corresponding Secretary for the last eighteen months, so urgently pressed his resignation, that at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Managers for November, it was reluctantly accepted, with appropriate expressions of high regard for his fidelity.

The Rev. Rufus Babcock, Corresponding Secretary from 1842 to 1846, was unanimously reappointed to this office.

The Rev. Horace Seaver, the laborious and successful agent of this Society for many years, in different parts of New-England, has been obliged by infirm health to resign; and his place has been supplied by the well-known veteran, Rev. J. R. Graves.

The venerable and esteemed Rev. James Reed, agent in Western New-York, has felt compelled, by the infirmities of age, to decline further service, and has at our instance nominated as his successor the Rev. Jesse Elliott, who has been promptly appointed, and enters on his duties with the opening year.

Our well-tried and universally acceptable agent, Rev. J. J. Woolsey, has also been constrained, from infirm health, to resign for the present; and the Rev. Joseph Wilson, of Maine, has been named as his successor.

The regret experienced in view of so many substitutions is mitigated by the assurance that every one of these, retiring from the posts they have so well filled, bear with them a cordial and strong desire to promote still the objects of this noble institution, in which their confidence is undiminished. May their successors as faithfully and successfully fulfil their duties!

HOME PROCEEDINGS.

THESE are of a twofold character: the raising of requisite funds, and the supply of the destitute with the sacred Scriptures. As far as possible, it seems desirable to combine these operations, so that each auxiliary society or contributing church or individual contributor may be induced to become directly or indirectly the almoners of their own bounty, and either with their own hands, or by those whom they may employ, from confidence in their discreetness and fidelity, may wisely dispense the bread of life to the needy. It is gratifying to witness, from year to year, an increase in these efforts. Far as they may still fall short of attainable completeness and perfection, it is cheering to witness any thing like an approximation to it. Our method of systematic supply of plain, cheap copies for the destitute, through the Life Members and Life Directors, would reach nearly 20,000 Bibles each year, or 80,000 Testaments, provided every one should exercise their right to draw the full number to which each year they are entitled. Now, when it is remembered that this is only one source, among many, of the supply of the home destitution; and that a large portion of the Bibles and Testaments distributed in former years by this and kindred Societies, are still in existence, doing their important work, reflecting on those around them the light of life, it cannot but call forth many thanksgivings to God.

The immensely greater destitution of the foreign field, for the means of supplying which we are entirely dependent on the benefactions of those in this favored land, renders the work of collecting the requisite means for supplying those who seem in the providence of God dependent on us alone for the Scriptures,

OUR CHIEF WORK.

How to perform this service in the most thorough and economical manner, becomes, therefore, a prime desideratum. After giving to it as a practical question our most earnest and long-continued attention, we beg leave to submit a few leading principles or fundamental axioms, which, it seems to us, must commend themselves to every benevolent, considerate mind.

1. This giving the bread of life to the starving, perishing millions of the whole human family is so obviously and certainly the duty of evangelized communities, that no arguments are needed to enforce it. Let any Christian man, or woman, or child deliberately repeat the Saviour's golden rule, and think of its bearing on this subject, and there is but one way in which the question of personal duty towards the destitute can be answered.

2. From its reflex influence, it is immensely desirable that the largest number possible should be induced to coöperate in this good work. If the means requisite for supplying the whole unevangelized world with the Bible could be furnished by a few princely donations, it would not be half so great a blessing as to have each individual among us intelligently and conscientiously contribute to this object as God hath enabled him. The sympathies awakened, the prayers called forth in all this host, and the higher regard each one would cherish for this priceless volume, after considering and effectually feeling for the wretchedness of those destitute of it, would be a rich remuneration for the most generous outlay.

3. This religious charity adapts itself to the integral conception and various capacity of every class of contributors. In this respect it has peculiar and easily appreciated advantages over most other objects. To support a missionary or to educate one, or to send back to Liberia an expatriated African, and provide him the means of beginning life hopefully there, each requires a pretty large sum, and may discourage one of small means. But there is scarce a child so poor but can give a Testament, or the one-sixteenth of a dollar to procure one, for a destitute child or man. While thus adapting itself to the humblest capability of doing good, at the same time it lifts its appeal to the man of large resources, and presents before him the blessedness he may diffuse through a whole village or city by supplying to each family a Bible or a New Testament. Or it may show him how certain classes of German or Dutch or Swedish or Norwegian immigrants may be reached by this divine and life-giving Word; and he, while now balancing the problem whether he shall invest his gains in certain stock, which promises a large pecuniary return, or shall cast this portion of his bread upon the waters to find it after many days, may leap up to contemplate, with a heaven-inspired joy, how much good his large offering may at once confer upon an extensive community!

But how shall this appeal for requisite contributions be carried round and applied to all that should feel its power! Our reliance is twofold:

1st. On the faithful and laborious men employed by the Society as soliciting agents, whose service is a hard, and to many would seem an unwelcome one; but these beloved brethren have been induced to undertake it rather than the heathen should perish without the Scriptures.

2d. We rely on the pastors and the churches of this favored land, in many cases, to do this work of annual collecting for this object, without waiting for the visit of an agent. Or, in case they have not done this, and the agent comes with his appeal, that they promptly coöperate with him, and help him to finish his work in the most expeditious and successful manner.

May we venture a suggestion or two in reference to the collection of funds, either with or without agents? Will not the pastors, or the Church Committee on Benevolence, or whoever has the management of this part of the business, be induced to consider whether once a year it may not be practicable and desirable to present this Bible cause so thoroughly and faithfully to the whole congregation, that not one man, woman, or child, unsupported by charity, shall fail of being called on to contribute something—more or less, according as God hath prospered them—to give the Bible to those in perishing need of it? If the pastor would preach a sermon on this subject, setting forth clearly, and bringing home to the heart and conscience powerfully the claims of this object of benevolence; and then, by any wise system which he and his deacons, or his committee, or the church might devise and adopt, this appeal could be minutely and faithfully presented to every individual, would not these several advantages be secured? 1st, Much more help would be secured, at a time when it is urgently needed. 2d, The several benefactions would greatly bless the donors; in watering others, their own souls would be watered. 3d, The Bible, the Testament, whether in the family or the Sabbath-school, would be more adequately prized, and used with a more becoming sense of its value. 4th, Many more prayers would be offered, in fervent sincerity, for a blessing to accompany these offerings.

Brethren, is not the experiment worth trying? If it is, will you promptly carry out these suggestions? We have no doubt that our agents would all most heartily welcome such a disposition, wherever it might be witnessed. If you can do and will do the work promptly and efficiently, without their help, they will be thankful, for there is not one of them but has a larger field than he can possibly cultivate. But we solemnly entreat you not to offer the excuse that you will do the work without them, and then, as hundreds have, leave it undone!

Some system of benevolent contributions seems absolutely indispensable and we most admire the combination of order with a cheerful adaptation to circumstances, so that every claim shall be met in the best time and manner.

Several small sums have also been received, during the time above specified, from other States, formerly connected with us in Bible operations. But as these have generally withdrawn, and commenced organizations of their own for this purpose, to which their contributions are now chiefly made, and as we have no soliciting agents within their bounds, it might seem unfair to present their contributions side by side with those which we have here given.

CONTRIBUTIONS FOR OUR BIBLE SOCIETY GREATLY NEEDED NOW.

We fear that an erroneous impression extensively prevails, in regard to the present wants of our Bible cause. Many of the good and true friends of this object are seemingly taking it for granted that supplies will come from some quarter, so as to enable the Board to make its usual appropriations to the foreign fields, which are entirely dependent on our aid. Such friends ought to know that three quarters of the financial year is gone, and less than one fourth of these appropriations have been made, and our treasury is empty! Never was there a time when more urgent appeals for aid to supply the nations with the Word of Life were pressed on us. Will you not all help us now to meet these demands? In common with other Societies, we have felt the pressure of the money market for the last few months. Do not let us begin our retrenchment with robbing God!

FOREIGN OPERATIONS.

During the last quarter, there have been appropriated towards the supply of the foreign field, the following sums:

October. For the Karen Scriptures,.....	$1000
November. For Rev. Dr. Sutton, to aid in the publication and distribution of the Scriptures in Orissa,.....	1000
December. To Rev. Mr. Oncken, for Bible distribution in Germany, 1680

Contrasting this with the twenty-three thousand dollars of foreign appropriation made the last year, and the certainty that a larger rather than a smaller sum would be required for the present, (as is fully explained in the address of the late Secretary, Rev. S. S. Cutting, in the Periodical Paper for October,) may indicate the necessity of more generous and prompt contributions, if we would not let the drafts on us for the supply of God's holy Word be dishonored.

ANOTHER REVOLUTION IN FRANCE.

Just as this number is going to press, the public are astounded by another bloody revolution or usurpation in France. "Bibles or bayonets must rule." That fickle, irreligious, and thoroughly demoralized people have refused the former. The Jesuits have recently enforced the exclusion from public circulation of any other version than that of De Sacy. When they feel themselves strong enough, they will doubtless, like the Pope at Rome, forbid that also. Put out the light of divine revelation, seems to be the universal dictate of this mother of abominations.

What, then, can be expected, after the light is thus extinguished, but that usurpation and perjury the most shameless, in high places and in low, will universally prevail! We do not think this is the end of the movement. It seems only to have prepared the way for and rendered necessary a more thorough reform. Nearly all Europe is seething in the great caldron; ebullitions will rapidly follow each other, till the God of heaven sets up his own kingdom in the hearts of men, and thus prepares them for self-government. The Bible is the efficient instrument. May it have free course, and be glorified!

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.

LETTER FROM REV. J. G. ONCKEN TO THE CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—A prolonged absence from home has prevented me from addressing you since July 9th. Since then I have received Mr. Ward's letter, dated August 2d, conveying the resolution of the Board of August 1st, by which one thousand dollars were appropriated for Bible operations in Germany, and two hundred dollars to defray the traveling expenses of the colporteurs, who were to attend the Convention in this city. I beg to present my warmest acknowledgments to the Board for these renewed proofs of their deep interest in the Lord's cause in Germany.

Almost all the brethren engaged by your Board as colporteurs were present at the above conference, and took part in its deliberations. Many of them were at the same time messengers from the churches, and admitted as such to the conference; and the remainder were requested, by a resolution passed by the assembled brethren, to share in the transactions of our sitting. After the close of the conference, I had long and interesting interviews with these brethren at my own house, when many important practical points were discussed, which, when acted on, will greatly facilitate their labors. One desirable result that has already followed is, that since their return to the various stations, they have kept and sent in their journals with much greater regularity; and having appointed my daughter to translate them, you may expect to be supplied with these interesting papers more frequently than hitherto. Before separating, the brethren agreed all to meet at a throne of grace, at six o'clock on every Monday morning, to implore the Divine blessing on their work.

It was more especially during our conference that we deeply felt how much we owe to your Society; and we cordially unite in offering to the Board, and through them to all our brethren in the United States, our warmest gratitude for their continuation of the good done to our unhappy country.

The labors of your colporteurs are of far greater importance than is generally supposed. They are not merely vendors of the Word of God—this, indeed, alone would be important enough to employ forthwith as many more as already occupy the field—but these brethren are at the same time actively engaged in other ways in spreading the truth. Some of them—yes, the greater part—are zealous preachers, tract-distributors, and teachers in Sabbath-schools; and the rich blessing with which God crowns their labors, is abundant evidence of his gracious approval. All we need is more men to labor in the field, which is constantly enlarging.

My apprehension with regard to a renewal of religious persecutions was, alas! too well founded. Brother Fasching, who has labored nearly a year at Breslau, and among the Silisian mountains, has now arrived here, to consult with me what measures to adopt as to his proceedings in future, as he is constantly subjected to annoyances from the authorities at Breslau. My fear is, that he will have to abandon his post there, and ultimately even to emigrate, in order to evade a service of eighteen years in the Austrian army. Throughout Prussia, our colporteurs are greatly impeded, by the interference both of civil and ecclesiastical authorities; while, on the other hand, the colporteurs of the State Church party, and those connected with the "Innere Mission," (home mission,) are in every way protected and aided by government. Well, we do not envy a community that can exist only so long as Cæsar lends his aid; and in the midst of wrongs, and in spite of every effort made to crush the truth as it is in Jesus, we smile at our foes, knowing that no weapon formed against Zion shall prosper. As to the future, we have to expect nothing less than that the most stringent measures will be adopted against us. May we in the meanwhile stretch every nerve in the Redeemer's cause! More than one half of the ninety thousand Gospels, Epistles to the Romans, and Psalms, have been circulated, and the greater part of the Austrian military quartered here supplied with them. The edition of fifteen thousand copies of the Danish Testament will leave the press in six weeks at most.

I am now in great want of an immediate remittance, having had no further opportunity to draw on your treasurer than for an additional amount of one hundred and eighty dollars, which was paid here during my absence by P. H. Kruse, September 15th or 16th, 1851, and for which my assistant, Mr. Braun, gave him a receipt, without any further draft on the treasurer. Please to pay the above amount, when presented. I have already advanced nearly four thousand marks; so that I require a remittance of at least fifteen hundred dollars, although two thousand would not be too much to meet the current expenses. Upwards of eleven thousand marks have been received during the past nine months, which have been paid out on account of the Society. I am also greatly in want of an edition of five thousand copies of the School Bible, the plates of which belong to the Edinburgh Bible Society. The Board made a grant of this edition last year; but when I was in Scotland last autumn, the Committee of the Edinburgh Bible Society authorized me to issue seven thousand five hundred copies of that Bible, which induced me to give up your edition of five thousand copies to that Society. Now, however, the Committee cannot meet the demand, and I beseech your Board to permit me now to print this edition of five thousand copies, at their expense, which will be three hundred and eighty pounds. This Bible begins now to be introduced into the schools; a glorious triumph over the spurious Scriptures, with the Apocryphal books, as they are circulated by the German societies.

I trust you will not keep me long in suspense, either as to the remittance of a bill, or as regards a favorable reply to my application for the edition of School Bibles.

The journals, &c., sent some time ago, have, I trust, come to hand. My daughter has again several ready for transmission, which will be sent by the first opportunity.

With affectionate regards to yourself and the esteemed Board, I am,

Yours in the best of bonds,

J. G. ONCKEN.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM REV. J. GODDARD TO THE CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

DEAR BROTHER:—My former communications announced the publication of Genesis, (edition, four thousand,) and I think also of Exodus, (edition, three thousand,) which was completed in December last. Since then I have not published any portion of Scripture, but have nearly completed the preparation of Matthew, Luke, and John's Gospels. There being so much similarity in the several Gospels, I desired to prepare them all, and compare them together; also to have free consultation with brother Dean, before publishing any one of them. We hope, however, soon to have all the Gospels ready for publication, and then go on with the remainder of the New Testament. The work of translation into Chinese is encumbered with difficulties of which little idea can be formed, except by experience. I sometimes fear friends in America may think the work progresses very slowly; but now is not the time to send out hasty, crude translations; we already have a supply of such; now is the time for the slow, patient, discouraging work of perfecting a translation of the sacred oracles into this difficult language. The attempt to get a version for universal usage in China, by means of a committee of delegates, proves an entire failure. Aside from the discussions and divisions relative to the word for God, very few are satisfied to use the translation of the New Testament which has been prepared by that committee; and I know not how many different translations are now in progress. It certainly was scarcely to be expected that a version would have been prepared by a committee appointed as that committee was appointed, which should give such extensive dissatisfaction. It seems to have been the design to prepare a work in the highest degree classical, according to the concise, obscure style of the classics; and to this object both perspicuity and fidelity to the original have often been sacrificed. As a reward for such a sacrifice, the work is no more acceptable (if even as acceptable) to the most learned readers, than it would be if written in a much plainer style. The work will, however, have its use, and probably an important use, in the work of Chinese translations.

As to the Old Testament, you are probably aware that the missionaries of the London Missionary Society long since withdrew from the committee, and are going on with a version by themselves. The Bishop of Victoria has more recently, I am informed, directed all missionaries of the Church of England to withdraw from all connection with the committee, and also to abstain from the use of any translation which has yet been prepared. I believe, however, the direction has not yet taken effect; and whether it will go into effect, is uncertain. It is impossible yet to foresee the result of all these efforts at translation. We trust the good Lord has an eye constantly open on his Word, and will watch over it, and cause it to be faithfully made known to all people. The present divisions will probably prevent any one version from claiming to be "the" version, and thus leave the way more open for improvement and further efforts, and perhaps thus in the end lead to a better translation than could now be expected.

Please accept, in behalf of your Society, many thanks for the efficient aid you have given in carrying forward this work. Many portions of Scripture published by the assistance of your Society, are already in the hands of this people; but we trust in due time larger portions, and even the whole Word of God, will be given them through your instrumentality.

With kind regards, and hoping often to hear from you,

I remain, dear brother, yours truly,

J. GODDARD.

Our brethren of the English Baptist Mission at Calcutta seem to be zealously and perseveringly following up the great work of revising and publishing, in the various languages of India, the words of life for her perishing millions. We select from the last number of the London Missionary Herald the following items from the communication of the Rev. Mr. Lewis:—

"I may mention, as the first item of intelligence, that the Persian Testament which I was engaged in editing, has been completed now about three weeks. I intended to draw up an account of this work to send you, but, on consideration, it appeared to me that the subject would not possess much interest, and a few facts, which I will here mention, are probably all which you will care to know.

"About ten years ago, an edition of Henry Martyn's Persian Testament was published by the brethren, for the Bible Translation Society. It was adapted to our convictions of truth by Dr. Yates, and he also made a few other alterations of no very great importance. This edition being exhausted, and another being resolved upon, I undertook the charge of carrying it through the press. I very soon found that it abounded with mistakes, by which the sense was very frequently destroyed. These, for the most part, had been made in the first Calcutta edition—from which Dr. Yates printed his—and they were retained in his reprint."

"In order to weed out the errors, and to make my edition as correct as possible, I compared the greater part of it with the Greek original, and with all the Persian editions I could obtain, and I hope I have succeeded in making the work tolerably accurate. I will send a copy for the library as soon as I have an opportunity.

"The edition of the Hindostani Testament, to which I have alluded in former letters, is nearly finished; next month, probably, it will be printed off. Brother Wenger, probably, will inform you of the progress of the Bengali revisions. I render him all the assistance in my power, and have derived nothing but pleasure from my connection with him in the work."

MISCELLANEOUS.

PLEA FOR CHINA.—The following extracts from an address of the Rev. Dr. S. Baker, of Nashville, Tennessee, before the Kentucky and Foreign Bible Society, will be read with interest. We regret being obliged to curtail it so largely.

Resolved, That the Empire of China, from its advancement in civilization, the magnitude of its population, and the extent of its territory, presents a most inviting field for Bible distribution, and the God of providence is calling loudly upon Baptists to occupy that field.

China, in the first place, presents a most inviting field, from its advancement in civilization. The first missionaries of the cross, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, directed their efforts to the evangelization of civilized, in preference to savage nations. The arts and sciences had so quickened intellect and roused its powers into action in Greece and Rome, that it was an easy task to convince minds, thus enlightened, of the folly of idolatry; and the cities of Greece and Rome were the great centres of influence from which they could work out upon the rest of mankind.

The Chinese are a reading, and, compared with other pagan nations, an enlightened people. It is true that the educational acquirements of the vast majority are very small. But few of the villagers can read intelligently the simplest tract; but in the cities, the great centres of influence, the proportion of such readers is much larger. And the fact that no person can be a candidate for any office, from that of the petty constable to the highest office under government, unless he can write an essay on the duties of that office, will have its effect in securing a reading people; and the men generally in their large cities are prepared to read the Scriptures when they are put into their hands.

And among the Chinese there is a great readiness to admire every thing of a literary kind, and to honor those who are in possession of such attainments, whether they happen to be natives or foreigners. And the literary merits of the Bible will do much to commend it to such a people. It is a book of thought, full of hints, sketches, outlines, facts, interesting history, admirable biography and it affords an exhaustless store-house of instruction. How sublime the topics on which the Bible treats! What a dignified simplicity in its manner of handling them! How noble the mysteries it develops! What illumination it throws on points the most interesting to creatures conscious of immortality! How curious and riveting is the history which the Bible gives us of the infancy of man, the cradling, so to speak, of the earth's population! What a noble system of jurisprudence we have exhibited in the statute-book of Moses! What a fine specimen of powerful eloquence Paul gives us as he stands pleading in bonds at Agrippa's tribunal! What sublimer poetry can we find than in the rapturous strains of Isaiah, sweeping the chords to Zion's glory! If you want the pathetic, read the lamentations of Jeremiah. If you want the soft and tender in poetry, listen to the strains of the sweet singer of Israel; and if you want the glow of fancy, and strength of description, read the book of Job. The Bible excels all human composition in the beauty and sublimity of its style. And where will you find such a pure and elevated morality as that which breathes through the sermon of Christ on the mount! Nothing like it can be found elsewhere; and the literary merits of the Bible will commend it to such a reading and enlightened people as the Chinese.

And it is an important consideration that the Chinese mode of writing is current and legible, far beyond the limits of China, throughout Cochin China, Corea, and Japan, although they have different spoken dialects. A book written by a master mind in the English language exerts an influence on many millions; and the Bible, faithfully translated and widely circulated throughout China and contiguous countries, must exert a tremendous influence.

The resolution I have offered speaks of China as presenting an inviting field for Bible distribution, from the magnitude of its population and the extent of its territory, as well as from its advancement in civilization. From an actual census taken a few years ago, the population of China was set down at three hundred and sixty-four millions, and Morrison and Gutzlaff were both of the opinion that this is not an over-estimate. To satisfy himself of the accuracy of the estimate taken by the order of the Emperor, Gutzlaff took the pains of taking the census over again himself, in particular districts, and in no instance did he find the population of such districts over-estimated. The missionaries and colporteurs who are engaged in Bible distribution in China, are closely surrounded by these teeming millions. They are crowded into such narrow limits that no long journeys are required to be taken to secure access to millions. They swarm around them on every hand, affording every facility that we could ask to distribute among them multiplied copies of the Sacred Scriptures.

And in such enterprises it has pleased God in his providence to call upon Baptists to act as pioneers. He selected a Baptist to lead the way in preaching the gospel on the day of Pentecost. Peter was a Baptist. He taught—not that baptism was an act of parental dedication—but the answer of a good conscience towards God by the resurrection of Christ. The salvation of Noah and his family in the ark, Peter taught, was a figure of the way in which we are saved by the burial and resurrection of Christ. The ark was for a time surrounded with water from above and beneath, but it outrode the storm, and those who were in it were brought safe to land. But there was no other mode of deliverance. Swimming was useless. A boat was a vain thing for safety, and in vain was salvation hoped for from the tops of the highest trees or the highest mountains. Those only were saved who were covered over by the ark.

And this was a figure of the way in which we are saved by the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. Christ received not a mere sprinkling, but a baptism of sufferings. He was overwhelmed with anguish. He came into deep waters of affliction, where the waters overflowed him, but he outrode that storm of Almighty wrath, and emerged from that sea of sufferings by his glorious resurrection. And of this baptism is a like figure. It is another sign of the same thing. It shows forth in emblem that burial and resurrection which is so closely connected with our salvation. And by faith in this, the believer professes in baptism to have a good conscience, a conscience from which the burden of guilt has been removed. Peter taught that baptism was a profession of a conscience made tranquil towards God by the resurrection of Christ, and such a profession infants cannot make. Peter therefore taught Baptist doctrine.

And Paul, the great missionary to the Gentiles, was a Baptist. He taught that we are buried with Christ by baptism unto death, that, like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, "even so we also should walk in newness of life."

And William Tyndale, the first one who translated the Scriptures from the Greek into the English language, was a Baptist. In a work which he wrote, entitled, "The obedience of a Christian man," it is clearly taught that believers are the only subjects, and immersion the action of baptism.

And William Cary, the leader in the great modern missionary enterprise, was a Baptist.

And who was the father of the British and Foreign Bible Society? Joseph Hughes, a Baptist. Who was the father of the Sunday-school Society in England? William Fox, a Baptist.

And Baptists cannot be considered as intruders in the work of Bible translation and distribution in China, for although Morrison was the first Protestant missionary to enter China, yet our own Dr. Marshman preceded him a long time in the same kind of labor. On the plains of India, under great disadvantages, he effected a translation of the Word of God into the Chinese language—a translation of the Scriptures which is still esteemed of high value. And we wish now to follow up the work which this learned and pious servant of the Lord so ably commenced.

STATED MEETINGS OF THE BOARD.

THE Board of Managers meet on the Thursday after the first Wednesday of every month, at the Rooms, 350 Broome street, at 4 o'clock P.M.

The Committee of Publication and Finance, every Monday immediately preceding the meeting of the Board, at 4 o'clock P.M., and the Committee of Agencies the next day, (Tuesday,) at 4 o'clock.

AUXILIARY SOCIETIES AND OUTSTANDING ACCOUNTS.

AUXILIARY SOCIETIES and individuals indebted for books are reminded that our credits are limited ordinarily to four months; and as we pay cash for our paper, printing, binding, &c., it will be seen at once that we need returns of money thus expended at the earliest possible period. Will our friends take immediate measures to cancel outstanding claims?

The stock of Bibles and Testaments at the Depository is ample, and the prices have been revised. Particular attention is requested to the quality and price of our 25 cent Bible, (24mo,) and to a small Reference Bible (32mo,) recently issued.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE ENSUING ANNIVERSARY.

By invitation of the First Baptist church in Cleveland, Ohio, the Fifteenth Annual Meeting of the American and Foreign Bible Society will be held in their house of worship, on Thursday, the 18th of May next. It is intended to make this first experiment of holding the anniversary of our institution west of the mountains, an occasion of unmingled and unwonted religious interest. For this purpose, special care has been devoted to the selection of preacher and speakers for the occasion. And as we shall expect that many hundreds of the friends and supporters of this Society, who have never before attended one of its meetings, will this year be present, we hope that many fervent prayers will be offered, that the Holy Spirit may crown the services with special tokens of divine favor.

The entire North-western States of our Confederacy, with Canada West, will find the beautiful city of Cleveland more than usually convenient, by its proximity and the facilities of access for their assembling with us. It is intended to secure, on the railroad and steamboat routes, the usual reduction of fare to those attending the anniversary, of which suitable notice will be given in the several local papers.

The exercises as arranged for this occasion will occupy three sessions: Thursday morning, afternoon, and evening.

The Anniversary Sermon may be expected from Rev. R. H. Neal, D.D., of Boston. The President of the Society, Rev. Dr. Welch, of Brooklyn, will deliver the usual address on taking the chair. The reports of the Treasurer and of the Board of Managers will be read; and spirit-stirring addresses may be expected from Rev. Messrs. Magoon, of New-York; J. L. Burrows, of Philadelphia; Moore or Cheney, of Ohio; Cressy, of Indiana; Miner, of Illinois; and Hamlin, agent for Michigan and Wisconsin. Our beloved missionary brethren, HASWELL, from Burmah, and LORD, from China, will also give great additional interest to the services, by rehearsing what they have seen and done in translating and distributing the Word of life among the heathen. We hope it may prove to be an occasion of deepest and most profitable interest; so that God may be glorified, and a fresh impulse be imparted to the efforts for the diffusion of His holy Word.

Special Meeting of the American and Foreign Bible Society in New-York.

AFTER the above arrangements for the ensuing anniversary had been made, and, to some extent, announced, an unexpected necessity arose for calling a special meeting of the Society, giving, of course, the month's notice which the constitutional provision requires. The following is the official call of the President:

A special meeting of the American and Foreign Bible Society will be held in the city of New-York, on Wednesday, April 14th, 1852, at 8 o'clock P. M.

The Board regret the necessity for this call of the Society at a period so nearly approaching its anniversary, and yet more deeply deplore the unpleasant and embarrassing circumstances that render it indispensably requisite, having been required to vacate the rooms in which their business has been for so many years conducted, by the violated proffer of the parties by whom they were not only tendered for permanent occupancy, but importunately urged upon your acceptance; and hesitating as to their own constitutional competency to determine a question that necessarily involves the surrender of rights hitherto regarded as unquestionable, and the incurring of additional annual expenditure, the Board must solicit in this exigency the counsel and direction of their constituency.

Under the circumstances, a numerous attendance of the life directors and members is earnestly requested. This is the more important, as the ordinary business of the Society will be transacted at this meeting, in anticipation of the public religious celebration of the anniversary to be held at Cleveland, Ohio, on the 18th of May next. By order of the Board: B. T. WELCH, President.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

5,000 DOLLARS ADDITIONAL NOW NEEDED.

THOUGH from many portions of the home field the contributions the present year have been liberal, yet a combination of causes have diminished the aggregate of our receipts, and fears are entertained of our inability to meet even pressing calls made on us from Germany, France, and our Eastern Missions.

This paper is issued a little earlier than the usual time, on purpose to present an earnest call on all our friends for prompt assistance. If the three or four thousand life members and life directors to whom it is sent would each help a little themselves, and secure the help of friends in their several neighborhoods, and send in their contributions immediately, this exigency would be met; and on the 8th of April, when the last meeting of the Board during this financial year occurs, we shall be able to meet the demands on our Treasury. While our brethren ONCKEN and DEYAN, and the missionaries in Burmah, in Assam, in Siam, and in China, are waiting in hope, let us cheerfully and promptly do what we can, that the perishing may have the bread of life. Will the churches and individual contributors remember, that what they do for this year must be done quickly!

AGENCY LABOR, AND ITS ESSENTIAL PREREQUISITES.

We are not about to enter on the vexed question of the necessity or desirableness of the service of agents in procuring means for the vigorous prosecution of the several objects of religious benevolence. Many an hour we have listened to the eloquent discussion of that question, or read the profound demonstrations of those who fancied they had fully settled it either in favor of or adverse to such an agency. The discussion, whether oral or printed, has generally been wound up very much as ELIAS HICKS, the Quaker preacher, sometimes finished his discourses, by assuring his hearers that "if the world was as good as it should be, there would be no need of hiring priests." So, if the churches, the deacons, and the pastors, would faithfully and wisely do their duty, there would remain very much less need of agents. But we all know they do not, and will not immediately; hence the present need of such men's service. Nor is it quite right to put this down as "a necessary evil." Father Bennett did not think so when he engaged in it. Nor, in the review of his work, near the termination of his course, did he regard his twenty years of agency toil as a necessary evil.

In noticing the disposition, too frequently manifested in different quarters, to estimate with parsimonious exactness the per centage which the cost of agency labor and expenses bears to the net pecuniary results, it is not adequately considered that a good, large-hearted minister of Christ, loving the prosperity and peace of Zion, the conversion and sanctification of souls, cannot travel and labor in any district of our country, month after month, without doing great good, besides the amount of pecuniary collections which he may secure.

A wise and considerate deacon of one of the most flourishing churches in this city, (Wm. Colgate, Esq., then our Treasurer,) was wont to quiet our apprehensions on this dreaded topic of percentage, half a score of years since, by the sage remark: "Get good men for your agents, and they will be worth more than they cost to the churches, over and above what they collect."

With this remark in mind, we have since been permitted to watch the operation of agencies from different stand-points, as pastor, or agent, or Secretary of some one or other of our benevolent Societies, in three fourths of the States of our Union; and every year's and month's experience has fully confirmed its justness. But it is of utmost importance to secure brethren for this toilsome service who have the right qualifications for general usefulness in it, and the right spirit and disposition in prosecuting the work. Least of all is the agency a fit place for one who wearies or becomes impatient with the toils and infelicities of pastoral labor. Such an one will not, cannot succeed in the prosecution of an agent's work, and will only embarrass the cause he proposes to serve. The American and Foreign Bible Society has been anxiously seeking for the employment of such men, and only such, as would deserve and be likely to secure the welcome and the love and confidence of both churches and pastors. To a very good degree they have succeeded in obtaining such men; and desire in devout thankfulness to acknowledge the good Providence which has watched over and guided this difficult part of their operations.

In illustration of some of the above hints, we wish to present in this connection a letter which has fallen into our hands, from an agent just retiring from an important field to his successor. Though written without the slightest thought of publication, it will well reward perusal, not by agents only, but by the churches among which they labor.

AN AGENT'S LETTER TO HIS SUCCESSOR.

Norwalk, Ct., Jan. 20th, 1852.

MY DEAR, YET UNKNOWN BROTHER IN CHRIST:—The Secretary of the American and Foreign Bible Society invited me to an interview with you at the Bible Rooms, New-York, thinking that my acquaintance with the duties and obligations now imposed upon you, and the field assigned you, might enable me to impart some information tending to facilitate your highly important labors. Failing to enjoy the anticipated interview, and feeling a deep solicitude for your success, allow me to suggest, in this way, a few thoughts bearing upon your mission.

I can assure you, my brother, that I view the cause in which you now embark to be of such magnitude, and so intimately identified with the best interests of men, as to take great pleasure in aiding it in any way in my power. It would, however, be difficult in the extreme to define with any precision the duties now devolving upon you. There is such an endless variety of detail connected with your official engagements, as to be understood and appreciated only as you move forward in the work. All I shall attempt therefore in this communication, will be to point out some few matters of a general character, which may peradventure not be altogether unworthy your notice. At any rate, you will appreciate my motives in writing, though you may deem the topics suggested irrelevant to the purpose.

First of all, then, my dear brother, be impressed with the sentiment that your duties are strictly religious and spiritual. The work to which you are in divine providence called, though it be financial, is nevertheless not secular. It is labor directly bearing upon the spreading glory of Christ and the salvation of souls. Lose not, I beseech you, sight of this fact. Let the consideration that yours is strictly a spiritual service, devoted to the cause of holiness and truth, be present with you at all times. A consciousness of being engaged in one of the most successful ways for effecting the redemption of the world cannot fail to inspire you with ardent zeal, enduring patience, and Christian boldness, in the prosecution of your onerous yet laudable and important labors. Under such a persuasion, you will not only feel yourself allied to the spiritual reign of the Son of God, but also that your success, other things being equal, will be in just ratio to the reliance you place on the special assistance which shall be given you from on high. Then will you go forth, not in your own strength, but to acknowledge with David, that "It is God that girdeth me with strength, and maketh my way perfect."

Again: As you are to represent the Bible cause, it will be taken for granted that you understand every essential thing connected with its principles and aims. An intimate acquaintance with the policy and general operations of the Society is so obviously necessary as perhaps not to call for any particular mention. And yet there are some peculiar circumstances which may justify me in calling your attention to the necessity of making yourself familiar with the entire character and doings of the Society. We live in an imperfect world, and have to do with imperfect beings; and you must not be surprised, though called to meet those who are not too good to asperse the noble cause you serve. Objections, misunderstanding, and even misrepresentation, you may occasionally have to contend with. These, of course, you will seek to rectify, and you will endeavor to set in order the things that are wanting. But how can you rightly discharge these duties without a full and impartial acquaintance with the history, uniform policy, and character of the institution?

Again: In soliciting present aid, endeavor to lay a broad and permanent foundation for future success. Bear in mind that your influence among the brethren is not ephemeral, but as enduring as life. Impress them, therefore, with a sense of the sacredness of your work. Seek to inspire those whom you meet with high and hallowed motives of action, and to give from principle, not from caprice. Five dollars obtained by proper means, and given under the force of correct motives, so as to leave a savory influence over the mind of the donor, are worth more to the cause of benevolence than thrice that amount secured in a way calculated to embitter the afterthought of him that bestowed it. Let every visit prepare the way for another, as the only hopeful method of retaining the confidence of the friends, and inclining them to be permanent supporters of the cause. One of the happiest reflections I now have, arising out of my connection with the Bible cause, is the fact that, on every succeeding visit, I met with a more hearty welcome, until with many my coming was a matter of conversation and even of pleasing anticipation.

In this connection, suffer me to state further, that I have not ventured to resort to any scheme for the sake of obtaining funds that would not comport with truth and propriety. You may for once or twice secure a greater amount of means by practising some kind of artifice or trickery, than by a straightforward course; but be sure your chicanery will sooner or later be detected, and then it will do immense injury to the cause you seek to promote. Besides which, all stratagem is infinitely beneath the glory and dignity of the enterprise in which we are engaged, as well as inimical, utterly so, to the profession and character we sustain. We should seek to make our people a Bible-benevolent people, and prevail with them to give on Scripture principles. In order to this, we must inculcate the doctrine of benevolence as taught in the Word of God. In that storehouse of truth you will find the most successful arguments. And whatever is drawn from the Bible has amazing weight with the people. The truth is, the disciples of Christ want nothing so much as Biblical instruction. Pastors are at fault in this matter. Not one in twenty give their congregations any thing like an adequate idea of what is devolved upon them in sustaining our benevolent institutions. This deficit must be supplied by judicious agents, wisely chosen and sent forth as the messengers of the churches.

Once more, and finally, I remark, that we should cherish and exercise a generous good-will and hearty coöperation with other benevolent Societies. The Book we seek to disseminate inculcates such a charity, and binds us to its observance. We should avoid by every possible means the impression that we are exclusively the friends of the Bible cause. There is danger of our becoming thus exclusive, from the fact that we are devoted to one member of the great family of benevolent instrumentalities. It has been my misfortune, at times, to follow in the wake of some agents whose policy of success seemed to be, to advance the interests of their own object at the expense of those of another Society. Such a course is not only mean to the last degree, but it is an act of great injustice to coördinate institutions. It is befitting our objects, character, and aims, on every suitable occasion, to advocate the claims of kindred Societies, and recommend them to the patronage and confidence of the churches. The Saviour's golden rule will be our best guide in our relations to the various benevolent Societies.

I have now said in substance what I should have been glad to have had an opportunity to speak to you face to face. In some respects, I should much have preferred an interview with you at the Rooms. Wishing you all possible success, I subscribe myself,

Your affectionate brother in Christ Jesus,

J. J. W.

A FEW EXTRACTS FROM AGENTS' REPORTS.

REV. J. TEASDALE, Alton, Illinois, after explaining the difficulties in his way, from the early closing of the rivers and the almost impassable state of the roads, thus proceeds:—"I shall take special pains to induce the churches to do their work, as it respects our cause, by some kind of system, under whose operation we may have a regular contribution annually, even when an agent does not call. There is a great work to be done among the Western churches, in training them to habits of benevolence. The temptation is so strong to invest all their money in some speculation, that they are quite inclined to plead poverty. Occasionally you may require to be reminded that I am not laboring among Eastern churches, which have their comfortable meeting-houses, but among Western, where these are yet to build, the members themselves in debt for their farms, &c., &c. But I assure you this Western country will be something by-and-by; and its influence will be felt, not only in the political, but also in the religious world.

"I doubt very much whether the Society has a more important field of operations than is to be found in this Western country. The German population here is no inconsiderable portion of our inhabitants, and demands our special attention. Their condition is in some degree known to the Board. In some of the counties of this State they control the elections, and have it in their power to elect just such persons as they please. In some of these Western cities and towns they elect their mayors and town officers. How important is it that they be brought under proper religious influences! They must have the Word of God, to make them even good Americans. This is a fact I endeavor to keep before the minds of the people, so as to interest patriots as well as Christians. If the American and Foreign Bible Society desires to retain its hold upon the Western churches and people, it must go into the work of distributing the Scriptures among the Germans. . . . .

"I expect to collect, if my life and health are spared, thousands of dollars in the West, for the circulation of German Scriptures both in Germany and in this country." Indeed, I accepted the agency upon the avowed purpose of the Board to go as largely into the circulation of the Scriptures among the Germans as the means of the Society would justify. . . . .

"We have here a German Mission Society, whose Board is located at St. Louis, which will ultimately, I hope, become one of our great national Societies, through whose missionaries we may circulate our German Scriptures. I would not advise the establishment of little depositories all over the country. My plan is to have but one dépôt, at St. Louis, from which point Bibles may be sent over my entire field with the greatest facility. We need not have a large stock on hand at once, as the facilities are such for getting them from New-York."

[The Board promptly responded to the proposition of our esteemed brother Teasdale, and authorized the establishment of the small depository in St. Louis, as he requested. May its influences be extensive and salutary!

The Society has one or two colporteurs employed among the German population of Canada West; from one of whom, little skilled as yet in the use of the English language, we have received an interesting report of his labors, trials, and successes in diffusing Bibles and Testaments among his destitute countrymen; visiting them at their homes, and drawing them into conversation on the subject of religion; gathering their children into Sabbath-schools, and furnishing them with Testaments for carrying them on. In future numbers we will endeavor to find room for some extracts from his letters.

Our efficient auxiliary, the New-York City Bible Society, now supports two col-porteurs, a German and an Irishman, entirely devoted to labors among their respective countrymen. The former, in one of his recent monthly reports, stated that five hundred families had been visited by him, and many of them supplied with the Scriptures. In this way, if in any, are our foreign population to be saved from ruin themselves, and from ruining our country also.]

REV. E. H. HAMLIN, Jackson, Michigan, accompanying his report for last month, says:—"This, you will say, is a small sum for the amount of labor performed. Let me say, however, that at no former period of my agency have I been so anxious and laborious to advance the Bible cause. I have spent nearly one month in Northern Indiana. I did not expect large returns; but as no agent had visited that part of the State, and probably could not, I deemed it best to revive the interest there. I found the churches disposed to favor the cause, but can do but very little at present, beyond their own boundaries. Churches here are advancing to a condition where they will render aid to every good cause. I attended at the dedication of two houses of worship, and a third was dedicated immediately after I left. The roads all the way were exceedingly bad, and much of the time was stormy. . . . In the State of Michigan the financial affairs are peculiarly hard. Wheat, which is our staple product, is unsold, except so much as is forced into market to pay the most urgent demands; and many prefer borrowing for present wants, to marketing their produce at ruinously low prices. Very little money is in the hands of the people; but I hope better things for the future. . . . I could dispose of Bibles and Testaments to a considerably greater extent, if I had the means of carrying them; but you will see the difficulty when I inform you that I am often compelled to travel on foot and carry my baggage a distance of ten or fifteen miles. Thus, week after week, I travel long distances, but find compensation in the good which I trust is effected."

REV. JESSE ELLIOTT, in his first report from Western New-York, reports having entered his field more than two months after his appointment, on account of his sickness, but as soon as his health would permit. He found the Bible Union's agents traversing his field in every direction, striving to paralyze the operations of our Society. Bad traveling—severe weather—money scarce—the Missionary Union making strong appeals for aid in their extremity; "and as there was no agent of the American and Foreign Bible Society for the last three months, no preparative work had been done." Yet in the month he "traveled five hundred and fifty miles, preached sixteen sermons, besides other addresses in behalf of his object, collected near two hundred dollars, besides pledges to be soon paid of a considerable amount, as well as secured the coöperation of several friends of the cause."

REV. L. J. HUNTLEY, in Central New-York, for February, reports the collection of $483.39, in the midst of a fierce opposition, and many ungenerous misrepresentations. Some are satisfying themselves by saying "they will give to neither Bible organization, while the opposition between them continues." [The plea of the infidel against all religion; and of the Roman Catholic against all Protestants. Very specious, however, and likely to have great weight, both because it seems to emanate from our love of peace, of concord, while really it masks and excuses our covetousness.]

REV. F. MERRIAM, Maine, reports, for January, a fine field in the eastern portion of the State for Bible distribution; some can be sold, but many must be given away to the destitute and the necessitous. Hears sad complaints about the salaries of officers, in our own and other Societies. Hopes the most rigid economy will be practised in all departments of our labors. Hopes all our agents are economical and industrious; finds five hundred dollars per annum salary enough for him; with that can give away sixty dollars a year to benevolent objects, and have a little left. "You see in what littles I gather up the funds, and must know there is some labor about it." As an illustration of this last remark of our brother, we had the curiosity to count the items of receipts in this one month's collection. They are found to number 253, varying from 3 cts. to $24 in amount, and forming an aggregate of $365.95.

Our venerable and long faithful volunteer agent in North-eastern Ohio, REV. LINUS AUSTIN, of Akron, in sending us the amount of his collections, takes occasion thus to remark:—"I am sorry there is a division among the Baptists, and another Society for the revision of the translation of our English Bible; but I am more grieved to see such a bad spirit manifested as I am obliged to see when I read the publications in our papers. I read of a division between Paul and Barnabas—the contention so sharp that they parted; but they kept about their work, and rejoiced in each other's prosperity, and I am sorry it has not been so in our case. If I think I owe the Bible Union one hundred dollars for their object, why should I fail to give your Society as much or more than before, for their important work? I have the happiness to believe your Society has done, is doing, and will do great good; and should the other succeed in doing a work well pleasing to God, let us all rejoice in it. I therefore say that both Societies will share in my prayers, my good wishes, and in my donations."

[If all possessed this spirit, how great would be the improvement! The opposition, the collision, the strife, has all originated with the innovators and would-be supplanters of the American and Foreign Bible Society. Such at least is our full conviction. For defending ourselves when indispensably necessary, we can scarcely be blamed, for we must contend earnestly for the truth. If we have been provoked into an improper and unbecoming spirit in any case, we would be humbled before God and our brethren for the wrong, and strive in future to be more guarded. In the mean time let all candid, impartial minds remember that to others, not us, belongs the blame of waging an unscrupulous war upon a rival institution; seeking, right or wrong, to supplant and "drive it to the wall," as the Bible Union says of us.]*

* There does not seem to be any inherent necessity of collision and strife between the Bible Union, formed on account of a supposed necessity of preparing and publishing a new or amended version of the Scriptures in the English language, and the American and Foreign Bible Society, having its hands full of other work; but the Bible Union, from first to last, as the circulars of its Secretary show, has earnestly labored to hinder the work of the Bible Society, and to prevent, if possible, the contribution of a dollar to its treasury.

In this opposition, the New-York Chronicle, as the special organ of the Bible Union, has borne a conspicuous part, by misrepresentations and insinuations against the officers, the agents, and the auxiliaries of the American and Foreign Bible Society.

The favorite idea of late with the Chronicle is, that the Bible Society is useless. For thirteen years, up to May, 1850, it was one of the most important and valuable of all our organizations. Now, though it is doing the same work in the same way it did then, it is entirely unnecessary! So say the President, Dr. Cone, the Secretary, Mr. Wyckoff, and the chief advocate of the Bible Union, Mr. Judd! What noble consistency!

For these men to oppose and assail the Society which they used to praise and advocate, while it has not changed at all, (indeed, because it would not change at their bidding,) this, in their esteem, is meekness and forbearance in perfection! And if we venture to remonstrate, and show them their inconsistency, this is deadly persecution!!

Will they or their friends try to reconcile these inconsistencies? We confess our inability to do it.

BIBLES AND TESTAMENTS,

In different languages, in all desirable varieties of size, price, and adaptedness to the tastes and wishes of purchasers or distributors, constantly on hand, and orders, small or large, promptly executed, at the Rooms of the American and Foreign Bible Society.

As recommended in the last Annual Report, the Society has confined itself almost exclusively to purchasing from other Bible institutions, or from individual publishers, instead of increasing their own expense and labor by attempting to compete with them. Such is the excellence and cheapness of these issues, that any necessity for a different course can no longer be plead.

Several extensive orders to the printers of the British and Foreign Bible Society's publications will soon be received, presenting specimens of rare beauty, at economical prices. Among the new issues of that institution, we have seen a few pages of a 12mo Bible, with references inserted after each verse, in the German fashion; "which promises"—so says our esteemed friend, Rev. Dr. Kingsford, who called our attention to it—"to be an admirable plan, and one which will greatly facilitate the study of the Scriptures."

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

DURING the last quarter, there has been appropriated and paid:

For translating, printing, and distributing Scriptures in Chinese,	$1,500
For printing and distributing the New Testament in Siamese, -	1,250
For distributing Scriptures in France, under the direction of Dr. Devan, - - - - -	500

An additional sum of $1,500 has also been voted, for revising, printing, and distributing the Scriptures in Karen.

A beautiful specimen of the Karen Bible, royal 8vo, to be comprised in about 1000 pages, has been sent to us, executed at the Mission press, Tavoy, by the indefatigable Bennet, for our society. Who would not willingly aid in bearing the expense of furnishing such a volume to a family of this interesting people?

Rev. J. L. Shuck has renewed his appeal to us for $500, to aid him in putting to press his Shanghae New Testament, and the appropriation has been made.

English Bibles and Testaments, to the amount of $100, of various sizes and prices, have also been donated to Liberia, Africa, to be distributed by the Baptist missionaries of both Boards.

To the Rev. J. G. Oncken, for Scripture distribution in Germany, and the payment of colporteur services and other expenses connected with this work, the further sum has been paid of $4,240 50; and his estimate for the year 1852 will require at least $4,000 additional, which has also been voted, to be paid quarterly. There remains also nearly $5,000 more, to be appropriated at the next monthly meeting, to meet the demands made on us for aid to the Missionary Union.

DEATH OF REV. J. T. JONES, D.D.

Our beloved brother Jones, the able translator of the New Testament, and portions of the Old, into the Siamese language, was called to his reward on the 13th of September last. Since the death of Dr. Judson, we have been accustomed to regard him one of the first of translators among our foreign missionaries. His admirable and modest preface to the second edition of the Siamese New Testament is a fair index of his patient, toilsome, and able labors in this department. Sustained by our appropriations, and accustomed, as his health allowed, to correspond regularly with these rooms, we feel most deeply the loss, personally and officially. How dark seems the dispensation which has just now removed him! Oh for faith to trust where we cannot trace the wisdom and goodness of His ways, who doeth all things well!

Our esteemed brother, J. H. Chandler, missionary printer at Bangkok, but now temporarily in this country, thus writes us: "It would afford me pleasure to prepare a full notice of the life and labors of Dr. Jones; but my time is so fully employed in preparing our new fonts of Siamese type, that I have not the needful time at command. He translated the New Testament, and nearly completed the book of Genesis. It was his wish that Rev. Mr. Caswell (a missionary of the American Board) should translate the Old Testament; and hence his delay in commencing the work. But God has taken them both to himself, and the work must be done by others. I fear it will be a long time before any one will be qualified to fill his place. His translations and writings were regarded by the Siamese as excellent and accurate specimens of their language. The Phra Klang (Minister of Foreign Affairs) remarked one time, that "Dr. Jones knew too much of the language, for he had a better knowledge of it than himself."

EXTRACTS FROM FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE

REV. T. T. DEYAN, under date of Lyons, 12th of January, thus writes: "From circumstances needless to be detailed, it is impossible for me to quote the exact number of the Holy Scriptures distributed during the year. It is much larger than that of the copies purchased on your account herewith forwarded, (88 Bibles, 330 Testaments, and 30 Books of Psalms.)

"The almost insuperable difficulties raised by government against Bible distribution, and the increasing severity with which colporteurs are treated, even to the present moment, have greatly interfered with the free circulation of the Word of God. The people, too, being in the continual apprehension of suffering from political causes, are loth to spend their money for the purchase of books, so that the colporteur sometimes spends many days without selling even a single Testament. In order, however, to leave no means untried whereby to circulate THE WORD, I employed the poorer members of the churches, when they were out of work, to distribute the sacred Scriptures.

"In forwarding you the accompanying report, I would take the liberty of drawing your attention to the fact that there remains not in my hands so much as one cent, for which I am to render you an account during the present year. This fact I had already mentioned to brother Cutting some six months ago. His reply was very kind and full of promise; but it amounted to nothing as to a practical result.

"I frankly confess to you that I feel this want of interest in my work on the part of the American and Foreign Bible Society the more, when I think upon the great and substantial interest taken by some of our churches in the political men and politics of Europe. I feel mortified at the fact that Christians should practically forget that the circulation of the pure Word of God among the nations, and the adoption of its principles, can alone give a basis, a stability to freedom."

Before the above letter of our esteemed fellow-laborer in the Board of the American and Foreign Bible Society in former years was written, an adequate remittance had been voted him; and before his letter reached us, it had been forwarded. We trust that, fully a month since, he has received it; and, by a subsequent letter, dispatched to him from these rooms, he will also have learned that "our churches"—at least, so far as the supporters of the American and Foreign Bible Society are concerned—are not turned away from reliance on the circulation of the Scriptures, as the only basis of civil or religious liberty. We shall hope to hear from our brother next time in a more cheerful strain.

Two interesting letters have also been received from Rev. J. G. ONCKEN, of Hamburg, who thus writes under date of January 8d, 1852:

To the Corresponding Secretary of the American and Foreign Bible Society:

MY DEAR BROTHER:—I am duly favored with yours, dated December 5th, from which I learn with pleasure your reappointment to the Secretaryship of the American and Foreign Bible Society. I pray that our gracious Lord may give you all necessary grace for this important post.

Many thanks to the Directors for their recent grant of $1,500. I hope this amount will be on its way hither before this reaches you, having advanced all the money I can command on behalf of the Society. You will also greatly oblige me to state, as early as possible, if the Board will be able to pay for the 5,000 School Bibles, which will be out in fourteen days; for if, contrary to my expectations, your Society should not be able to aid me in this urgent case, I shall be obliged to apply to other quarters. To the Edinburgh Bible Society I have already applied; and there is some prospect that the Directors will pay for one half of the 5,000 copies. How long, however, it will be before I receive a definite answer from the Edinburgh Society, I cannot say; and I therefore entreat you to put me in possession of the decision of the Board as early as possible.

I shall pay attention to your directions in reference to the journals of the colporteurs. I should have forwarded my annual accounts with the Society the ensuing week, but for a missionary tour to East Friesland; on my return I shall hasten to do so. About 20,000 copies of the Holy Scriptures, and 45,000 Gospels, have been distributed at the expense of the American and Foreign Bible Society during the past year; a fact which calls for our warmest gratitude to our gracious Lord, as also to our American brethren, who, constrained by the love of Christ and the compassion felt for perishing sinners, have so nobly aided us in the great cause of our exalted Redeemer. May the Spirit of the Lord abundantly bless the seed sown to the conversion of many sinners, and the edification of God's people!

The whole stock of the School Bibles will be disposed of before this reaches you, and the demands are still increasing; therefore, dear brethren, once more, if you possibly can, help us at the present crisis.

With brotherly love to yourself and all the brethren composing the Board,

Your affectionate brother,

J. G. ONCKEN.

A month later, viz., February 2d, he writes again, thankfully acknowledging the receipt of $1,500 remittance: and gives the following outlines of his remaining wants for the current year:

"As to the pecuniary aid required for the present year, (1852,) independently of the above remittance, I shall require, to the best of my calculation, from 28,000 to 30,000 marks, i. e., $8,500; one half of which will, however, I hope, be covered by the amount received for Scriptures sold."

He proceeds to enumerate the items of this large sum, the principal of which we here insert for the information of our friends:

15,000 Danish Testaments with Psalms, - - - -	1,500 marks.
15,000 German Testaments with Psalms, - - - -	862 "
Duplicate plates of Testament now being stereotyped at Berlin, - - - -	2,000 "
First edition of 10,000 of this Testament, - - - -	2,900 "
5,000 School Bibles, - - - -	6,962 "
Bookbinding, - - - -	7,000 "
Colporteurs, - - - -	5,000 "
Freight, postage, cases, &c., &c., - - - -	1,150 "
Rent, salaries, &c., - - - -	2,200 "

Total, - - - - 29,574 marks.

"I trust that the Board will be able to meet this necessity for Germany, and that thus the great work, in which we are jointly engaged, may be carried on without interruption.

"You will greatly oblige me by bringing the wants of this mission before your Board as early as possible; and by informing me whether the amount required for Bible operations in this country will be furnished by the American and Foreign Bible Society.

"I have recently been in East Friesland and the Grand-duchy of Oldenburg, where our missionaries and colporteurs continue to meet with much success in their labors. Every where the want of more laborers is felt, and there is now no prospect of being able to diminish the number of colporteurs employed at your expense. Our opportunities for spreading the truth as it is in Jesus, will, to all appearance, soon be greatly diminished; hence, it is our duty to work while it is day.

"In the hope of an early reply, and with affectionate regards to yourself and the brethren comprising the Board,

Yours, in the Lord,

"J. G. ONCKEN."

A long and deeply interesting letter has also been received from Rev. AMOS SURROX, D.D., dated Khundittar, Orissa, December 1st, 1851, from which two or three brief extracts only are here given, as the more appropriate place for the document in full, will be the forthcoming Annual Report:

"Since I last communicated with you, I have made two short trips, one down and the second up the Cuttack river. In each of these, a large number of copies of the sacred Word were put in circulation. The season, however, has now arrived for more extended efforts; and I hope to be able to report a good cold season campaign.

"The Harmony of the Gospels has been completed, and is now in the binder's hands. A copy is on its way to Calcutta for you. I hope that, ere it reaches you, a large number will be distributed in various parts of our wide field in Orissa."

In a closing note he says: "I am now in a populous district of Orissa, prosecuting the work of Scripture distribution, to which I am pledged. We hope to start to-day up the Brahmunes, and circulate portions of the undying Word among people seldom visited by the missionary of the cross. The Word which liveth and abideth for ever, is all our trust. And in the day of India's visitation, our hope is, that the efforts now making will lead to results such as followed the labors of Wickliff, Luther, and Tindal, in Europe. It is incorruptible seed we sow, and shall produce its proper fruit.

"With cordial Christian regard to yourself and beloved colleagues, believe me Yours, faithfully, A. SUTTON."

TESTIMONY OF RETURNED MISSIONARIES.

It is a gratifying circumstance, in the midst of some trials and perplexities, and the opposition of some of our early coadjutors, that the returned missionaries, without exception, so far as we have been able to learn, are the steadfast friends of the American and Foreign Bible Society. They do not wish, and certainly it is no part of our plan or purpose, to draw them into any controversy. When, however, their casual remarks have been used for a purpose they had not intended, it seems but simple justice to themselves, that they should be allowed to define their own position in self-defense. For this purpose, we insert the following extract of a letter from our brother Chandler, printer in the Siam Mission, giving the whole of his testimony, voluntarily proffered, in regard to our institution:

"I have ever regarded the American and Foreign Bible Society as one of the most important Societies connected with our denomination. I was present at the annual meeting of the Board of Missions in Hartford, Conn., (in 1836,) when its formation was first advocated; and from what was then said of the importance of having a Bible Society of our own, and from the great good it has done since its formation, has ever led me to regard it with deep and lively interest. When the act of incorporation was obtained, I understood the Society was virtually pledged to confine itself to the common English Bible, in the English department, and the best translations in the foreign. And so long as the Society holds its present act of incorporation, I should deeply regret any deviation from this course.

"Soon after my return to the United States, I called at the Bible Rooms, and remarked to brother Ward that I looked to the American and Foreign Bible Society for funds to aid us in translating, printing, and circulating the Scriptures in Siam. I still continue to look for aid to your Society; and was pleased to learn from brother Osgood, when in New-York, that you would be able to appropriate to foreign fields the usual amount of funds. This is my position in relation to the American and Foreign Bible Society. Should an agent of this Society be present, and ask aid of the church where I should be present next Sabbath, I should contribute to aid that Society; for, to separate from it, after it has done so much to aid in giving the Word of God to the dark, benighted, and perishing heathen, would indeed cost a struggle."

Whatever may be our respected brother's opinion in regard to another organization which we know is seeking to put itself in opposition to us and to hinder our work, we have never felt at liberty to ask, nor is this the proper place to show.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY DEFENDED.

[PREFATORY NOTE.—The articles here republished, originated in the following manner:—In December last, a committee was appointed by the Board of Managers of the American and Foreign Bible Society, and instructed to cause to be published in the columns of the New-York Recorder, and in other papers, such communications in defense of this institution as to them should seem proper. They held several meetings for consultation, and at length applied to one whom they deemed competent to this service, to aid them in its performance. He consented to write and submit his articles to the revision of the committee; and they have accordingly, with such aid as the committee themselves could render, been prepared and published as originally designed. So general has been the approbation expressed in regard to both their matter and their spirit, that the committee have not felt at liberty to withhold them from the wide demand made for their republication in a more permanent form. Revised and slightly condensed, they have a few foot-notes added, intended to meet the strictures of Messrs. Wyckoff and Judd. Let it be borne in mind, that the articles are strictly defensive. The assailants of this society, dear to thousands of our churches, have chosen their own ground, and put into their attacks such elements of character and personal standing as they pleased. How can they object, when the line of defense follows in the lead which they have chosen?

If the strenuous efforts of the New-York Chronicle, and the secretary and agents of the American Bible Union, to impede and ruin a society for which so many counsels, prayers, and contributions have been for fifteen years, and now are, cheerfully given, in our own and in foreign lands, return now in righteous retribution on their own heads, can they, with any show of reason, cry out "Persecution," and hope to win for themselves the public sympathy? They have, and shall have, their own rights and privileges, without interference from us. Why will they not, in turn, let us and our important work be unimpeded by their unscrupulous misrepresentations? On such terms, we might at least have peace, if we do not secure union. That God may, in these transactions, bring good out of evil, and order out of confusion, and light out of darkness, so as by His Word to honor his holy name, should be the prayer and the hope of each one of us.—NEW-YORK, 29th April, 1852.]

No. I.

MR. EDITOR :—The course pursued by the American Bible Union towards the institution named at the head of this communication, seems imperatively to require notice. For months past, in the interior of this State, and in other sections of our country, both by their paid agents, and through their newspaper organ in this city, and those newspapers which are willing, in any degree, to become subservient to their purposes, a feeling of hostility and opposition has been manifested by the Union toward the older Bible organization of the denomination. To such an extent has it recently been carried, in some instances, as to become a disturbing element of portentous and malign character, against the peace of Zion and the welfare of our churches.

The gravest charge is, that since May, 1850, the American and Foreign Bible Society has forsaken its original ground, and proved false to its engagements and professions, by adhering tenaciously to the circulation in the English tongue of the version in common use. The fact of such adherence is cheerfully admitted; that it implies any change or departure from the original platform, and from the uniform profession and practice of the society for the first two thirds of its history, is solemnly denied.

This is no fine abstraction, of little practical importance. On the contrary, a charge so grave must, whenever believed, operate prejudicially and widely to beget suspicion and fear in reference to all our organizations for evangelical benevolence. If one may thus swerve, and prove recreant to its engagements unchecked, why not another, and even all of them? Fortunately, the means of a thorough vindication are at hand, and with your leave, I will endeavor, with the utmost fairness and candor, to lay them before your readers. Relying chiefly on documentary evidence, which can easily be verified, I cannot but hope to make the development so full and thorough, that it may be final. I begin with the origin of the society, in the memorable Bible Convention in Philadelphia, in the month of April, 1837.*

On the evening of the second day's session of the Convention, Rev. Dr. Curtis—then of Maine, now of South Carolina—in a speech opposing the motion to include home with foreign fields in the society's operations, urged this among other reasons:

"Nor could he doubt, from what he had heard in this Convention to-day, and in New-York, that we should by and by be hearing of a new version. He was fearful, at least, that that event would come to pass."

This was pointedly replied to and denied by three or four New-York ministers in succession: by Dr. Dowling, who said that "he would much prefer the society should be restricted to the foreign field, than that there should be a new English version. That would be the greatest calamity that could befall the denomination. He moved to amend so as to restrict the society's issues in English to the version now in common use."

Rev. Octavius Winslow—then of New-York, and now of England—said: "Did he for a moment suspect there was a lurking intention, in placing the society on this wide platform, remotely to introduce a new Baptist version, he would instantly sever the tie which now bound him so closely to those brethren. He should vote for the amendment, because it would have the effect of counteracting the impression which had gone abroad, that his denomination was about to put forth a Baptist Bible. The stigma had again and again been thrown upon him, and again and again had he repelled the assertion as unfounded. He was for a distinct Bible organisation, and he was desirous of placing it on the broad platform he proposed ; but he was against an amended version of the English Scriptures."

* This, and not "The Provisional Organization," under the same name, in New-York, nearly a year earlier, as Mr. Wyckoff claims, was the true origin of this institution. Its reports date from this beginning—not the earlier one—and the Provisional was formally merged into it, and lost its own existence at the end of the first year. Hence its constitution proves nothing in reference to this society.

Dr. Cone himself, while speaking on both sides of this question,* explicitly "declared he should vote for that amendment, [the one offered by Dr. Dowling, limiting the society, in the circulation of Bibles in the English language, to the version in common use.] It met the full accordance of his judgment and views." Then he went on to vindicate the consistency of this adherence to the commonly received English version with the principle of faithful versions by all our missionaries. He showed that baptize and baptism were English words, in good and popular use for hundreds of years, or, as a brother near him said, a thousand years. The definition of baptize, to immerse, is accredited to as great an extent as that of any other word in which denominations agree, that is to be found in the English Bible. He adverted to his discussion with Dr. Milnor on this point of consistency, and showed how exceedingly plain was the explanation. Baptists could and did give the accredited meaning of the word, to immerse, and they could claim baptize as an English word. Dr. Cone, after various other arguments, concluded his speech by reading the following resolution, which, he said, after the first resolution should have passed, he would offer :

"Resolved, That this society shall distribute in foreign tongues the most faithful versions that can be procured, and in the English language only the version in common use."

The venerable Dr. Kendrick had some objection to the amendment, because it "seemed to imply a want of confidence in the chosen men that should be selected to conduct the affairs of the society. Now, for himself, he could say that he put confidence in his brethren. He did not believe they would set about making a new translation, unless they possessed the approbation of the denomination." He gave other reasons also, at considerable length, against the amendment. Much of other matter was pressed into this debate ; some preliminary votes were taken, refusing to lay on the table, and against the amendment;† and the result finally was a compromise, by which the society was formed with the general name desired by the advocates of its widest comprehension, but was confined, for the first year of its operations, to the foreign field, with the express pledge that, at the next anniversary, the whole question in regard to the home field should be decided. A circular was therefore issued, calling on "the denomination throughout our land to send up to the first annual meeting of the society in New-York, the last week in April, 1838, their views as to the duty of the society to engage in home distribution after that period." At the annual meeting in New-York, in 1838, a committee was appointed to ascertain the views of the denomination as to the duty of the society to engage in the work of home distribution. This committee, consisting of brethren William B. Johnson, of South Carolina ; S. Chapin, District of Columbia ; J. D. Knowles, Boston ; A. Bennett, New-York ; A. Woods, Alabama ; Thomas Hume and J. B. Jeter, Virginia ; Thomas Meredith, North Carolina ; and C. G. Sommers, New-York, subsequently reported :

"That, having examined a great mass of documents, containing resolutions of

* It has not been thought requisite to give Dr. C.'s arguments, or those of one or two others, somewhat favoring the idea of a new version, because in the end, the following year, when this matter was settled, all united in the restriction.

† This vote, which, by definite recorded count of 113 to 127, embraced a little more than half the Convention, may be truly accounted for in this way. It was the policy of those who did not wish the resolution to be passed in a shape to embrace home distribution, to refuse their aid in making it, by this amendment, more safe and welcome. Hence they voted against it, or declined to vote at all. Not fifty votes would have been given for a new version.

Baptist State Conventions, Associations, Auxiliary Bible Societies, and churches in every State of the Union, they are satisfied that it is the almost unanimous desire of the denomination that the American and Foreign Bible Society be left unrestricted in the range of its operations."

The second article of the constitution was therefore altered to read as follows:

ARTICLE II.—It shall be the object of the society to aid in the wider circulation of the Scriptures in ALL LANDS.

By the recommendation of the same committee, the following resolutions were adopted, which have, as they were intended, the same binding force on the managers as the constitution under which they act:

1. Resolved, That this society will expect of their Board of Managers, in carrying into effect the second article of the constitution, the most sedulous care in patronizing such versions only of the Sacred Scriptures into the languages of the heathen as have been or may be faithfully made, and are approved by competent examiners.

2. Resolved, That, in the distribution of the Scriptures in the English language, they will use the commonly received version until otherwise directed by the society.

In these fundamental principles is clearly seen what is the great and sole object of the society.

These documents conclusively show that, after the most full, thorough, and widely extended consideration ever given by American Baptists to any subject connected with their benevolent operations, they at length reached unanimity in the conclusion.

What a galaxy of worth and wisdom was combined in that Committee of Nine! To say nothing of the living, where, among all our honored names, will you find the superiors of CHAPIN, KNOWLES, BENNETT, MEREDITH! These men, with Drs. Johnson, Woods, Jeter, and brethren Hume and Sommers, deliberated long, with every thing which could be said on both sides, pro and con, distinctly before them. The full discussions of the preceding year, in which many of them had participated, which more had witnessed, and all had carefully perused, were fully in their view. What could be said in apology for and defense of some amendment or revision of the English version of the Bible, had been said by Dr. Cone and others in a way that no others could hope to surpass. It had been for a twelvemonth weighed, sifted, examined, from one end of the Union to the other. Then, on this vantage-ground, with the fullest attendance, perhaps, ever witnessed at a business meeting, (the floor of the Oliver street meeting-house being closely filled with members of the society and delegates from auxiliaries in all parts of the country,) the now sainted Knowles, by direction of Dr. Johnson, the chairman, read the report of the committee. Very deliberately it was repeated, part by part, from the lips of the President, Dr. Cone, and the whole was unanimously adopted, confining the managers, in the distribution of the Scriptures in the English language, to the version in common use. Suffice it to say, in regard to the additional clause, limiting the restriction "until otherwise directed by the society," it merely affirmed what every one must see would have been just as true and just as obvious, if it had not been stated. The Board, of course, as the mere agent, would feel obliged to obey the direction of its principal. Such an obvious truism would not probably have found a place in the resolution, but for a reason well understood at the time, and which I received from the lips of Professor Knowles, the writer. There was, in different parts of the country, (as the debates at Philadelphia the previous year had shown,) Digitized by Google considerable distrust in regard to the new version tendency of some influential member or members of the Board of Managers; while there was no fear whatever but that the great mass of the society were soundly conservative on this question. By linking, in this formal and stringent manner, the Board to the direction of the society, satisfaction would be given universally that all was safe. Subsequent events have fully shown (as will be exhibited in a future communication) that the safeguard was interposed in the right place. The society never has directed otherwise; but the Board, or some of the executive officers, have not always faithfully confined themselves to the version in common use.

Having thus fully set forth the fundamental principles on which the society entered on its work, it is only necessary to insert a few marked and very decisive corroborations of this, as the correct and the only possible view of its design. The President, Dr. Cose, must well recollect a visit of his to the Boston Association, shortly after, when, at the end of a discourse which he delivered, he disclaimed, in the fullest manner, any intention of meddling with the English version by the Board of Managers; and he can scarcely forget the warm gratulation of Dr. Sharp and others extended to him at the close, on account of that disclaimer. The expression of a few suspicions from time to time, either from churches or individuals, found their way to the Board, that ultimately some innovation of this kind was intended, and the records show with what promptness, earnestness, and unanimity the first Corresponding Secretary, Rev. Mr. Sommers, was directed to give the strongest assurances of their utter groundlessness. Some of these have been repeatedly published, and they are of the clearest and most decisive character.

With only one more document of this description does it seem requisite to extend this article, for it is one of a character so conclusive, that it would render any thing additional quite superfluous. In an appeal to the New-York Legislature, in the winter of 1844, for an act of incorporation, the application had been met by a counter memorial or remonstrance from the American Bible Society; urging, among other reasons why our prayer should not be granted, that we were circulating, or intending to circulate, "an altered version," "a Baptist Bible." This allegation was met and refuted before the committee of the House and of the Senate. But still the application failed. This occasioned, the succeeding winter, the "Memorial of the Board." It was prepared by the Board of Managers, and sent to the Legislature of the State of New-York, in 1845, bearing the following signatures: "Spencer H. Cose, President; Elisha Tucker, First Vice President; Charles G. Sommers, Second Vice-President; William Colgate, Treasurer; Ira M. Allen, General Agent; Thomas Wallace, Recording Secretary." It contains the following unequivocal declaration: "In the English language, the constitution [i.e., of the American Bible Society] confined the society to the circulation of the commonly received version. On the latter point there has never been any difference of opinion. Our society, as well as the American, is confined in the English language to the circulation of this version. The difficulties which have originated the organization of the American and Foreign Bible Society, concern exclusively the distribution in foreign languages."

Certainly, if there was lurking in the minds of any of these officers a secret purpose ultimately to engage the society in the work of a new version, the duplicity of affixing their names to such a document cannot be described in terms too severe.* But I attribute to them no such duplicity: that was not then their purpose.

Were not this communication in danger of being unduly extended, I would crave the insertion of two editorials by William H. Wyckoff, Esq., in the first volume of the Baptist Advocate. One is in the first number of that paper, and the other in the paper of December 14th, 1889. Both of them have the heading of NEW ENGLISH VERSION, and both earnestly repudiate the idea of it. The first argues this point at considerable length, with illustrations from the fine arts.* The second was occasioned by a call from Rev. Wm. Meredith, of North Carolina, editor of the Biblical Recorder, for the views of the editor of the Advocate upon this subject of a new or amended version of the Scriptures in English. Mr. Wyckoff, after referring his brother Meredith to his first number, in which he says, "We were unusually decided in expressing our disapprobation of the project of a new English version, and have not seen reason to change our opinion on this subject," then goes on to make the following semi-official avowal of the interpretation which he and the Board had uniformly given to official instructions of the society, which I have already given, of far greater importance than his mere individual opinion.

"As a member of the Board and of the Publication Committee of the American and Foreign Bible Society, we have invariably maintained that the subject was one which did not come within the legitimate scope of our consideration; an opinion which has always so generally prevailed in the Board as to supersede the necessity vince me that this strong statement was not made in good faith. Of course, the idea of taking such a course as some of these signers have since advocated, was then foreign to their thoughts. It will be observed that the name of the Corresponding Secretary, Dr. Babcock, is not attached to this document. The reason was, that he was then two thousand miles away, in the South-western States. This disposes of the allegation of Mr. Wyckoff, that the signature of the Treasurer was procured by the Secretary. Indeed, those that knew him would not believe him capable of urging the reasons attributed to him.

* We give in this note the larger portion of the first article:

"In a certain sense, all the works of finite minds are imperfect; but some have been wrought with that degree of art and care, that any attempt by man to improve them must necessarily injure their fair proportions, or mar the delicacy of their parts. Who would again apply the chisel to a statue of Phidias, or the pen to a painting of Zeuxis? . . . What combinations of skill and patronage are likely again to rear an edifice vying with the temple of Jerusalem, the Parthenon of Athens, or the church of St. Peter's at Rome? But suppose that, in the country distinguished by one of these masterpieces of architecture, a generation had lived, remarkably critical, each of whom could discover some imperfection in the magnificent structure. To one a stone might appear a little out of place; another might consider a portion rather mottled in its looks by age and exposure. The fastidious taste of this might be disgusted with the imagined grossness of some minor device; the tender sensibilities of that might be shocked by the fancied crudity of some unimportant representation.

"Imagine all resolving to demolish the edifice, and then uniting to rebuild it, so as to suit the fancy and gratify the wishes of each. Who does not anticipate the ludicrous result? Instead of unity of plan and symmetry of proportion, incongruity, disorder, and confusion would every where prevail.

"Such, in some sense, appears at present the state of the question respecting a new version of the Bible in the English tongue. Our present version was made at a time and under circumstances in many respects peculiarly favorable. Learning was not so generally diffused, but it ran in deeper channels. The persons selected for the work of translation are acknowledged to have been men eminent for scholarship. The English language itself was purer than it is in the present age. Its native purity and original simplicity appear to have been embalmed in our present version. Let us not be understood as expressing our unqualified approbation of the translation. It would not be difficult to point out numerous instances in which it appears to be defective or erroneous. But it would be difficult for any scholar, or any number of scholars, at the present day, to translate a book of the same size with as few errors; whilst, for those accustomed to the different taste and varied mode of expression which now prevail, to retain a style so simple, so pure, and at the same time so rich, so majestic, and so appropriate, speaking after the manner of men, would be impossible."

of any expression of it by a direct vote. A very slight reflection upon the subject will convince a reader, that a Board restricted by its constitution to specific objects is bound in good faith thus to confine itself; and that, in the present instance, any measure that contemplates a change which would virtually alter the constitution, should originate only in a convention similar to that which called the society into existence.*

I cannot but think that these documents, taken together, show a demonstration, at once conclusive and satisfactory, that the American and Foreign Bible Society, both in its origin and its history to a comparatively recent period, had no other purpose than to confine itself, in its English issues, to the version in common use.

The same is also shown in the first efforts made by a few individuals to break ground in the Board in favor of a removal of the restriction, in May, 1849.

A report was prepared on this subject by the three executive officers, Messrs. Cone, Colgate, and Wyckoff, which, after rehearsing the rule of action for the Board, adopted by the society in 1838, gives, as the first reason for its removal, the following: "Whereas great changes have since taken place, both in the views of many of the supporters of the society, and in the circumstances and spirit of the age," &c.

Now, though, when this report was read to the Board, and the evidence of the great changes was called for, it could not be found, and of course the whole proposal was that day laid on the table; yet the statement of these "great changes" is conclusive proof against those who adduced them, that—but for such changes—they could make out no case. In other words, it shows indubitably that the original, unchanged design of the institution was, in the words of Dr. Cone's own resolution in the Philadelphia Convention: "That this society shall distribute, in foreign tongues, the most faithful versions that can be procured, and in the English language only the version in common use." This the society is now doing; and the charge against it of having changed either its object or the method of accomplishing it, is an unmitigated misrepresentation.

A DIRECTOR FROM THE BEGINNING.

No. II.

ANOTHER principal objection urged by the Bible Union against our Society is, that those who now have the responsibility of its management precipitated unduly the action of the society in May, 1850: "Had the society simply deferred the subject for a limited period, the Bible Union would not have been formed to this day." This is the published statement of one of the agents of the Union, Elder R. Powell, in the Michigan Christian Herald, which recently met my notice. According to this authority, (and there is much more to the same purport,) the whole responsibility of the grievous division and dissension in our churches is alone chargeable on a little too much promptness of action. "A single year's delay would have put matters all right," is the frequent intimation and declaration of those dissatisfied with the decision. My first remark here is, that if this be all, or the chief grievance, it seems quite too small a matter to be magnified into such colossal proportions, and made the ground of so grievous and wide-spread disruption. If all that was needed was a little delay—time for the excitement to cool of those who had been aroused by what to them seemed a very suicidal and unauthorized movement on the part of certain executive officers of their own society, the Christian forbearance which is so much vaunted in certain quarters might have had very appropriate opportunity for practice, as well as being preached to others. And, instead of visiting the mistake of their brethren, in regard to the best time for action, with so severe a punishment, how noble and winning would have been the example, on their part, of waiting that one needed year! How much more likely would have been the effort to win their (supposed erring and excited) brethren by such a course, rather than the one they have adopted. There is this further reason for it: What the American and Foreign Bible Society did at its anniversary in May, 1850, was merely putting the institution a little more firmly and decidedly upon its original foundation. If delay was to be granted by either party, should it not reasonably be required of the innovators, of those who now sought to introduce something, which, after having been considered, and in a quasi manner advocated at the very outset, had been, on full review and reflection, unanimously repudiated? This point, I think, will appear very plain to all candid minds.

* It is no adequate answer to this statement to say, as Mr. Wyckoff now does: "I have changed my opinion." This extract is not adduced for the sake of any weight or importance which might attach to his mere opinion, whether he favored or opposed a new version. Much more than this is involved. His opinion may be worthless; but he is a competent, conspicuous, uncontradicted witness, and he testifies that the opinion always so generally prevailed in the Board as to supersede the necessity of any vote. They were not competent to make any such change as, he now tries to maintain, was always contemplated at an early day. O consistency, with a witness!

My second position is, that any objection on account of premature or hasty action, as above described, comes with an ill grace from those who precipitated, so unwarrantably and unexpectedly, the rescinding of the restrictive resolution the preceding year. This will be made strikingly obvious by a brief narrative of the history of each.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Managers of the American and Foreign Bible Society, May 2d, 1849, the following resolution was offered, and referred to a committee, consisting of the executive officers of the society, viz.: the President, Dr. Cone; the Treasurer, William Colgate, Esq.; and the Corresponding Secretary, William H. Wyckoff, Esq.; who were directed to report at a special meeting of the Board, on Wednesday, the 9th of May, (two days before the time fixed for the anniversary:)

Resolved, That this Board adopt immediate measures for publishing a revised New Testament, wherein, among other changes, all transferred and mistranslated words shall be fairly and honestly translated.

At this special meeting, there were present, by particular invitation, all the life directors and life members of the society who could be found in the city, (and, it being anniversary-week, they were very numerous,) so that the managers' room was filled. The report of this committee was read by Dr. Cone, assigning two reasons only for the course recommended. First, that great changes had taken place in the views of many of the supporters of the society, and in the circumstances and spirit of the age; and, secondly, that consistency with the instructions given to our missionaries in translating the Scriptures into the languages of the heathen, demanded such a new, revised version in the English language. The report closed with the following:

Resolved, That we recommend to the society to rescind the rule adopted in 1838, and to authorize the Board to prosecute prudent and deliberate measures for conforming the English Scriptures to the inspired originals, in accordance with the spirit of the instructions given to translators by the American Baptist Board of Foreign Missions in April, 1833.

An interesting and animated debate of two hours or more was entered into by all concerned. The reasons, pro and con, were fully set forth. Information was called for as to the truth of such great changes having taken place as the report had claimed. The agents of the society present, Rev. L. Leonard, H. Seaver, J. J. Woolsey, and of kindred societies, such as Rev. John Peck and Alfred Bennett, were called on, and all testified that they had found no such changes! Dr. Cone was reminded of the reasons which he had formerly given, (see those he had given to Dr. Milnor, repeated by himself in the Philadelphia Convention, as cited in my last communication,) evincing the consistency of Baptists in making thorough and faithful translations for the heathen, while they still adhered to the commonly received version in English. He fully admitted having maintained this. The impropriety of the Board moving in this matter at all, until otherwise instructed by the society, was also barely adverted to.

I need not recapitulate the arguments on the other side. They were full and able, nothing having been omitted which the ingenuity of such capable advocates as Messrs. Cone, Colgate, Barker, and others could set forth. There were nineteen members of the Board present, and probably twice as many others, who came in by invitation.

In the close, by a majority of more than two to one, those not of the Board gave their advice that the resolution should not be passed; and the Board, by a still larger majority, then voted to lay it on the table. This was supposed to be the end of that attempt at innovation.

On the contrary, at near the close of the business meeting of the society, on the following Friday morning, in Oliver street lecture-room, after an attempt from some quarter to introduce certain abolition resolutions, which "the President ruled could not be debated, for that was not a meeting for discussion, but for the election of officers and for prayer," while the nominating committee were absent, and after many had gone out, a resolution, written by the Treasurer, was, by his request, offered by a member of the society, not of the Board, in the following words:

Resolved, That the restriction laid by the society upon the Board of Managers in 1838, to use only the commonly received version in the distribution of the Scriptures in the English language, be removed.

Some earnest remonstrance was uttered against acting on a matter of such magnitude, thrust upon the little fragment of a meeting, without debate or explanation, which the President before had ruled was, in that meeting, out of order, and for which he said truly there was then no time, the hour for the public services in the sanctuary above having just arrived. The suggestion was made, that this proposition should be printed and laid over for consideration till the next year, but it was resisted. A motion, duly made and seconded, that the meeting be adjourned till three o'clock that day, on purpose to discuss this question, (or till some other time, several being named,) was overrode by some trifling objection, and the question not taken on it. Then, in the hurry and impatience of the moment, that resolution was passed by a vote of sixteen in favor and nine against it. This is the only definite count I have ever heard given; it was carefully taken by one favorably situated for noting every voter, and cannot vary much from the exact number.* The ill-suppressed exultation of some of those most in favor of this action, showed how much even they were surprised at it ; and well might they be !

* I learn that a reliable statement contemporaneously or soon after appeared in the New-York Baptist Register, giving just about the same numbers. This will gain more credence than the very recent statement of Mr. Wyckoff, that he counted many times this number in the affirmative. Men sometimes see objects double, at a great distance too!

In the hot haste of this proceeding, however, the essential thing had been omitted. The society had not "instructed the Board otherwise" than the original and uniform practice of this and all the other Bible Societies of the country had hitherto been, to confine themselves, in the English language, to the version in common use. This had been attempted, in the resolution brought in by the committee to the Board which met two days before, and which so signally failed. But it was now omitted, from inadvertence possibly, or perhaps from the conviction that it could not be passed. Indeed, one excellent and confiding brother, Rev. Leland Howard, of Vermont, gave, as his reason for thinking it safe to remove the restriction : " We can trust our brethren of the Board without tying them ; they will not attempt any new version," or words to that effect. Such, very likely, was the common feeling of those who had not been at the meeting two days before ; and a majority of those present, when this vote was carried, were of that number. A full meeting, and the fair discussion of the subject, would, no doubt, have reversed the action.

Before contrasting the precipitancy of this action with what is complained of at the following anniversary, it may be well to follow on the current of events in the intervening twelve months. It will furnish some important reasons for the definite and stringent action at the annual meeting in May, 1850.

At the first regular monthly meeting of the Board, June 6, a committee of five was appointed, to report at the next meeting of the Board, on the expediency of publishing an altered version of the New Testament. The committee consisted of Messrs. Colgate, Carter, Barker, Wyckoff, and Stone. The minutes of that committee have been kindly furnished me by its Secretary, Warren Carter, Esq., and from them the following facts are gleaned :

The committee met and organized, June 11. One week later, they met a second time, and, by a majority of three against two, adopted a report recommending that the Board authorize the issue of an English Testament, corrected upon the principles indicated in the resolution referred to them, before the next annual meeting. They urged this prompt action by the following cogent reason : " There is strong probability that, unless decisive action be taken and completed before the next annual meeting, the subject will give rise to angry debate, and thus create a permanent and unhappy division in the body of the society."*

How beautifully this illustrates the consistency of these same individuals, in now complaining of precipitate action by the society itself, eleven months afterwards ! Consistency, or any approximation to it, ought to blush very deeply at ever speaking of precipitant action by the annual meeting in May, 1850, after such an example !

But to return to the narrative. We shall perhaps be told that this majority report of the committee, though adopted and ordered to be presented to the Board of Managers at its next meeting, was not, in fact, so presented. A minority report

* This extract is from the report then adopted. Some of the reasoning by which it was enforced and carried in the committee, was this : " They had now got a majority [of one or two] in the Board. They must immediately make this revised Testament, put immerses for baptize into it, and send it out with the society's imprint. The denomination would not receive it kindly at first, but could be coaxed into acquiescence ; when it was done, they could not help it, and would finally yield."

was drawn up and signed by the two objecting members of the committee, Messrs. Stone and Carter; and when the majority found they could not prevent its going before the Board along with their own, they reconsidered, and tried a new experiment. Their report to the Board was not, in fact, made till the October meeting, at which they presented a series of resolutions. The last and essential one was in the following words:

Resolved, That in regard to the expediency of this Board undertaking the correction of the common English version, a decided difference of opinion exists; and, therefore, that it be judged most prudent to await instructions from the society.

This report was presented in October, but not finally adopted till the 10th of January, four regular monthly meetings and three special meetings being, in the meantime, held, at all or nearly all of which this question was discussed at length, at some of them very fully. The proposition was at last unanimously passed by the Board.

Very soon afterward, ground in favor of a new version was publicly taken by Dr. Cone, the President, in his church, and before his numerous congregation. He carried a Catholic version into his pulpit, and, in preaching, referred to it as about on a par with the commonly received version, one being Romish and the other Episcopalian. We must have, he said, a Baptist Bible also. The agitation on this subject, thus commenced, went on far and wide all over the country. Our religious newspapers gave to it extended notice, and even the secular papers swelled the current of this agitation. To add to all the rest, certain members of the Board contributed $1000 to stereotype an edition of the New Testament, amended by the President and Corresponding Secretary of the society, with others, and which plates, it was published abroad, would be presented to the society at its annual meeting, on condition of their acceptance and use.

The discussion of this great question was made for some months the most prominent topic of notice. A pamphlet extra from the New-York Chronicle office was circulated as widely as possible in defense of the scheme. The Secretary of the American and Foreign Bible Society, Mr. Wyckoff, went to Ohio, to the Baptist anniversaries, and to Buffalo, during the meeting of the Missionary Union, at both of which places he advocated the new version, at public meetings as well as in private. The time of the anniversary of the American and Foreign Bible Society was deferred a fortnight, on purpose to give additional publicity and increased facilities for general attendance. The time appointed at length arrived, and those in favor of the movement, as well as those against it, very generally assembled.

Of the debates, which occupied the larger portion of two days—the ordinary business of the anniversary having been compressed into the smallest possible space, on purpose to give place to them—it is the less necessary to speak in detail, as they are of recent public occurrence, and have had wide publicity. Doubtless some things were said on both sides, which might have been better omitted. This was to have been expected, from the imperfection of human nature, and from what seemed unwarrantable in the previous proceedings. But how any reasonable man could deem the decision precipitate, is passing strange. The idea of some of the younger members, that they wanted, and could with great advantage use, a week or a month in such a debate, savors of that monomania which ardent minds, wedded to some hobby, are prone to evince. Besides, this idea of urging the postponement of a decision, seems to have been an after-thought, when the advocates of change found themselves so largely in the minority; for up to the time of the meeting, they reckoned on or at least boasted of a majority on their side. It is the common resort of the pertinacious, when they find themselves unable to carry their point, to plead for delay, or, by almost any other shift, endeavor to evade a decision unwelcome to them. Finally, this demand for postponement, with the possession of all the executive "place and power" of the society in the hands of a minority, who, in their use, had not proved over-scrupulous, and whose determination was both openly and covertly evinced, to leave no effort untried to carry out their own plans, despite the clearly expressed opposition of a majority of more than two thirds of the society, savors too much of inveterate selfishness to commend it to any candid mind.

Having thus shown the utterly unfounded character of the objection that this decision was precipitate, I will postpone to a closing number a consideration of the objections urged against the action itself at the anniversary of 1850.

A DIRECTOR FROM THE BEGINNING.

No. III.

"THE old society, that was so dear to us as a denomination, has ceased to be what it was, or to do that which it was designed by its framers and most ardent friends to accomplish. It has been seized and is now conducted by its bitterest enemies, while its friends and supporters, who have borne the expense, and obloquy, and labor, have been unceremoniously turned out of office for attempting to carry out the always cherished designs of the society."—Extract from the written statement of Rev. John Winter, agent of the Bible Union in Ohio.

Such as the above is the current representation made by the agents of the American Bible Union wherever they go. And as their avowed object is, not so much to gain funds for a new or revised English Bible, as to revolutionize public opinion, and cover with obloquy an institution which resisted their innovating attempts at changing it into harmony with their now avowed purposes, it may readily be understood how potent such charges, wielded with such a spirit, must be among our churches, where the true state of the case is not clearly understood. If the wand of truth be allowed to touch this dark cloud, it will certainly vanish away; for this grievous charge cannot be sustained by facts. To facts, not figments, I appeal.

In the first place, look at what the society is actually doing at home and abroad, and compare it as thoroughly and extensively as you please with all its past history, and with the fundamental principles and rules laid down for its action from the beginning, and the most prejudiced opponent is challenged to point out a single change. It is now doing the same work, in the same way, which it did for the first dozen years of its operations. This is a practical test. If changes have been introduced, let them be pointed out. Meekly but confidently I defy the most searching scrutiny on this allegation, assured that it can lead to but one result—the most honorable vindication of the society. Both at home and abroad, it is doing the old work in the old way. The last year, a somewhat greater amount of identically the same kind of service was performed by this society, both in the home field and in the foreign departments of its operations, than in any previous year of its history. This practical result ought to awaken some mistrust of the soundness of such allegations as that quoted at the head of this article.

Turning now from the practical to the theoretical, I am aware that two charges are brought by the Bible Union against the action of the society at the anniversary, in May, 1850. The first relates to the passage of two resolutions by the society on that occasion; the second, to a few changes in the officers and managers then chosen. Let us candidly examine both of them.

The first resolution was in these words :

Resolved, That this society, in its issues and circulation of the English Scriptures, be restricted to the commonly received version, without note or comment.

This was moved by Rev. Isaac Wescott, an early, steadfast, laborious friend, and long an able agent of the society. It was seconded by J. M. Linnard, Esq., of Philadelphia, an active member of the Bible Convention which formed the society, and one of its first life members, by his own subscription. How entirely misapplied to such men are the epithets of "bitterest enemies," employed by Mr. Winter as above quoted ! Then look at the resolution itself. What does it either express or imply, beside the reaffirming, in clear, definite terms, of the restriction which the previous year had been, in a manner so unprecedented and unwarrantable, removed ! That it did not contain the closing clause of the former, "until otherwise directed by the society," does not essentially militate against this view, since, being merely a resolution of the society, and not a part of its constitution, it is of course subject to modification or repeal at any time. The insertion of it again would not at all have altered the case ; and having occasion to fill the place which it formerly occupied, by a caveat against note or comment, (which the unauthorized alterations and changes pretty freely introduced within a few months previous, by some individual assumption, into the stereotype plates and New Testament issues of the society, rendered necessary,) it was naturally and reasonably omitted. In this resolution, therefore, we look in vain for any proof that the society, by its adoption, "ceased to be what it was." Rather, should it not be said, it returned to be what it was originally made and designed to be ! An effort had been made to change it. For a whole year the matter had been considered and thoroughly canvassed. The Board, several months before, had passed resolutions indicating that a decided difference of opinion existed as to the expediency of their undertaking any correction of the English version, and determining to await the instructions of the society. Here, then, they received just what they had invoked, those instructions. They simply required them, in the circulation of the English Scriptures, to adhere to the commonly received version, without note or comment, just as the Board had been directed to do by the resolution of 1838.

Lest there should be thought to remain any incompleteness in these instructions which the Board had asked of the society, especially when it was known that the work of revising and altering the commonly received version had been much canvassed in the Board for the previous year, and two of the executive officers had actually prepared an altered New Testament, which had been stereotyped, and the plates were about to be donated to the society, another resolution, rather declaratory than practical, (which certainly did not interfere with any authorized practice of the society or its Board,) was offered by Rev. Robert Turnbull, of Hartford, Ct., in these words :

Whereas, by the constitution of this society, its object is "to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands;" therefore,

Resolved, That it is not the province and duty of the American and Foreign Bible Society to attempt, on their own part, or to procure from others, a revision of the commonly received English version of the Sacred Scriptures.

The esteemed mover of this resolution was an active and devoted friend of the society from the beginning ; just as little worthy of Mr. Winter's charge of "bitterest enemies," as Messrs. Wescott and Linnard. All of them were friends of the most unexceptionable character, not having been mixed up with any of the contests upon this mooted question, and their standing being such as to command the respect and deference of all impartial and honorable minds.

And what did this second resolution say to the Board, now standing, in their own language, "awaiting the instructions of the society?" Its language was respectful, but definite and clear. As if it had wished to draw its Board—its own agent—away from the region of "decided difference of opinion as to the expediency of their undertaking any correction of the English version," which their own resolution had confessed, it defined both positively and negatively their province and duty; so that, as good and obedient agents, there would remain no doubt on their minds. They were to circulate the commonly received English version; not to attempt revising it themselves, or procure it from others. And all this instruction, as above remarked in regard to the first resolution, was the mere expression of the will or opinion of the society for the time being; having no more claim to be regarded as the permanent, unalterable decree, which, like "the law of the Medes and Persians, altereth not," than it could claim to be written in the Persian character. It would certainly be amusing, were it not in its uses so grave and deplorable, to notice the manner in which Mr. Wyckoff comments on this very proper resolution, in a circular which he widely distributed more than a year since. He there says that "the society binds itself to the perpetual and exclusive use of the common version, without condition or hope of change, and prohibits itself from ever revising or correcting it," with much more to the same purport. Now, it is quite sufficient to say, that no such permanency is either affirmed or implied in the resolution. All this amount of salutary horror, which Mr. Wyckoff attempts to awaken against the society, and which accounts sufficiently for the spirit and conduct of the agents under his direction, is entirely uncalled for. He must himself know, or be more lacking in perception than he would willingly admit, that the resolution does not assume to declare any such perpetual, exclusive, and for ever rule of action which he has attributed to it. He cannot but know that there is absolutely nothing in the case to prevent the society, at its next or any subsequent meeting, to rescind both these resolutions, and put itself in form, as it is in fact, upon the original ground of the resolution of 1838. Indeed, for the sake of taking away occasion of misrepresentation from those evidently inclined to seek occasion, I could sincerely desire to see, at no distant day, this matter put back precisely upon the original foundation. This would not alter a single iota the action of the society, so long as it is confided to honest and faithful hands, willing to carry out the instructions of the society. Would such a change satisfy those who now utter such grievous complaints? But if it would not, what must be thought of the sincerity and consistency of urging such allegations against these resolutions?

Of the other charge against the society—viz.: That, upon reaffirming the primitive ground and rule of its own action in the circulation of the Scriptures in the English language, it made such changes in the officers and managers of the society as seemed requisite for the faithful carrying out of the prescribed action—it may be more difficult to speak or write without offense, since, in considering persons, it is exceedingly difficult to avoid personalities. My earnest aim shall be to discharge this part of my task with as much of delicacy and forbearance as the nature of the service will allow. If any are disposed to judge me harshly, will they pause and ask how they themselves would have done better?

Of the three principal executive officers at the time, two—the President and the Treasurer—had been main pillars in the institution from its origin. They were both as much beloved and as widely and generally honored among all the friends and supporters of the society, as any two who could be named. I am satisfied that it must have cost a severe pang to have voted against either of them. What they had done and suffered in battling for the right, the true, and the good, was not forgotten or unappreciated. Perhaps, moreover, the volunteer assurances of the President, some weeks before the anniversary, had no little weight. He will doubtless well recollect meeting on the morning of April 5, at the door of the Bible Rooms, with the former Secretary of the society, Rev. Dr. Babcock, who had that morning arrived in the city, on his way to Philadelphia, and to whom Rev. Dr. Cone said, after alluding to a meeting held in Oliver street meeting-house the night before, "that he really hoped his brethren all over the country knew him too well to doubt that he was a good democrat, willing to abide by the decision of the majority. If the majority of the society, at the annual meeting, say, 'We do not want a revision;' or that 'You are not the men to make it;' or, 'This is not the time for its preparation;' I say so too; for I have always been willing to abide the decision of the majority."*

This was not a mere private conversation; for the ex-Secretary immediately asked whether, as the well-known and long-trying friend of the President, he was at liberty to report this declaration at Philadelphia and elsewhere. Dr. Cone emphatically replied, "Yes, you will oblige me by doing so. I wish my determination, in this respect, to be universally known."

This request of the President was complied with. At a meeting held in Rev. Mr. Gillette's church, Philadelphia, the next week, Dr. Babcock attended, not to take part in the proceedings, as he remarked, but to make this communication from his former co-laborer in the American and Foreign Bible Society. I there heard the statement from his lips, and, within a few weeks past, have heard it repeated by others who then listened to it. The editors of the Christian Chronicle were also informed of his determination through the same channel.

Such an assurance must have had great effect in determining the society to reflect, as they did, Dr. Cone as President, and to urge his acceptance when he indicated a disposition (in which, against much entreaty, he persisted) to decline. It is not for me to pass judgment upon the apparent departure from the noble determination he had announced, "to abide the expressed will of the majority." Had he done so, what an incalculable amount of harm and loss might have been saved!

The Treasurer, equally worthy and equally beloved, so far from indicating any such willingness to abide the decision of the society, was understood to have definitely made up his mind, the preceding year, if the society would not pass his rescinding resolution, to take his leave of it. I do not know how extensively this† had been published, but undoubtedly it had its effect; and the supposed necessity of having a majority of the executive officers in sentiment accordant with the now fully expressed will of the society, induced the reluctant substitution of another in his place.

* On the preceding Sabbath afternoon, in giving out the notice for the Oliver street meeting, and commenting on it, Dr. Cone used in his pulpit substantially the same language, as hundreds recollect. Deacon Hillman, his worthy and intimate friend, stated this fact to Warren Carter, Esq., and perhaps to other members of the Board. This disposes of Mr. Judd's allegation, that the fact testified by Dr. Babcock proved him "a vile slanderer." The epithet recoils upon its rightful proprietor.

† Has it ever been denied by the excellent but not infallible brother? No; never. He repeats it often, to his pastor and to others.

In regard to the Corresponding Secretary, the case was somewhat different. Instead of having held the office from the foundation of the society, he had only been in the post for three or four years, receiving a full compensation for his services; he was a young, versatile man, who could, if he chose, readily return to his former employment as a teacher, without pecuniary sacrifice or serious inconvenience. It is also confidently stated that to some of his associates in the Board he had become personally and officially objectionable, on account of holding different opinions to different members of the Board, on the same subject, in the same day, or even the same hour; thus losing their confidence. His stealthy process of altering extensively the stereotype plates of the New Testament, without the authority or even the knowledge of the Board, had given dissatisfaction. How far, moreover, certain indiscretions, (to call them by no severer name,) since developed by parts of his correspondence, were then known, and operated to his disadvantage, it may not be easy exactly to estimate.* Suffice it to say, the thorough and wily character of his partisanship was fully appreciated, and any idea of retaining him in that important office seems not to have been entertained by the majority of the society. Some half dozen changes were also made in filling up the Board of Managers, though all were not left off who were known to be favorable to the new-version measures. More or less of such changes occur every year, and it is as needless as impossible to attempt, in each case, assigning the particular and satisfactory reasons.

Of the individuals who were elected to the places thus vacated, as either officers or managers, it is indisputably true that they are not and were not "bitterest enemies," as the Bible Union calls them, but the early, consistent, steadfast friends of the American and Foreign Bible Society. They are now endeavoring to sustain it in its noble, unchanged career of usefulness and honor, while some from whom, judging by their professions, better things might have been expected, have lifted up the heel against it.

My labor of defense has now been accomplished, and, I regret to say, has occupied twice the amount of space anticipated. Friends of the society, officials, and others, have kindly extended to me the necessary aid and documents to make the work complete. Though, in some respects, an unwelcome task, I have addressed myself to its performance with that kind of satisfaction which one feels in repairing an injustice. The misguided men who now assail and vilify this society, cannot henceforth do it under the assumption that it has changed its original ground, or that it precipitated the action at the anniversary in 1850; or that the action itself, on that occasion, indicated any dereliction from propriety. If these points are made clear, my humble, but, I trust, not useless purpose, is accomplished.

Something I would have said, in the close, in regard to the organization against whose attacks I have endeavored to interpose the shield of truth. So strictly have I striven to confine myself to the defensive, that I hope not one word of a belligerent character towards the Bible Union and its objects can here be discerned. I would willingly entreat them, as brethren, not to hinder the work of God now prosecuted by the American and Foreign Bible Society. How suicidal to their professed object must this war upon the older Bible organization of the denomination become! But they would not, perhaps, welcome such expostulations from me; and, with fervent prayer and hope that both may be guided aright, I subscribe myself, for the last time,

A DIRECTOR FROM THE BEGINNING.

* He says this is all new to him. Perhaps he needs the influence of the quaint prayer of Burns—the gift to see himself as others see him. It is very painful to feel obliged to lessen any one's self-complacency. But Mr. W. may be assured of the truth of the statement. The proof he shall have, if required.

BIBLE TRANSLATION.

SUBSTANCE OF AN EDITORIAL IN THE NEW-YORK RECORDER.

THE able and conclusive articles that have been published in the Recorder, showing with great clearness that the American and Foreign Bible Society is now carrying out the literal and exact purposes for which it was intended when it was adopted by the denomination, furnish a fitting occasion to make a few remarks upon the question of "Bible translation." In the first article which was written by us, on assuming the post of editor, we took occasion to make a statement of our views on this subject. These views had been carefully matured, and they have guided all our action and thought upon the subject since. We wish to call attention to a few points in connection with this subject, that have been systematically overlooked, not to say misrepresented. It has been assumed in all the writings and speeches of those who have waged war upon the Bible Society and its objects, that its friends and defenders are such, because of their systematic opposition to all and every attempt to make new or improved translations of the Holy Scriptures. This assumption has been the basis of nineteen twentieths of the arguments which have been repeated, from Maine to Louisiana, against the organization and objects of the American and Foreign Bible Society.

Let us for a moment examine this assumption, making, in the first place, a few explanatory remarks. Every commentary is, in its very nature, a translation. Every new interpretation of a passage is a new rendering. There has always been a tendency among scholars to give the results of their studies in the way of translation. Especially has this been the case with the founders of new sects. At the beginning of the Unitarian controversy in New-England, one of the first movements was the republication of a version of the New Testament, prepared in accordance with the Unitarian ideas of interpretation. At the same time, vigorous attacks were made upon our common version, as unduly favoring by its renderings the tenets of orthodoxy. We remember the attacks which, in boyhood, we were accustomed to hear made upon the same version by the believers in universal salvation. A Universalist version of the New Testament has been published, in which their denominational views of interpretation are embodied. The same course has been pursued by the Swedenborgians. They have given a new translation, which is made the basis of their exhibitions of what they deem the "internal sense."

The denomination which has grown out of the lately developed views of the Second Advent have now for sale, at their book-depository, a new translation, prepared by a member of their own body.* How far it contains the peculiar views of interpretation adopted by Millennialists, we have not understood. Elder Alexander Campbell accompanied his attempts to promulgate his peculiar views by a translation of the New Testament. We learn from a late number of the Harbinger, that he has now in manuscript a further revision of his translation, ready for publication in a certain contingency. From the great interest which he has manifested in the movements of the Bible Union, we may suppose that he will favor it with the results of his studies.

An amended translation was also, a few years since, issued under the auspices of * Rev. Mr. Whiting, of Williamsburg, whom common and uncontradicted rumor represents as one of the translators selected by the Bible Union.

Rev. David Bernard,* which, because of its replacing "baptize" by "immerse," was for a time called by our opponents "the Baptist Bible." The number of scholars who have, with greater or less ability, made translations of the Bible into English in whole or in part, is so great, that a mere catalogue of them would surpass the limits of a newspaper article. Whoever denies that the results of the best and most thorough biblical study of the times have not been made known to all plain men and women able to read the English tongue, in every age since the Reformation, must do it either through gross ignorance or wilful misrepresentation. Least of all can this be denied of the present age. There is scarcely a Sunday-school scholar in all our land who cannot avail himself of the various renderings of any difficult passage which have been made by the best scholars in Christendom. Indeed, one great obstacle to biblical study among unlearned Christians, is the multitude of translations and commentaries which meet them on every hand, bewildering the judgment by conflicting authorities, without giving a key by which they can be reconciled, or erroneous interpretations refuted.

Scarce a year passes that does not bring from the press new translations of portions of the Bible, in the way of commentary or otherwise, made by Christians of all denominations. No one of these translations, whether made under the auspices of a sect or by individual scholars, has taken the place of the common version for ordinary reading, either among men of learning or the people at large. Even among the Disciples, or followers of Mr. Campbell, the version of their founder has never, we believe, been able to win its way to general acceptance.

Of English translations of the Bible, then, we have great quantities, and every year adds to their number. Yet one would suppose from some speeches and writings that have been sent abroad, that persons who read only English have no means whatever of coming at a knowledge of the Bible, but from the common translation. The alleged opposition to new translations or commentaries, (which are in many respects the same thing,) in themselves considered, has no existence in any denomination, and least of all in our own. The speeches and sermons that have been erroneously represented as against making any new translations, have all been intended for one of two purposes: either to prevent the adoption by our denominational society of a certain translation, hastily made by persons in whom, in the capacity of translators, the great majority of the society's supporters had not confidence, or to defend the common version of the Bible read in our pulpits, Sunday-schools, and families, against unjust, unwarranted, and uncalled-for assaults, calculated to unsettle faith, and to lead the plain Christian to suppose that the Bible which he had read from childhood was misleading him as to the way of salvation through Christ. They were intended to prevent the denomination from being compelled, against their settled convictions, to sanction principles of translation which their best scholars and ablest men have condemned as defective; to prevent a great denominational society from violating pledges made in the most solemn manner

* If, as we have been assured by one of the most influential officers of the Union, the main object in starting the "new version" movement, in 1849, was to secure the insertion of "immerse" and "Immersion," instead of "baptize" and "baptism," in the English Scriptures which the old Bible Society should circulate; and if this was always understood to be the policy of the society; we ask, why did not these brethren, while in power, make efforts to circulate Bernard's Bible, in which this change was made? This was a revision on the principles now adopted by the Union. Why was it not then adopted by the Board of which these brethren were the leading members? If it be wrong to circulate the common version now, it was equally so then; and they were culpable in not giving their powerful aid to Mr. Bernard at that time.

before the world, and which had been renewed from year to year, to those who had contributed to its funds.

The arguments and representations made upon these subjects have been assumed to be directed against all and every attempt to throw additional light upon the Scriptures by new renderings into English. The best minds and truest hearts in our denomination have been reproached with a design to cover up God's Word from the people. They have been compared with the Roman Catholics. They have been charged with being traitors to the Baptist faith and interests, in every form of ridicule and sarcasm. These charges we hold to be grossly unjust and untrue. We speak for ourselves and for our brethren.

We wish to allude to one more fact bearing upon this charge, that will set its falsity in a still clearer light. For many years, an eminently distinguished scholar of our own denomination, Dr. Conant, of Rochester, has been engaged in biblical studies, with the intention of writing a brief commentary on the Bible, accompanied by a translation into the English tongue, containing the results of his life's labor, and the research of the ablest scholars of the present and past times. At the formation of the Bible Union, he was applied to, to place his labors at the disposal of that society. Its friends reported that he would accede to the proposals which they had made to him. This report, which the event proved to be unfounded, did more than any one thing to win confidence to the new society. Eulogies of Dr. Conant, and his fitness for the work of translating the Bible, and the idea that his labors would not be saved to the world without such a society, formed the strongest arguments with which the cause of the Union was urged upon the people. Dr. Conant, for obvious reasons, declined the propositions made to him. He chose rather to retain the control of his own time and labors, and to intrust the publication of his work, when finished, to a private publisher. He made a contract to that effect with a gentleman of this city. Dr. Conant has surrounded himself with every facility for the prosecution of his work. He has, probably, the largest collection of Polyglot editions and translations in America. The library of the great Neander will, by God's blessing, soon be added to the collection. With all the powers of his ripe scholarship, clear head, and iron constitution, he is laboring every day upon this great work. A portion of it will soon be given to the public, to be followed by others in as rapid succession as is consistent with a full and repeated revision of the work. To those of our readers who have been influenced by the repeated and violent assaults upon our common version to believe that the souls of men are in danger of detriment, who trust to its teachings for divine knowledge, we say, here is a fair prospect that all your demands will be met fully and fairly, in a manner worthy of your entire confidence. Every leading man connected with the Bible Union has, in the fullest and most unequivocal manner, endorsed Dr. Conant as the fittest man in America, if not in the world, to perform such a work. You know him; you know his learning, his piety, his love of truth, his candor, his courage, his superiority to all considerations inconsistent with his duty to God and his fellow-men. He asks no endorsement of a great society for his work, to cover its defects, if it have any. He wishes it to rest for acceptance on its own intrinsic merits; on the judgment of the learned world for its character for faithfulness, and upon the judgment of plain men and women for its character for simplicity and clearness. He wishes no partisan feeling or prejudice to be invoked, to give it a temporary reception and dispersion. He has no favorite heresies to scatter abroad, which depend on doubtful renderings of certain passages of God's Word. He is not a young man, ambitious of distinction and position. He has arrived at the age when the solemn responsibilities of life are felt with the greatest power. He has passed his whole manhood amid the "quiet and still air of delightful studies," meeting each year a successive class of vigorous-minded young men, ready to suggest every form of objection to the interpretations of the Word of Life which he has presented for their acceptance. Moreover, he asks no pecuniary assistance, except what he will receive from his publisher in the ordinary mode of remunerating literary labor. It will not cost the churches a dollar. No funds will be withdrawn from other channels of benevolence to bring his work before the world. He has no ambition to supersede the common version; for, like all scholars, he esteems it of the highest value. He has no desire to hold it up to scorn and ridicule in order to create a sale for his own.

Now, the announcement of this work by Dr. Conant has been received by the entire scholarship and membership of our denomination in this country with pleasure and commendation. Singularly enough, the only suspicion that has been thrown upon his views and plans has come from the Board of the Bible Union itself, after he had declined to publish his work under their auspices and control. They passed resolutions and published them, to the effect that Dr. Conant's object was not to make a version for the common people, but for the learned. This statement, calculated as it was to injure the pecuniary value of his labor, by creating a prejudice against it in the minds of those for whom he specially wrote, was promptly met and denied by Dr. Conant. Notwithstanding this, after the publication of these resolutions, Dr. Conant was again applied to, to take charge of their work, and again declined.

In a pretty extensive and familiar intercourse with scholars of our own denomination, who are friends and supporters of the American and Foreign Bible Society, we have not yet heard one word of aught but commendation of the end and object which Dr. Conant has in view.

The whole Baptist press, with the partial exception of a few papers professing special devotion to the work of English translation, have spoken with unqualified commendation of the undertaking. We had the pleasure of making the first announcement of the work, and, in accordance with the views which we have uniformly maintained, of expressing our gratification at the event. Among no men in our denomination has that undertaking found warmer friends than among the managers and supporters of the American and Foreign Bible Society. They will give it no blind support; they will hold Dr. Conant's work subject to criticism, and will give it, when it appears, the position which, in their honest judgment, it deserves. But if, in the furtherance of his designs, he or his publisher had sent agents around the country, who, to prepare the market for the announced work, had sought by all means to destroy the confidence of the churches in the version of the Bible which they and their fathers had been accustomed to use, and from which they had drawn their hopes of eternal life, and that, too, years before they could have any thing worthy to replace it; if they had called the attachment* of our churches to this version the result of ignorance and fanaticism, and avowed the design of spending large sums of money to remove it; if, to forward their ends, they had attacked the American and Foreign Bible Society, and sought by their agents to withdraw legacies and funds from its treasury, to diminish its power to send Bibles to the heathen, or to distribute them among the destitute, the poor, and the perishing, on our own shores; if they had charged its patrons and supporters—comprising a great majority of the best minds and hearts in our denomination—with disloyalty to Christ, with being hypocritical and secret enemies of the Baptist faith, thus introducing dissension and heart-burning between pastor and people, and into the bosoms of the churches; if he had suffered himself to be associated with, or directed or controlled in his work by, persons incompetent in scholarship or heretical in doctrine,*

* The strict secrecy maintained by the Bible Union in reference to the names of their translators, together with the rumors that Elder A. Campbell and Dr. Shannon, also a Disciple, were among the translators of the new society, have excited painful fears that a work of such delicacy and importance, and so vitally affecting the interests of truth, were to be committed in part to the hands of men whom our churches have for many years considered a radically unsound in vital points of our common faith. Evangelical bodies have been exceedingly solicitous in reference to those whom they have employed to translate the Bible for the heathen. They have made known their names to the world, that both their scholarship and soundness in the faith might be open to the scrutiny of all. When the friends of the Bible Union hoped to be able to secure Dr. Conant as a translator, they most anxiously made the fact known to the world, in order to secure confidence in their work. Why has this policy been changed to one of strict secrecy? It would seem that when they call upon us to contribute money for a work that involves such interests, and refuse to give us the names of their translators, it shows a want of confidence either in the reputation of the men whom they have employed, or in the good sense and judgment of Baptist churches.

Since the above article was written, we have seen an address delivered by Elder Alexander Campbell at Memphis, in which he seems to assume that he is one of the translators; and, tacitly acknowledging the issue that he is not a fit translator for orthodox Christians unless they admit him to be sound in the faith, he goes on to assert, in the most emphatic terms, his own orthodoxy, while he denounces Evangelical Christendom in general as deficient in that respect, and holds up what he calls "old," "quaint," "spectacle-bedstrid orthodoxy," to ridicule and contempt. From the tenor of this speech we shall continue to infer, until it is contradicted, that Mr. Campbell is to be one of the translators of the Bible for the use of those very "orthodox" Christians whom he considers so much in error in their interpretations of Scripture. What Mr. Campbell's exact views are it may be difficult to define. We however may, without presumption, adopt the language of the Rev. Dr. Jeter, of St. Louis, in his memoir of Rev. Andrew Broadbush. He says: "Mr. C. was understood to teach, and did teach, if language has any settled import, that every man should believe the gospel, which is as easy to do as to believe that General Washington was the leader of the revolutionary armies; he immersed on a profession of this faith, which immersion is equivalent in the Scripture, not sectarian sense of the term, to regeneration or conversion; that in immersion, not before, he shall receive remission of sins; and then, and not till then, he shall receive the Holy Spirit; and, as a consequence of this gift, a pure heart and a good conscience."

From a pretty careful examination of a portion of Mr. C.'s works, we believe that Dr. Jeter's statements are candid and fair. Mr. C. has not recanted, so far as we know, any doctrine which he has taught. Now, these views of Mr. Campbell are his own interpretations of the Bible. If conscientious and honest, as in charity we are bound to believe they are, he and those who believe with him cannot make or sanction any translation which does not embody these views of what the Bible means. These views logically involve the fundamental error of Puseyism and Popery. They deny the necessity of spiritual union to Christ as a prerequisite to admission to the ordinances of God's house. By the promulgation of these doctrines, through the means of a ready eloquence and a facile style, Mr. C. has introduced more of confusion, division, and unsound doctrine into our Baptist churches than all men living. It is not strange, then, that we shrink back from an alliance with such a man, in such a work as interpreting the Scriptures for young converts to Christ, and for those who are to seek from such an interpretation a distinct and definite answer to the momentous question, "What must I do to be saved?" If none but men sound in the faith have been engaged for the work of interpreting the Scriptures by the Union, the mistake can at once be corrected by giving their names to the public. If rumor has not spoken the truth on this point, and our fears are groundless, we should thank God from our hearts.

we and they would have withstood Dr. Conant and his publisher in so doing, to the extent of our powers. Fidelity to truth and justice and religion would have required this at our hands. And we doubt not that in so doing we should have had the sympathy of a great majority of those who love the Baptist churches and Baptist faith. Notwithstanding our respect for the talents, the learning, and the position of Dr. Conant, if he or his publisher shall in the future take any such course, we shall feel ourselves bound to oppose them in it by all Christian and honorable means.

But we have no such fears. Dr. Conant, we are certain, desires no such measures to be taken to circulate the translation and commentary upon which he is engaged. He is willing that the good sense and religious feeling of the churches should be left to take their own course, and he is willing that his labors should stand or fall by their decision. In this he is wise. If, like the great Greek historian, he shall achieve a work worthy to be "a possession of all time," he knows that neither posterity nor his own age will suffer it willingly to die. Partisan feeling and accidental excitement may sustain a work of literature for a brief season, but unless it have real merit, the height of its temporary rise will be the measure of the depth of neglect to which it will ultimately sink.

We have made these remarks to meet, with the best possible refutation, the unfounded and grossly untrue statement that the friends of the American and Foreign Bible Society have set themselves in array to prevent the popularization of biblical knowledge, or that they have placed the common version of the Bible in the place that all Protestant Christendom assigns to the original texts. We say, then, in view of these facts, open to all the world, to all our readers abroad and at home, that whoever avers that the managers and friends of our old society (dearer than ever to us since those who were once its friends have become its enemies) have set themselves against all translations into the English tongue, either now or in the past, is guilty before God of bearing false witness against his neighbor.

While they are ready to welcome any addition to the stock of biblical knowledge, they feel that the wholesale attacks that have been made upon our English version are wrong in spirit, and in most instances wrong in fact. They feel that to denounce it as unworthy of credit, while there is by common consent nothing better to replace it, is doing wrong to souls; that to denounce those who are laboring to meet the wants of the destitute by its distribution, is doing a wrong to brethren entitled to respect. The friends of the old society dare not cease to distribute English Bibles until three or five years shall have passed away, in the expectation of getting a "better version." While these years are passing, English-speaking souls by thousands are every day passing on to the judgment. Ought we to assume the terrible responsibility of withholding the Bible from such until a translation is furnished that better suits our taste? Shall we use our powers to cripple the energies of a society that, according to its original design and object, is holding out the lamp of life to the destitute on our own and foreign shores? Shall we paralyze the arm that is doing so much to redeem souls from destruction, because of a difference on a matter of criticism?

We regret to learn that even the City Bible Society, organized to distribute gratuitously the Bible among the destitute, which supports a colporteur among the Irish, and another among the Germans, in our own city, has shared in the same condemnation with the society to which it is auxiliary. While these thronging multitudes of sailors, and of the poor and ignorant, are rushing on to death, are we to wait years before we give them the chart to heaven? Are we to withdraw our support from the society whose funds are printing and distributing the Bible in Siam, in Burmah, in China, in Greece, in France, in Germany, in New-Mexico, in California, and Oregon, because we differ with its managers on the interpretation of its constitution!

It is some time since we have written on this subject. We allude to it now only from a sense of duty which we dare not disregard. We believe that many excellent, well-meaning persons, have been misled by false issues. In reference to the work of making a new English translation, we have no controversy with the Bible Union or its friends. In doing this, they are only adding to the scores of English translations that already exist, and are accessible to the general reader. We are on record as the friends of a translation to be made by the very man whom they selected above all others, and before all others, to do this work. But we would entreat them, in the name of perishing souls, if they cannot coöperate with the friends of our old and loved denominational society, that they will suffer those who have a mind to labor in its ranks to do so unmolested.

REPORT

PRESENTED TO THE SPECIAL MEETING OF THE AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY, AT HOPE CHAPEL, 14TH APRIL, 1852.

THE Board of Managers of the American and Foreign Bible Society ask special attention to the following statement in regard to the rooms which have been occupied for the transaction of the Society's local business.

The meetings of your Board for the first three or four years were held in the meeting-house of the Oliver street Baptist Church, but late in the summer of 1840, suitable rooms were procured in Chambers street, at an annual rent of $300. That property was then in market, and many of our friends strongly urged its purchase, as it was easy of access to the business part of the city, afforded ample and desirable accommodations, and could be bought for a very reasonable sum, to the payment of which they were ready to pledge their generous aid. These advisers were not only true friends and liberal patrons, but shrewd financiers as well; and had their counsels prevailed, their sagacious forecast would have secured to the Society the ownership of eligible premises, that have since risen in value full 200 per cent.

In 1841, the First Baptist Church in this city, at the suggestion and the earnest solicitation of their pastor, Rev. S. H. Cone, D. D., then President of our Society, resolved upon the erection of suitable rooms in their contemplated church-edifice, at the corner of Broome and Elizabeth streets, for the accommodation of the Am. Bap. Home Miss. Soc. and our own. The style and plans of the building were chosen with reference to this arrangement; and to meet the additional expense. Dr. Cone pledged himself to raise $10,000. The Trustees of the church-corporation, subsequent to the completion of the edifice, released the pastor from this obligation; but, as if to confirm the frequent assertion that these Rooms were built expressly for the use of the two Societies named—nay, as if to show that they have some just claim, not to the proprietorship, but to the right of occupancy of these premises—large sums of money were actually raised and paid for the purpose of meeting that failure of Dr. Cone's, and his exoneration: and of such payments it is susceptible of proof that the larger part was given by men who are, to this day, the attached and generous friends of the Am. and For. Bible Society, for whose accommodation then, as now, they were devising liberal things.

On the 5th of January, 1842, a formal offer of the use of the premises, 350 Broome street, was made in a communication, of which the following is a copy :

At a Meeting of Board of Trustees of the First Baptist Church, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted, Thursday, December 30, 1841 :

Resolved, That, in pursuance of instructions from the Church, this Board tender to the Board of Managers of the Am. and For. Bible Soc. the use of two Rooms and Cellar in the south-east portion of our Meeting-House, for the transaction of the business of said institution.

Resolved, That the large upper Room in front of our Meeting-House be appropriated for the use of the Managers and Committee of the Am. and For. Bible Soc., and of the Am. Bap. Home Mis. Soc., when necessary.

Resolved, That all the accommodations offered are to be enjoyed by these Societies at a merely nominal rent; that they are to be used only for their own appropriate business; and that the respective Boards of these Societies be requested to submit the question of their permanent occupancy by the denomination, for Bible and Missionary purposes, for which they were built, to these Societies at their annual meetings, to be held in our Meeting-House on the last Tuesday in April next.

Resolved, That our Chairman and Secretary be instructed to communicate these resolutions to the respective Boards of the Societies.

By order and in behalf of Board of Trustees of the First Baptist Church.

(Signed,) WM. W. TODD, Chairman.

R. W. MARTIN, Secretary.

This communication having been presented and read to your Board, a joint meeting of the Bible Society's Board and the Executive Committee of the Home Missionary Society was held to confer upon the subject. At this meeting were urged strong and weighty objections to the consummation of what it was believed would place denominational Societies in an unworthy and unhappy state of dependence upon a single church, and thus, under conceivable contingencies, within the power of that church to an unfortunate degree, while it would almost inevitably give to it an undue importance and commanding influence over other churches, equally respectable and equally liberal. But all this was met by considerations of economy; by assurances of the generous spirit of the donors, and their desire to secure permanent accommodations to both these Societies at a merely nominal rent, and by the earnestly expressed wishes of Dr. Cone.

After a full and free discussion of the subject then, and at an adjourned meeting of the two Boards in conference, it was

Resolved, That the proffer of the First Baptist Church to occupy their Rooms for one year from May 1st, 1842, be accepted; provided the acceptance of the offer is considered as not affecting the consideration of the subject when presented before the Societies.

At the Annual Meeting of our Society, on the 26th of April following, after Dr. Cone had presented, in strong terms, the advantages that would accrue to the Society by accepting the generous overtures of the Church, and had warmly urged the arrangement as one very near to his heart; on motion of Rev. Dr. Kendrick, of New-York, seconded by Rev. S. J. Drake, of New-Jersey, it was

Resolved, That the spacious rooms in the south-east portion of the edifice erected

Pursuant to this arrangement, the possession of the premises nominal sum of one dollar per annum has been paid regularly; have been kept in ordinary repair; and all expenses for furn including the introduction of Croton water, have been met on thus paying all that was asked of us, while no question of title ever started by us. So perfect was our good faith in the integrity of the First Church, their Board of Trustees, and the Pastor, expressed and reaffirmed, at least by the strongest implication, by Dr. C. May, that your Board made no effort to procure a lease executed regarding the voluntary written proffer of the Church and Trust part, with the Society's formal acceptance on the other, as strict contract as Christian men needed. Had such a legal document years ago, no one believes that there would have been the least part of the Church-corporation to execute it. Indeed, it seems in probable that neither of the parties interested had the remotest any contingencies would arise to render such an instrument desirable.

In this connection your Board feel bound to say, that when the First Baptist Church presented to them, about a year since, a lease question, without any solicitation on their part,* it seemed so fit

BIBLE ROOMS, NEW-YORK.

REV. S. S. CUTTING.

MY DEAR SIR:—It has been charged directly, or by implication, that, in now occupied by the American and Foreign Bible Society, made and profit by the Trustees of the First Baptist Church, there was some complicity or concurrence by the Board of the Bible Society. I appeal to you for the facts.

Please state, also, the circumstances under which the resolutions were passed at its last anniversary, in reference to that lease, and to our occupancy of it.

Yours truly,

FRAMINGHAM, N.

REV. R. BARCOCK, D.D., COR. SEC., &c.

MY DEAR SIR:—I have observed with astonishment the charges of "collusion" between the Board of the American and Foreign Bible Society and the First Baptist Church, in regard to the proffer of the lease of the rooms occupied by the Bible Society. I can assure you, without qualification or reservation, that there was no cooperation. The proffer was entirely unsolicited by the Board, and, in fact, expected. I was at the time, and had been for almost a year, the Corresponding Secretary. I was on terms of intimacy with some of the Trustees of the Church. During this time, the question was several times submitted to me—never, however, in an official way—Whether it was not expedient for the Trustees to execute the lease and legalize the terms and conditions on which the society had been occupying the rooms? I uniformly and decidedly opposed any thing and every thing that would have been an acknowledgment of the motives in which this suggestion was made, and who very naturally and very justly desired to guard their own interests. But I knew that such a measure would be misrepresented, and I explained. Besides this, I did not believe that the First Church, u essaying to repair the damage of an early oversight; as attempting only to legalize what had been for eight or nine years justly regarded as morally binding, without conferring any really new privileges or powers, that your Board, without dreaming of trenching a hair's breadth upon the rights of property vested in the said Church, thought it would be scarcely decorous, if indeed it were an optional matter, to decline the acceptance of that carefully drawn paper—careful alike, as it appeared to them, of the prerogatives and just claims of the Church, and the reasonable expectations of the Society. But no sooner did they learn that the First Church disavowed and complained of this action of their Trustees, than your Board took the necessary steps to cancel the obligations of the lease at once, and thus throw infatuation, would perpetrate the injustice and folly of attempting an ejection. Still further, it was my desire, on any intimation of a wish of the First Church to that effect, to leave the rooms. I did not feel willing to be an unwelcome occupant.

Thus stood the case between myself and the Trustees. The Board of Managers had never taken any action whatever on the subject; and the only time, according to my recollection, that any allusion was made to the subject in a Board meeting, it was at once dropped, with general regret that it had been touched.

At the regular Board meeting in April, (I think I have the right month in my mind; I am writing away from the records,) an adjourned meeting was appointed to take place four weeks from that time, (I fix the time from recollection,) for the special purpose of considering the annual report to be presented at the anniversary. That day came, and the Board met for that purpose. Unexpectedly to me and to the Board, the lease was brought to the meeting, and submitted for acceptance. I deeply regretted it; but the lease was now before us, and action could not be avoided. I drew up a resolution of provisional acceptance, and reference to the society for ultimate action. But it was urged that such legal forms were necessary as were within the province of the Board alone, and that definitive action, therefore, should now be taken. There was but a moment for deliberation, for the special object of the meeting required imperatively the whole time of the session. With but a moment to reflect, it seemed to me that the voluntary proffer of a lease being made, and that lease, as I understood it, being designed simply to legalize and confirm an existing arrangement made by the society, the Board had no discretion in the premises. They must simply accept the lease, and wait for further instructions. Thus the lease was proffered, thus accepted; and this was my own agency in the matter, both private and official. The Board had nothing whatever to do with the procuring of the lease, and its proffer was totally unsolicited, and, I believe, undesired.

Within two days, I learned that the transaction gave great offense to the First Church, and I at once set myself at work to accomplish the undoing of what had been done. I saw the totally false published statement, which virtually charged the Board with conspiring for the procurement of the lease, and felt that it would be a wrong to the society to allow the matter to remain in such a position. I found, on consultation, that a large part of the Board felt just as I did, and were ready and desirous for full and unqualified retreat. The resolutions of retreat, modified, in some particulars, while under discussion before the Board, were written by myself, after consultation with my venerable friend, Col. W. W. Todd, the President of the Trustees, and with his full concurrence. The aim and purpose of those resolutions was to throw the society right back to the position it had occupied before the lease was given; to make the lease as if it never had been. These resolutions were passed first by the Board, and then confirmed by the society at the annual meeting; thus removing every possible occasion for complaint. The relations of the First Church and the Bible Society, as to the rooms, were now precisely such as they had originally been fixed by the concurrent action of those bodies. Such was the purpose and the import of the abandonment of the lease; and any pretense of a claim set up on the part of the society, rendering an ejection necessary to guard the rights of the church, is as baseless as the fabric of a vision.

I have thus given you the information, in regard to this matter, which you have requested in your note of March 31. I believe I had perfect knowledge of the whole transaction, and these are the facts, according to my best recollection.—Yours very respectfully, themselves back upon their original title to permanent occupancy and use. Judge our surprise when the following communication was received in January last:

NEW-YORK, January 27, 1852.

To the Board of the American and Foreign Bible Society:

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—At the last monthly meeting of the First Baptist church, a resolution was unanimously passed, directing me to give the proper notice to the American and Foreign Bible Society to quit and surrender the premises they now occupy in the meeting-house of the First Baptist church on the first day of May next. The trustees had previously acted upon the subject unanimously, and the reasons which they presented to the church, showing the necessity of such action, led to the unanimous adoption of the above resolution.

In communicating it to you, we take the opportunity of stating that the course thus adopted has not been prompted by any unkind feeling toward the American and Foreign Bible Society, or its Board, but by the imperative necessity of regarding the right of the church to the property concerned.—Yours, in gospel bonds,

ELI KELLEY,

Attest: SYLVESTER PIER, Church Clerk.

Pending the consideration of the foregoing, your Board received the second missive, designed, doubtless, to make the matter more explicit, and the order more peremptory. We give that also:—

NEW-YORK, February 14, 1852.

To the Board of the American and Foreign Bible Society:

DEAR BRETHREN:—Understanding that the notice served through you upon the American and Foreign Bible Society, on the 27th of January, 1852, to quit and surrender the premises occupied by that Society, in the meeting-house of the First Baptist church, in this city, on the first day of May next, is regarded by some of your number as not emanating directly from the Board of Trustees, and therefore as not strictly legal; to remedy such supposed defect, I now inform you that the said notice was given by the order and with the authority of the Board of Trustees of the First Baptist church. In order that there may be no misunderstanding in the matter, you are hereby notified to quit and surrender the said premises on the said first day of May next.

By order of the Board of Trustees,

The questions involved in this notice "to quit and surrender the premises" were freely and fully discussed at several meetings of the Board; and as the result, such prudential measures as the necessities of the case seemed to demand have been taken, and this special meeting of the Society has been called.

We beg leave, therefore, to conclude this paper with a statement of our convictions upon some of the points in question, and one or two suggestions for your consideration.

We are deeply and painfully impressed—

1st, That it is unwise and unsafe to identify a great national society with an individual church by any arrangement of local accommodation that implies the least dependence upon their special favor, or the continuance of their good will; and that the history of this transaction must inevitably shake the confidence of myriads of Zion's friends, and serve to confirm the suspicions and charges of her foes, as to the integrity of Christian men and of a Christian church, when there are no legalized forms of obligation, or the solemnities of an oath, to bind them.

2d. Nor can they hide their grief that their credulity is so exorbitantly taxed, when the church "take the opportunity of stating that the course thus adopted has not been prompted by any unkind feeling toward the American and Foreign Bible Society, or its Board, but by the imperative necessity of regarding the right of the church to the property concerned;" as your Board are fully persuaded that the Society owes its threatened ejection from the Rooms, which were built expressly for their permanent use and occupancy, to the fact of having lost the favor of the said church, by refusing to lend itself to the present "new version" movement.

3d. It seems a great pity and a burning shame that, by our endeavors to save to the cause of Bible distribution $300 or $500 per annum for the last ten years, we should have lost a valuable property that was once within our reach, and must now divert for rent perhaps a thousand dollars a year from the work of supplying those who are famishing for the bread of life.

The following resolutions were, after the consideration of the above report, adopted unanimously by the Society:—

Whereas, The American and Foreign Bible Society have been notified to vacate the room, No. 350 Broome street, therefore,

Resolved, That the Board be instructed to comply with said notice at the specified time.

Resolved, That the Board be authorized and instructed to procure suitable temporary accommodations for the Society's local business.

ABSTRACT OF XVth ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY,

PRESENTED AT THE SPECIAL MEETING, NEW-YORK, 14TH APRIL, 1852.

In the Home Field of our labors, some slight changes have been made the past year, such as dispensing with General Agent's and Assistant Treasurer's services; issuing the Periodical Paper quarterly—the Summer No. to be a double one, and contain the Annual Report. All these Papers to be put together in a cover at the end, as the "Transactions of the Society for the year." The experiment of both these changes is too recent to enable us to form final conclusions of their wisdom. The Corresponding Secretary and half of the Agents have been changed during the year, thus occasioning considerable embarrassment, which greater permanency would have avoided. This, with the formation of a Southern Bible Board at Nashville, last May, and the consequent cutting off from us of no less than sixty of our Auxiliaries in that quarter, together with the active, persevering opposition of the Bible Union and its agents, threatened, at one time, materially to hinder our work. By the blessing of God these fears have been dissipated. The collections from Churches, Associations, and individuals, have somewhat exceeded those of last year in amount. From Auxiliaries, for reasons above stated, they have been much less. From legacies, larger; sales, nearly the same. Collections of outstanding debts, less. Entire receipts of the year, $42,312 25, being a larger amount than in any preceding year, except the last.

[A separate Report was ordered by the Society of the Publication and Sales

DR. HAGUE'S ADDRESS.

Department, which shows a gain, instead of a loss as hitherto, of for the last year.]

To the Foreign Fields, always regarded as the prominent object $21,574 have this year been appropriated, (more than one half of it of the Society from all sources,) as follows:—

$10,000 to the Baptist Missionary Union for Asia; $1,000 to the same many; $500 to the Union for Northern France.

$1,000 to Rev. Dr. Sutton, for Orissa.

$7,699 22 to J. G. Oncken, for Germany and Denmark.

$550 12 to Rev. Dr. Devan, for Southern France.

$500 to J. L. Shuck, for China.

$145 to Canada.

$50 to Hayti.

$30 to New-Mexico and adjacent regions.

$100 in Bibles and Testaments for Liberia, Africa.

Recapitulation: $11,500 to Asia; $9,749 to Europe; $225 to United States;) $100 to Africa.

The grand total devoted by this Society to the Foreign Fields a years of its history, is $240,460. Can it reasonably be claimed that sum would have been secured from our churches for this object with agency of this Society? This view we regard as full proof of the institution, as much needed now as at its origin or any other period of

Though we close the year without a balance against us on the as last year, yet it is important to remember that our liabilities for will be larger than ever. ## ADDRESS OF REV. WM. HAGUE, D

OF NEWARK, NEW-JERSEY.

Rev. Dr. Hague, of Newark, then introduced the following remarks:

Resolved, That, in the course of events during the past year, new occasion to thank God and take courage, and new incentive assigned to it of Bible distribution.

Bible distribution, Mr. President; Bible distribution, and not Bible home work; and I might allow this simple thought to make its comment or reference to the occasion of this meeting. Since received notice to vacate the rooms they occupy, my own feeling satisfied to bow ourselves quietly and humbly out of the rooms occupied for so many years; to acknowledge all the rights and responsibilities of others, and to leave the rest to God. And it is fitting we attest before God and men that our consciences are void of offence have sought to be true to our great principles.

The grand object for which this society was formed was Bible distribution, and we are charged with being recreant to our trust, because we have not followed the different object that has been proposed to us. It is fitting that we should say, that we have been faithful to the principles of this society, as contained in its constitution and its published documents.

Can this be a matter of dispute? How can we ascertain the principles of similar societies, of the East India Company, of the American Temperance Society? There are these two sources: first, historical facts; second, their published documents.

The first and great historical fact of this society is this: that it arose out of a division in the American Bible Society, upon their refusal to make appropriations for our foreign versions; up to that time we were working together with them, and, but for that refusal, would not have separated. This society was formed to meet that emergency; it was expressly understood that the English version should not be touched; that they would hold to that, and make new versions only where there were none other. These same principles have been expressed also in the published documents of the society, with all the solemnity with which the Baptists of Massachusetts were of old called to express their principles. They were unfolded before the Legislature of this State, in such a way that no one who interprets words by the rules of common sense could dispute them. So far, then, from being recreant to our trusts and to our principles, we said then, and we reaffirm it now, that it would have been a usurpation of power, and a trampling down upon the principles of the denomination, if the society had pursued the course proposed to them.

And when I say this, I recall the memory of one whom you will no doubt recollect with feelings of brotherly love: I mean Daniel H. Barnes; he was the partner of Dr. Griscom, and the companion of the former President of this society in his early labors; a strong friend of our educational enterprises, and one of the founders of the Hamilton Institution. A phrase from his lips I can never forget. He had just returned from a meeting at Hamilton, where there had been much discussion, for he was decided in his own opinion, though he often yielded to his brethren. "If the Baptists of the United States," said he, "were only a united people, they would be relatively omnipotent." That there might be such a union was his fervent prayer; and in the rise and organization of this society, he thought he saw the elements of such a union; in this spirit of accomplishing results by societies, or, as it may be termed, in the rise of societyism, he hoped for union, and lived in view of the times on which we have now entered. Still, this thought would suggest itself to him: There is no wave of progress but bears some germ of evil in its bosom, and these combinations may contain some evil that will eventually work itself out. Such thoughts became germs in my mind; and when this society was formed, interpreting it by the light of history, I found a society that drew together individuals and churches, throughout the length and breadth of the land; and at its head the pastor of a city church, surrounded by an active people whose praise was in all the churches; and I asked myself, What would be the result if this metropolitan Board should decide upon some new measure, which they should carry by the weight of their personal influence? Where, in such a case, would lie the check? In the prelacy, and generally in organized governments, checks are provided; but in a voluntary association, with only a moral government, where may not the vessel drive? And though the moral sense of the community may be the ultimate check, it leaves large room for agitation and danger.

When this movement for a new version was first hinted at; when I saw the intimation of it in the Recorder, we—for I was then connected with the paper at Boston—publicly denied it; but when it came to us in the printed document itself, it was then that we penned the article which drew so much attention to us, and we were charged with being the maligners of our brethren; and then did it begin to be feared, in all New-England, that these metropolitan brethren would isolate and compromise us, as a denomination, and expose us to the shafts of ridicule and argument before the world; and it was an emotion that sprang from the depths of our souls. We came on here to the annual meeting of the society, and the record of the vote in the Tabernacle decided the question, and checked the assumption of metropolitan power, so that we hope it will not be reenacted in our time.

Dr. Wayland says that every society is bound to announce its object and principles; that when these are changed, the society is virtually dissolved, and that its members are bound to withdraw from it, or they will be held to approve of the change. We have seen a check, then, to any such tendency, and should congratulate ourselves when we think what would have been the effect on our churches, if that resolution had passed.

In speaking thus, I mean nothing disrespectful toward men. I speak only on principles; and though I honor and love the President and officers of this society, yet, if they should change its object or propose a plan that would compromise the churches, without obtaining their direction or consent, I should pray that God would smite them with his power, and scatter them like the chaff which the wind driveth away.

What do the people whom we represent in the cities, the towns, the valleys, and plains throughout the land, demand of us as to the English version? It is this: that, as the society who represent the denomination—for there is not one fifteenth of our number who approve the design of the Bible Union—we should retain our right of inheritance in the old English version, the noblest legacy that the past has bequeathed to us. The English version has no parallel in history in its influence over the world; its way was prepared by revolutions and attended by sacrifices; it is embalmed in the blood of martyrdom; its phrases and words are inwrought in the fabric, and give beauty and strength to our literature; and it has been the source of intelligence and power to the Anglo-Saxon mind. It is the only version the world has ever seen, on the daily reading of which the sun does not set; and shall any Board disclaim this noble heritage, and sunder this tie that binds us to the nations of the earth, and scatter to the winds all its advantages?

Christopher Anderson, in his Annals of the English Bible, says that the version of William Tyndal, though there are variations, is really the basis of our English version, and that they are little short of being identical. There was a time when the idea of translating the whole Bible lay in Tyndal's mind and filled his soul. The Lord called him to the work, and he could not stay. "Far better," said a schoolman with whom he was disputing, "far better to be without God's law than the Pope's." Tyndal defied the Pope and all his laws, and vowed that the time should come when the poorest ploughboy should know more of theology than they.

He went to seek the aid of Tunstall, the Bishop of London, but little did he know of the spirit of the Prelacy; persecution drove him to the Continent, and his work was completed there without the patronage of society or king. God alone was his patron, and he returned to England with his completed work; many were persecuted and burned for reading it; but it shook the powers of Church and State, and Cardinal Wolsey trembled, and invoked the aid of bishops and king to extirpate it.

In reply to the denunciation of Tunstall, Bishop of London, who had been the friend of his youth, Tyndal says that, if they find a little "i" without a dot, they cry "heresy" and "error;" they count up and make two thousand of them, and call them errors. And do we not see the same thing now! They count up the errors of the Bible, till the infidel would say there is no Bible worthy of trust for an honest man. What an age of the world it is, when sober men, who would willingly die for the Bible, are so misled as to be the coadjutors of Romanism and infidelity itself!

As to one point extensively broached by pen and lip, it is said, when we speak as I have spoken, and sometimes by candid men—though such a one is "rara avis in terris"—You have bound yourself to, and become the idolater of a version, and are the enemy of improvement and progress. This society has never opposed a new version; it has no objections to one; but it does object to being wielded as machinery for an end which it was not designed to effect, and which it cannot, without an usurpation of power. All that we say to them is, If you want a new version, make it; do not talk so much about it, but give it to us.

The common version has been designated as King James's version, but this is not strictly true; that indeed is its historical title, but he did not make or originate it. He was not yet crowned when the Council was assembled at Hampton Court which planned the present version. It was the President of Corpus Christi College that proposed it to the king, and there was no secret contract about it, for the men engaged in it were well known to the world as having no superiors in talent and learning; it was not set on foot by authority or proclamation, but made its own way, unaided. Dr. Symonds makes the remark, that it made its way quietly in the period of about forty years.

I was in company with Christopher Anderson at his house in Edinburgh, before his work was published, and he repeated to me this great truth in regard to Tyn-dal's version: that he had no patron, but let his version make its own way among the people: and the same is true of Cranmer's version; it had no other force or influence than its own merit.

With such a wreath of honor and glory around this version, we can say to every one who is in favor of society action in translations, do so, and let your version find its own way to the people by its own merits, by slow degrees, even if it take forty years, as did the present one; undertake your work, and be patient, and let each society do its own work. Let us go forward in the spirit of this resolution, and He who commands blessings will support us. He shall send his Word forth out of his mouth, and it shall not return unto him void, but shall accomplish the thing that he pleases, and prosper in the thing whereto he sent it. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree; instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle; and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign, that shall not be cut off.

 The regular ANNIVERSARY SERVICES of the Fifteenth Annual Meeting of the American and Foreign Bible Society will be held in the house of worship of the First Baptist church, in Cleveland, Ohio, May 13th. Three sessions will be held. The Introductory Sermon by Rev. Dr. Neal, of Boston, in the morning; Reports and Addresses, afternoon and evening. Rev. Messrs. MACOON, of New-York, BURROWS, of Philadelphia, and returned missionaries HASWELL, from Burmah, and LORD, from China, with several others, may be expected to take part in the services.

SPECIAL MEETING.

NEW YORK, April 14, 1852.

UPON the call of the President, in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, a Special Meeting of the American and Foreign Bible Society was held in Hope Chapel, New York, on Wednesday, April 14, 1852.

The meeting was called to order at 3 o'clock P. M. The President, Rev. B. T. WALSH, D.D., in the chair.

Prayer was offered by Rev. A. D. GILLETTE, of Pa.

The President then addressed the Society in reference to the objects of the meeting, and presented a report from the Board on the subject of their ejection from the rooms heretofore occupied by the Society.

During the discussion of the resolutions appended to the report, the subject was referred to a Committee, consisting of J. M. LINNARD, and G. B. IDE, of Pa.; A. TENBROOK, of Mich.; E. LATHROP, and G. C. BALDWIN, of New York.

On motion, Rev. J. GOADBY, A. D. GILLETTE, G. S. WEBB, J. J. WOOLSEY, and Mr. W. CARTER, were appointed a Committee to nominate Officers and Managers for the ensuing year.

The Corresponding Secretary then read a brief abstract from the Annual Report.

A report of the action of the Board upon the suggestions in the report on the 2nd Article of the Constitution, presented last year, was read by the Corresponding Secretary, including an account of the operations of the Home Department during the year.

The Report was accepted and ordered to be printed.

REPORT.

The Board do not deem it requisite to go over the ground so fully occupied by the two reports made last year—one to the Society, by Rev. Mr. GRANGER, and the other to the Board, by Messrs. CURTING, MAGOON, and STONE. It would be possible to show in some of the statements and figures of the former, covering the ground so widely of the whole history of the Society's operations, certain inaccuracies—unadvertent, no doubt—and which do not greatly modify the general conclusions. It is the less necessary to enter into this detail, because in the practical course pursued the past year, and which it is the settled purpose to pursue hereafter, we can cordially agree.

This has been set forth with sufficient explicitness by the report of the Committee to the Board, (printed in full on pp. 59-64, inclusive of last year's Annual Report,) to which the Board beg leave to refer, as indicating the future course which it is deemed best to be pursued. This embraces the following points:

1. The supplying of the Depository with Bibles and Testaments by purchase, as the ultimate policy of the Society.

2. That no more stereotype plates should be made or purchased by the Society.

3. Those plates now on hand, to be sold, as soon as, in the opinion of the Board, they can be disposed of to advantage.

4. The Donation Department, (Foreign and Home,) and the Publication and Sales Department, to be kept entirely distinct from each other, so that it can at all times be clearly shown what is the state of each.

This will preserve what many of the friends of the Society, in all parts of the country, deem now an indispensable part of its operations, the work of Home distribution among the destitute millions of our own land—both natives and immigrants. It is known to the Board, that funds to a very considerable extent have come into our possession for this home work, and that still larger sums have been devised to the Society for carrying on efficiently, and more thoroughly than hitherto, this important branch of our operations.

In the next place, it leaves untouched the rights of Life Members and Life Directors to be, if they choose, the yearly almoners, to a small amount, of a portion of the investment which they have made in the payments to our Treasury. Whether it was originally wise or unwise, to give such advantages, it can scarcely be deemed an open question now, since it has, in good faith, and after a similar example of kindred institutions, been proposed to and accepted by the parties who have secured, during their natural lives, this right. Nor does the idea of making a difference between the rights and privileges of those already Members or Directors, and those new, or hereafter becoming such, appear feasible. Payments in part, for the accomplishment of this object, have already been made, with the expectation of this individual privilege. How could these be justly denied their claim, on completing the payment of the stipulated sum? It would not, indeed, be easy to fix any point of time when this new restriction should go into effect, without causing great, and to some extent, reasonable dissatisfaction. Besides it is susceptible of proof that this method of distributing, some few thousand of plain Bibles and Testaments annually, is advantageous in every view, to the great cause which we are laboring to promote. It engages more hands and hearts in the holy work of diffusing the Bread of Life among the destitute: it awakens fresh gratitude and interest among the recipients of these favors; and indirectly it furnishes an inducement to contribute to the funds of the Society, either a large sum at once, or a smaller sum annually, which it is not unreasonably hoped, may form the habit of a regular contribution annually to this noble cause, while the donors live. The incidental evils and infelicities (somewhat too much expatiated upon, perhaps, in former reports,) are not of a character to resist correction. Except for Pulpit Bibles, few applications have, the last year, been made for other than plain, cheap Bibles or Testaments, on these quotas of Life Members or Life Directors. And by prominently exhibiting this as the invariable rule, there seems to be no good reason for apprehending any general abuse.

Connected with the more vigorous work of home distribution, is another matter, which is deserving of some consideration, and may, perhaps, be as well introduced at this place, and in this connexion, as in any other. Some of our most important Auxiliaries, who were wont to bring the entire amount of their contributions for the Bible cause into our own Annual Reports, by purchasing of us the books they required, and paying us their surplus funds, are now employing paid Colporteurs, for the whole or part of the year, at a considerable expense, to render their work more thorough and effective. They may naturally desire that whatever they raise and expend in this way, should come into the full account of the Parent Society, so that there may be a direct and definite method of ascertaining the amount raised and expended by the Parent and Auxiliary Societies for the accomplishment of these common objects. While the labors of Bible Colporteurs in France, in Germany, in Canada, and elsewhere, are embraced, and their cost included in our Annual Reports, there can be no good reason why the similar labors of the German and the Irish Colporteurs, employed and paid by the New York City Bible Society—one of our early and uniformly efficient Auxiliaries—should not also, and for the same reasons, be likewise included. This can be done without confusion or embarrassment, by our Board's authorizing the sums expended for these Colporteur labors, by any of its Auxiliaries, to be entered to their credit, and then charged on our Treasurer's books to the proper department of our expenditure. This the Board have henceforth authorized, and would recommend Auxiliaries to notice and not on the arrangement if they please.

Whereas, The American and Foreign Bible Society have been notified to vacate the Rooms No. 350 Broome street, New York, now occupied by them, therefore,

Resolved, That the Board be instructed to comply with said notice, at the specified time.

Resolved, That the Board be authorized and instructed to procure suitable temporary accommodations for the Society's local business.

The report was accepted, and the resolutions were unanimously adopted.

The Committee to nominate officers and managers for the ensuing year, reported a list, which was laid on the table.

On motion, Messrs. S. P. TOWNSEND, D. M. WILSON, N. C. PLATT, J. M. LINNARD, GEO. GAULT, W. W. TODD, and E. CAULDWELL, were appointed a Committee to mature a plan for procuring suitable premises for the permanent use of the Society, to report at the evening session.

Rev. WM. REES, an Agent of the Society, addressed the meeting.

Rev. W. HAGUE, D.D., of New Jersey, offered the following resolution, and accompanied it with an able address.

Resolved, That in the course of events during the past year, this Society finds new occasion to thank God, and to take courage and new incentives to zeal, in the promotion of the work assigned it—BIBLE DISTRIBUTION.

The resolution was seconded by Rev. S. J. DRAKE, of New Jersey, and adopted.

The Committee on plan for procuring suitable premises for the Society, reported as follows :

The Committee appointed to consider the expediency of procuring a suitable location for the permanent use of the Society, beg leave to report :

That they have given the subject all the deliberation that the limited time allotted them would permit, and have come to the conclusion that it is highly desirable that premises should be secured as early as practicable, in an eligible situation in this city, for the use of the Society, and they respectfully recommend that a Committee be appointed to take the matter in charge, and proceed in the purchase or erection of the necessary premises, as soon as subscriptions shall be made by the friends of the Society, adequate to the object contemplated.

Your Committee further suggests, that in order to the accomplishment of this object in a manner worthy the cause, one hundred thousand dollars ought to be the mark at which the Society should aim.

WM. WINTERBORN,

On motion, the newly elected Board of Managers was directed to hold its first meeting for organisation, on Thursday, June 3, 1852, at 4 o'clock, P. M., in the Bible Rooms, No. 16 Park Place, New York.

The time, place, and arrangements for the next Anniversary of the Society, were referred to the Board of Managers.

The Committee on procuring premises for the Society reported progress, and was continued.

A communication from the Trustees of the First Baptist Church of New York, was presented, and on motion of Rev. E. TUCKER, was received and referred to a Committee of seven.

Rev. E. TUCKER, of Ill., A. D. GILLETTE, of Pa., E. PHELPS, of Ct., J. STEVENS, of Ohio, D. ROBINSON, of Ia., G. J. JOHNSON, of Iowa, and M. ALLEN, of Mich., were appointed the Committee.

At 3 o'clock the Society removed its session to the body of the house for public services, which were introduced with prayer by Rev. J. M. COURTNEY, of Ohio.

The Vice President in the chair, (Rev. E. LATHEROP,) then addressed the Society, giving an outline of the operations of the past year.

The Treasurer, N. C. PLATT, Esq., presented and read an abstract of his Annual Report; which, on motion of C. W. HOUGHTON, Esq., seconded by Rev. S. White, was accepted and ordered to be printed.

The Corresponding Secretary, Rev. RUFUS BARCOCK, D. D., read the Annual Report of the Board of Managers.

On motion of Rev. D. B. CHENEY, of Ohio, and seconded by Rev. A. D. GILLETTE, of Pa., accompanied with addresses, the Report was accepted and ordered to be printed.

On motion of Rev. H. G. WESTON, of Ill., the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That through the German Mission Society of the West, and similar organizations, it is both the duty and the privilege of this Society, to accomplish for the millions of Germans in this country a similar work to that now being performed by our missionaries and colporteurs in Germany itself.

The Committee, to which was referred the paper from the Trustees of the First Baptist Church of New York, reported as follows:

Your Committee, to which was referred a paper addressed "To the members and friends of the American and Foreign Bible Society," by the First Baptist Church in New York, purporting to be explanatory of their having required said Society to vacate the rooms in their church, was found to be a printed circular, general in its character and aims, and therefore requiring no definite action on the part of this Committee.

The Report was adopted.

Adjourned till 7½ P. M., with the benediction.

HALF-FAST 7 O'CLOCK, P. M.

The Society met. Prayer by Rev. H. DALN, of Ohio.

Rev. E. D. LORD, missionary from China, offered and advocated in an address the following resolution:

Resolved, That the existing state of things in China, in relation to the translation and distribution of the Sacred Scriptures, is such as to encourage this Society both to continue and increase its efforts among that numerous and interesting people.

The resolution was adopted.

Rev. E. L. MAGOON, of New York, and Rev. J. M. HASWELL, of Burmah, addressed the Society.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Society be presented to the First Baptist Church, and other brethren and friends in Cleveland, for the cordial welcome and cheerful hospitality tendered to the Society during its present session.

The minutes and proceedings of the meeting were referred to the Board of Managers for publication.

Adjourned with benediction.

M. J. RHEES, Recording Secretary.

We, the subscribers, a committee appointed by the Board of Managers of the American and Foreign Bible Society, to audit the accounts of the Treasurer, do report that we have examined the accounts and vouchers of the Society for the last year, and find the same correct. The receipts from all sources have been forty-two thousand, three hundred and twelve dollars and twenty-five cents, and the payments have been, including a balance of three hundred and fifty-six dollars and forty-seven cents, due the Treasurer at the commencement of the year, forty-one thousand six hundred and eighty-two dollars and ninety-eight cents, leaving a balance in the Treasury this day of six hundred and twenty-nine dollars and twenty-seven cents. The Society is also in possession of a bond and mortgage on unencumbered real estate, for one thousand dollars, drawing interest for the same.

Fifteenth Annual Report.

THE American and Foreign Bible Society has now been in operation about one half of the average life time of one generation. It might therefore, be deemed probable, that nearly as many of those who were active in its formation, are already numbered with the dead, as still remain with the living. This thought is solemnly suggestive. Besides its appropriate influence in quickening each one of us to greater activity and zeal, it naturally awakens the desire to renew the summary recapitulation of the facts connected with the origin and history of this institution, and the amount of its achievements.

When, in the course of the years 1835 and '36, it became painfully evident, that the numerous and excellent versions made by our brethren into the languages of the heathen, would receive no farther aid from those Bible Societies, either in this country or in Great Britain and its dependencies, which we had helped to originate and sustain, except on the abandonment of the principle of full and faithful translations, on which our missionary brethren had always acted, the call for the convention in which this Society originated, was deliberately sent forth, and one year was allowed to elapse before it met.

Again, when it was ascertained by the expression and comparison of views in that convention, that a decided difference of opinion prevailed, whether the Society should not be confined to foreign operations, another year was allowed to elapse before that question was settled.

Unanimity was thus to a good degree secured, and "the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands," became the chosen work of our organization.

There was marked out a clear line of discrimination between those fields where the Scriptures were then circulated, and those where they were not. In the latter the most sedulous care was to be exercised by the Board of Managers, to patronize such versions only into the languages of the heathen, as have been, or may be faithfully made, and are approved by competent examiners:—while in the former, the English language being specified as the representative of all similar cases—"the commonly received version was to be used until otherwise directed by the Society." Guided by these plain rules, the Society has gone on with encouraging prosperity, and is now able to speak of results which may reasonably cheer every candid and Bible-loving soul.

Besides all the incidental expenses of this Society of various kinds, the copies of the Sacred Scriptures circulated in our own land by its direct agency, is nearly half a million,* while the far larger part of all the available funds received into our Treasury from the beginning—amounting to $240,460—have been devoted to the translation, printing, and distribution of the life-giving word in foreign lands. By this means, probably, not much less than half a million more of integral and principal portions, or entire copies of the Scriptures, have been sent forth among the benighted and destitute, who else might have perished without the light of life.

* There is reason to believe that the estimate found in the last Annual Report, based on some inadequate returns of former years, is considerably too low.

The entire receipts from all sources during the whole history of the Society, falls but a little short of half a million of dollars. Can any one reasonably maintain that one-tenth part of this sum would have been collected and made available for this most worthy object, without the organization and vigorous efforts of this Society? This view we cannot but regard as a most triumphant vindication of the wisdom and necessity of the institution, just as imperatively required now, as at any former period.

The labors, difficulties, and encouraging results of the last year, are now to be, in the fewest words possible, faithfully spread before you. To begin with our

HOME DEPARTMENT.

It should awaken special thankfulness in this dying and changing world, that all those to whom the Society last year entrusted the discharge of its management, have been enabled to meet regularly once or twice a month for the transaction of the Society's business. The Master whom we serve has graciously preserved our lives, perfected our union, and we trust, shed upon our counsels and efforts the guidance and blessing which we have fervently implored.

Gratefully would we record the deep conviction impressed on us, that hitherto the Lord hath helped us!

Some slight changes have been made, the past year, in a few of the multiplex plans and the system of our operations. The General Agent and Assistant Treasurer's services have been entirely dispensed with, as a distinct office; and the work, which from the origin of the Society, had been devolved on this officer, is now shared by the Corresponding Secretary and the Depositary of the Institution. The design of this change has been the economy of saving the salary of such an officer.

But it yet remains to be tested, whether in confining the Secretary so closely to the Rooms, as this arrangement will make indispensable, quite as much is not lost as gained. The experiment however, is well worth the trial, and if it shall be found on the whole, more conducive to the prosperity of the Society, all will rejoice in it. If, on the contrary, the future experience should indicate the desirableness of any approximation to a return to the former plan, it can easily be restored.

The means of our regular communication with the public through the press, has been the subject of earnest consideration by the Board during the past year. From the origin of the Society, it has been customary, at irregular intervals, once or twice a year, to issue a pamphlet sheet, containing such information in regard to our operations, and the requisitions under which the providence of GOD, and the Foreign and Home demands for Biblical assistance, had laid us, as were adapted to aid in securing the adequate contributions to our treasury.

In August last it was resolved that such a periodical paper should be issued quarterly, to embrace the Treasurer's receipts in detail, arranged in such a manner as would render their republication unnecessary the next year. As a still more important change, it was also resolved to publish four numbers immediately succeeding our Anniversary sheet, each containing the Annual Report, with the usual accompanying documents, compressed as possible. In this way it was believed a great amount of information would be communicated to the Life Members and the Institution:—it would reach them at less distant intervals—being entitled to receive it, through the mail, at a trifling expense for postage. It will certainly be a more reasonable ground of hope that they will be thoroughly read, than when a very much larger mass of papers is sent forth. It is also proposed to put up in wrappers the copies of these papers, at the end of the year, to be furnished only on the annual transactions of the Society. This plan is designed to save from the amount of incidental expenses. The recentness, however, of the above experiments, will scarcely permit the Board, or the Agents, to judge intelligently of their wisdom. It is hoped they may have found a satisfactory trial, which, if it prove successful, will become a source of gratulation. If, on the other hand, these plans fail to meet the hopes of the Society, it will not be difficult to resume the old mode. To complete the list of changes of the year, it becomes requisite to name the esteemed Corresponding Secretary of last year, and for new Agents, it has been necessary to procure substitutes. Notwithstanding the loss of his post here from any lessened interest in the Society: on the contrary, he has given decisive and satisfactory assurance of their high appreciation of his services and their determination in the different spheres which they have assigned to him to continue rendering such aid as may be in their power, to the advancement of their interests. This, though very gratifying, does not prevent all disadvantage and impediment which such frequent transitions through the Society may occasion. It is hoped that more of permanency and steadfastness may be witnessed.

The formation of a Bible Board at Nashville, in May last, has created a tendency for a half dozen years past, has been steadily progressing, and consequently absorbing from us of no less than 60 auxiliaries together with the active, persevering opposition of another Board, and its Agents nearer home, threatened, at one time, material work.

By the blessing of God, and the vigorous and liberal efforts of our friends, these fears have ultimately been dissipated, and the year has closed under cheering auspices. Perhaps it should not be mentioned as an unusual circumstance that the Society have most unexpectedly and wrongfully, been required to remove from the premises, which for ten years, have been their home, by the earnest solicitation of the First Baptist church in New York. The history of this singular transaction has already been placed before the Society in a report from the Board to a Special Meeting of the Society, held in New York on the 14th ult. Further notice of it is not, therefore, necessary. The Society and its friends will feel the necessity laid upon them simultaneous movement, to repair this injustice, and provide for the permanent occupancy of their local business, so as most efficiently to promote the great object of their organization.

THE COLLECTION OF FUNDS.

No part of their duty occasions the Board more anxious solicitude, than the endeavor to ascertain and carry into execution the best plan for securing the pecuniary means requisite in furnishing the Word of Life to the destitute. The experience of kindred organizations among American Baptists, has, of late years, especially, tended very strongly to lessen reliance upon formal auxiliaries other than churches, where no other object is embraced than securing an annual contribution.

In cases where there is combined with this, the duty of supplying a portion of the destitute in its vicinity with the Bread of Life, such an auxiliary has a superadded service well adapted to keep up the organization.

The American Bible Society secures a large portion of its annual receipts from such auxiliaries, continued in healthful vigor, by having appropriate work constantly before their eyes. Our case is in a great degree different, because the larger portion of the annual receipts, are each year appropriated in cash to the foreign field dependent on our aid. To a great degree, therefore, our case more resembles our missionary organizations. They have found, as we do, that the formation of auxiliaries, independent of, and separate from the churches, where the whole purpose was to induce the regular contribution of funds, is nearly labor lost. They run well for a time, but ere long, the individuals most relied on, remove from the place, or die, or they tire of a routine which seems superfluous. Unless the parent Society, by its agents or a Secretary, or some special deputation can regularly keep alive these auxiliaries, or unless they are made an appendage to something more stable than themselves, as an association, or a pastoral conference, or something of this character, they are apt to fall by their own weight or die of inaction. Our best and most efficient agents, though always instructed to extend their fostering care to such auxiliaries, so often find that their resuscitation costs more than it proves to be worth, have generally, of late years, felt little disposition to form new auxiliaries, except where some local interest demanded a permanent depository, which would require the custody of such an organization. The annual contributions of regular subscribers, either for life-membership or life-directorship, or the annual collections at the appointed season, by the church and congregation, either after an appeal from an agent, or on the fair statement of the case by their own pastor, seems on the whole the favorite method of rendering the expected aid to the Society.

After the separation from us of nearly one-half the original supporters of the Society in the Southern States, since the amount of requisitions upon us had not been diminished, but was rather increasing, it became obvious that if we would secure an adequate supply of means, from this so greatly reduced field, it must be by a more thorough cultivation. This required more laborers, and though the Board were very much averse to the additional outlay thus occasioned, there seemed no practical method of avoiding it. A gradual increase of agency service has therefore been attempted, and is now in the stage of incipient experiment.

To reach the majority of our churches, who otherwise would not contribute to our treasury, it will require to be somewhat farther extended. And though in many parts of the field, there is little hope that it will prove immediately largely remunerative; yet the Board have satisfactory evidence that it is sowing good seed, which will ultimately yield, some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundred fold. The earnest desire of the Board has been and will be sedulously directed to securing good men, worthy of the entire confidence of the churches and pastors, among whom they are sent forth: so that their influence in promoting the religious and other benevolent interests involved, may be a full compensation for the cost of their services over and above the money they collect, or the Bibles and Testaments they distribute for us.* It is deserving of consideration whether a portion of the salary and expenses of these agents who devote much of their time and labor to the Bible distribution, should not be charged to the donation department of our enterprize. This, while strictly just, would relieve to this extent at least, the apparently heavy per-centage so much complained of in some quarters, for the collection of our funds. It would also enable us, wisely and prudently to extend in some of the sparsely settled portions of the states and territories of this Union, such an agency as their case requires, having in view the double object, to supply the destitute with the word of life, and to awaken compassion and liberality for the furtherance of this work.

RECEIPTS FOR THE YEAR.

These are eminently encouraging, taking into view all the adverse influences above noticed. The collections from churches, associations, and individuals, exceed those of the preceding, or indeed any former year of our history, amounting in all to $23,000.

The Society has received the following sixteen legacies during the past year:

Joseph Flanders, late of Brooklyn, N. Y.	$250 00
Dea. Daniel Day, late of Damariscotta, Me.	400 00
William Williams, late of New York city	400 00
Timothy Sabin, late of Medina, Mich.	80 00
Rev. Joseph Mathias, late of Hillstown, Pa.	25 00
Hon. Nicholas Brown, late of Providence, B. I., (last inst.)	200 00
C. Barrell, late of Evans, N. Y.	5 00
A. B. Thayer, late of Bellingham, Mass.	10 00
Maria G. Collins, late of Loston	25 00
James Randall, late of Richfield, Ohio	200 00
Dea. W. L. Stanet, late of Warren, Me.	100 00
James Vanderpool, late of Newark, N. J.	100 00
Richard Carney, late of Portsmouth, Va.	100 00

While both of the above items show a healthy increase over former years, the receipts from auxiliaries for reasons above explained, have been considerably less. Only forty-five of the whole number on our lists appear to have furnished any donations to our treasury the last year, amounting in all to $1,895.67. Where they are employing their own surplus funds, as does the New York City Bible Society, in maintaining colporteurs of their own for Bible distribution, a method has been suggested in accordance with which, such outlays may be reported as donations hereafter, and of course will be charged to the donation department of our enterprise. This seemed desirable in order to bring into one view whatever is done by the parent Society, and its auxiliaries for their common objects. It is proposed to omit the insertion of the list of auxiliaries usually printed in the annual report, for the present year, with the view of giving to it a thorough revision, so as to retain only those which cooperate with us. The sum of $4,200.62 had been received in return for books donated chiefly in Germany and France. It may be found practicable at no distant day to extend among the receivers of the Sacred Scriptures in India, Burmah, Siam, and China, this wise requirement of payment in whole or in part for the inestimable favor. Hitherto, we believe, little or nothing of this character has been attempted; or if so, the avails of such returns have not been reported to us. It seems highly deserving of consideration, by those who dispense the bread of life, whether they would not make these sacred books more adequately prized by securing, whenever practicable, some returns.

They would thus indirectly convey a true and important impression to these darkened minds, that the efforts for their enlightenment are made at heavy expense, by those who seek their present and eternal welfare.

The sales of Bibles and Testaments from the depository for the past year is about the same as the preceding, though from some little delay in obtaining certain expected payments near the end of the year, until after the books were closed, the amount of receipts from this source is more than a thousand dollars less—showing only $7,113.81.

The entire receipts for the year amount therefore to $42,312.25, a sum little more than $1,705 less than the unprecedentedly large receipts of the preceding year, when the proper deductions are made from them. This in view of all the circumstances of the case, must be deemed eminently satisfactory and cheering, as indicating undiminished confidence in the great body of the true friends and supporters of this institution, notwithstanding the unwarrantable and altogether unprecedented efforts made to alienate them from it. As the liabilities both at home and abroad, are likely to be greater the ensuing year than ever before, the necessity is both obvious and urgent to increase the receipts in an equal proportion.

If all concerned will do what they can consistently, with other claims, this cause, with GOD'S blessing, which hitherto has distinguished it, may go on prosperously.

PUBLICATION AND SALES DEPARTMENT.

A separate Report was submitted at the Special Meeting in New-York, on this department, in harmony with the requirements of last year. It showed conclusively that it can be conducted without remaining a burden to the Society, and the indications of desire for its continuance by nearly all the members and friends of the Society, in all parts of the country, seem to have decided this question conclusively.

“ Testaments “ “ “ “ “ .....	11,897

Of the above number 3,807 are German, and 1,250 are French.

LIFE MEMBERS AND DIRECTORS.

The last year added to our lists are as follows: Three hundred and sixty-one Life-Members, and twelve Directors for Life.

Adding to the value of quotas of plain books delivered to them at the depository, those delivered from other places, makes the total amount delivered to Life Members and Life Directors, $1,243.06.

The wisdom of continuing such distribution, is more fully considered in the separate Report, which has been adopted at the Meeting last month, in New-York. (See page 2 of this Paper.)

FOREIGN OPERATIONS.

These, as usual have been the leading objects of interest for the past year. It has awakened devout gratitude, not only here, but widely in foreign lands, and on the other side of the globe, that we have been enabled to meet the specific requirements made on our treasury, for the supply of the more pressing wants in each of the fields heretofore occupied by us. The only exception to this, is in the coöperation extended to our English Baptist brethren in India, in former years, but which for the last two, has been intermitted. Whether it may be found practicable to recommence this formerly favorite branch of our operations, will depend on the ability of the Society and the necessities of our English brethren.

APPROPRIATIONS OF THE YEAR.

To Baptist Missionaries, Liberia, Africa .....	100 00

The Recapitulation, under another form, will show the following result:

For Asia .....	$11,500 00
For Europe .....	9,749 34
For America, out of the United States .....	225 00
For Africa .....	100 00
Total .....	$21,574 34

It must be obvious on the slightest reflection that much of this work, in heathen lands especially, has been of a preliminary character: necessarily slow, toilsome and requiring the utmost carefulness on the part of translators, and revisors, and printers of first editions of Scriptures in languages where a printed literature did not before exist. Some considerations of this kind were embraced in the commemorative discourse delivered at our last anniversary on the life and labors of Rev. Dr. Judson as a translator of the Scriptures, and which has since been published by the direction of the Board. A still fuller and more minute development of this interesting view has just been received from the Rev. Francis Mason, the indefatigable and successful translator of the entire Bible into the language of the Karens, that most interesting people, who more than any others reached by our evangelizing labors, seem to have been prepared of the Lord, for the reception of His word. We prefer giving this account entire, assured that many of the friends and supporters of this Society, which for so many years has sustained the beloved brother, will rejoice in the opportunity of tracing the successive steps of this great and benign achievement, which has resulted in giving to a nation the oracles of GOD.

SEA COAST, NEAR TAVOY, JAN. 5, 1852.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—The Report of the American and Foreign Bible Society for 1851, in alluding to the completion of the translation of the Old Testament in Karen, indicates that the Secretary desires to be furnished with details; and since no one has been employed in the work but myself, it devolves upon me to furnish them.

As in the providence of God, it fell to my lot to be the first to preach to the Karens in their own language, I was early induced, in connection with my previous tastes and studies, to contemplate the work of giving them the Bible in their own tongue. The task, however, has been a much more difficult one than can well be conceived. No complete version, it is believed, has heretofore been made in any language, from the Indus to the Hoangho, in which there was not a settled literature, to which to appeal for the usage of language. The Burmese and Siamese have had the Pali, on which to draw for words not in the vernacular; and to the languages of Western India, the Sanscrit, and the Arabic furnish terms as readily as Latin and Greek to the European tongues. But in Karen we have had to create our own terms, seek out for ourselves the grammatical principles of the language, form our own literature, and write for a people in isolated clans, hundreds of miles from one another, and each with some cherished peculiarity of dialect, as characteristic as the Ephraimites' Shibboleth, or the Somerset man's Zummerset, the London v, the Yorktown h, and the Northumberland z.

To dispose of these difficulties in a skilful manner, assuredly affords scope for the exercise of the keenest intellect, and opportunities for the use of the most varied knowledge; and yet it is said, that many of our educated young men in America reject the claims of the heathen, because they will be able no more to cultivate their minds. "You will no longer improve," said a sorrowing brother minister to his fellow-student, who was about to embark on a foreign mission. "You will have no more leisure to cultivate the intellect, and should you live twenty years, you will be no better preacher than you now are." It is true that a missionary has little opportunity for the culture of English literature and oratory. He has no English sermons to write during the week, no refined intellectual audiences to address on the Sabbath. Here it is admitted there is something to sacrifice for the heathen. But while there is a loss here, there are gains in another direction, though like "rivers unknown to song," they may not yet have attained that place in the literary world which some young men desire. While the man of letters in America or Europe is studying the Ancient Classics in the streams of Greece and Rome, the missionary in India is seated at the fountain head, and amid the Buddhist and Braminical authors, gazes at the very sources from which Pythagoras derived his philosophy, and Plato his ethics. The doctrine of equivalents is becoming understood. German and French, or Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, are now a legal tender of equal value in the Republic of Letters, with Greek and Latin—and when a missionary, as many have done, conquers two or three foreign tongues, so as to read, preach, or write books in them, he has acquired something, which, on the principle of substituting one kind of knowledge as an equivalent for another, may at least mitigate the regret of the literary aspirant for the loss he sustains in not being able to preach eloquent English discourses, or write elegant classical essays.

My first study in coming to the East was the Burman, and as it was my intention to acquire the language thoroughly, I commenced at once reading the Buddhist books, as the tracts and translations, being written by foreigners, were less adapted to give an idiomatic knowledge of the language. The Buddhist books were found to be full of Pali words and sentences, which induced me to take up the study of Pali as necessary to an extensive knowledge of Burman. Indeed, every term in mathematics, and mental, moral and natural philosophy, is, it is believed, without exception, pure Pali words. The Pali, I found to be a dialect of Sanscrit, which led me to give some attention to that language, the more especially, as there was neither dictionary nor grammar in Pali,* and it was found, on trial, that Wilson's dictionary defined the corresponding word in most instances, precisely as it was used in the Pali.

While Burman was the first study, Karen constantly engaged a portion of my attention, but as there were no books in the language, I had to study it altogether by the ear when among the people. In all my excursions, I carried a slip of paper and pencil in one pocket, and a piece of the Hebrew Bible in another, and whenever I heard a Karen, as we walked together, or as we sat in the houses where we went up to preach the gospel, utter an expression or word that was new to me, I immediately put it down in writing, the more especially, if it was one that I could use in the translation. Sometimes the people have been aroused at midnight to get me a light, that some fragment of poetry or unusual phrase that I heard used by a casual visitor lying near me, might be entered on my note book. In this way was obtained all the language in common use, but this only forms a small portion of a language; so I induced those who were able to write their own language most correctly, to set down all the Karen traditions, myths and romances, both in prose and poetry, with which they were acquainted. Thus a large mass of native writings was collected, that became a useful body of literature, to which to refer for the use of language; and it is the more reliable, as it is the production of many different authors, and written as related by many different individuals. Nearly the whole has since been published in the Karen Thesaurus, which, with Mr. Wade's dictionary and my grammar in Sgau and Pwo, sets new missionaries on the shoulders of their predecessors, and enables them to take in at a glance, a much more extended horizon.

As familiarity was attained in the Karen, it was easily seen that the language had no resemblance to the Burman or Pali, but as languages are usually in families, and rarely isolated, it occurred to me that the Karen language might be a branch of some one of the others spoken around me, and I therefore determined to examine them all sufficiently to ascertain the truth on this point. I first took up Talaing, with the aid of a Talaing man obtained from one of the Tavoy villages, and proceeded far enough to see, that while the Karens had borrowed numerous Talaing words from their living among the nation, yet the two languages had no affinity beyond their common syllabic character. A Siamese grammar and vocabulary were next read, with similar results. The question then arose, was it a dialect of the Chinese. I found the Chinamen at Tavoy said shyeu for hand, and the Karens su, for eye they said moh, and the Karens mai; with a few other similar resemblances. To satisfy myself, I wrote to a missionary in China, before we had any missionaries there, for books, and in due time obtained Marshman's Grammar, Premare's Notes and a vocabulary by Dr. Morrison; but it required little research to find that Karen was not Chinese; although there are many roots of common origin, and the inflections of the languages are nearly the same. Subsequently Tounghthoos were met with at different times, and from them I obtained a vocabulary of words, which showed considerable affinity to Pwo Karen. The only tongue that remained to be examined was the Malay, and after procuring Marsden's Dictionary and Grammar, I found that, still more than the other languages, differing widely from the Karen; but though the Malay gave no light on Karen, yet when the Selungs were brought forward, it was apparent, at first sight, that half or three-fourths of the vocabularies, gathered from among them, were composed of Malay roots.

But the translator cannot or ought not to stop at philological studies. The Bible is studded with terms in mineralogy, botany and zoology, and with a few difficult ones in astronomy, the vernacular names of which can only be acquired by seeking for the things themselves, and determining them by a patient analysis, and comparison with their scientific descriptions. The Bible Society requires their translators to render every word possible; but in the case of these terms it is not always an easy task. Take for instance, mazzaroth, mazzaloth, in the singular, mazzal. In Job 38: 32, the English translators have transferred the word, which Barnes says is "the only safe way," but in II. Kings, 23: 5, they have rendered it planets in the text, and put signs of the zodiac in the margin. Luther has morgensternd the morning star in Job, and planets in Kings, while De Wette renders it in both places by thierkreis, the zodiac. Geseinus agrees with De Wette, and Kitto says it is a word which signifies dwellings, stations in which the sun tarries in his apparent course through the heavens. Now, if the translator is bound to express in his version, the exact sense of the original, as he himself understands it, then I must render this word in a signification which I have never seen given to it, by either translator or commentator. There is no reason to believe that the zodiacal division of the heavens was known to the Shemitic nations in the time of Job. The names of the signs are in Arabic, the same as in Greek and Sanscrit, while word, as it might be anticipated to do, if they were synonymous. But it is well known to all who have studied the astronomy of the Arabs, that they anciently divided the heavens into twenty-eight lunar mansions. I have before me some extracts in the original Arabic, from a work written by Ibn Qotatbah, nearly a thousand years ago, and these mansions are there called, in the singular, منزل

manzila; but other authors write منزل manzil. This is manifestly the same word as the Hebrew, with the slight change of the dialect. "The lunar mansions were almanac and dial of the illiterate children of the desert." For these and other reasons that cannot be here mentioned, it appears plain to me, that the word denotes lunar mansions; and the next question is, for the Karen term to use in the translation. The Karens have no such division of the heavens of their own, but they are acquainted with a name for it through the Burmese, who have adopted it from the Ilindoos through the Pali; and this is the word I use in the Karen version. This single illustration may serve to show the research neces ary for any one who would translate the Scriptures, discriminately, into the Karen tongue.

Finally, to bring this long letter to a close, I have been studying Karen for twenty-one successive years, and have been in the constant habit of reading the Greek and Hebrew Scriptures for a quarter of a century. I have also availed myself of the aid of biblical criticism from America, England and Germany, and have left no science or language wholly unstudied, that could aid in furnishing the Karen nation with a correct translation of the entire Bible; and now that the work is done, I am so convinced of its defects, that I should shrink from the publication, did I not know that Christ and his Apostles quoted from a version of the Old Testament, at least as imperfect as the Karen, and that truth, shining only through imperfect versions, has been successful in bringing the world down to the borders of the millenium. Yours affectionately, F. MASON.

From the Asiatic Missions of the Union, the following brief results of the year have been gleaned :

MAULMAIN.

The issue of Scriptures for distribution from the depository at Maulmain has been greater during the past than in former years, the demand for books having tasked at times the capacity of supply. By the occupancy of Rangoon as a Missionary Station now interrupted, temporarily, it is hoped, by war, a demand was developed among the Karen churches in Burmah proper, whose distance from the stations in the British dominions had made communication with them comparatively infrequent. Men came from remote parts of the country, through many hardships and dangers, to procure books.

The total reported issues of entire Scriptures amounted to 2,603 copies, distributed as follows : To Maulmain missions, 884 ; Tavoy, 323 ; Mergui, 30 ; Akyab, 2 ; Kyouk Phyoo, 31 ; Sandoway, 1,333. Of parts of Scriptures, 7,438 copies were issued, viz : To Maulmain missions, 4,379 ; Tavoy, 1,904 ; Mergui, 50 ; Akyab, 80 ; Kyouk Phyoo, 823 ; Sandoway, 75.

The issues to Rangoon are not stated, having been chiefly made after the close of the mission year embraced in the Report. Besides the copies taken with them by Messrs. Kincaid and Dawson, two boxes of books were forwarded in October, and five boxes additional in November, the contents of which appertain to the present mission year to be embraced in the next Report.

TAVOY.

Mr. Mason has been carrying forward the revision of the Karen Scriptures, the past year as rapidly as the feeble state of his health admitted. The first form of the Old Testament in Sgau, went to press June 1, in an edition of 2,000 copies. 500 copies of the Pentateuch, and perhaps of some other parts of Scripture, will be printed for separate circulation. At the last report, Genesis and most of Exodus had been printed, and as Mr. Mason's health appeared to have improved, there is hope that the work will go forward with increased rapidity.

CHINA. HONGKONG.

During the past year, an edition of 3,000 copies of Genesis, with explanatory notes has been printed, and Exodus similarly prepared is in press. A similar edition of the Acts of the Apostles is preparing. The New Testament, which

Mr. Dean is translating, jointly with Mr. Goddard, of the Ningpo mission, it is hoped will be ready before long. Should it be ready for the press within the next year, it will call for an increased appropriation to print it. While the Mission are "persuaded that an indiscriminate distribution of books is of but little use, if it be not both injudicious and injurious," and that "the number of readers in China has been overrated," they yet believe "a judicious distribution of tracts and Scriptures" to be very useful. The plan of appending brief explanatory notes to portions of Scripture is successful. "Mathew with notes" is much inquired after and read.

NINGPO.

Mr. Goddard, with the aid of a competent native assistant, has been engaged daily during the year in translation. The revision of the Gospels of Matthew, Luke and John has been nearly completed, but the publication has been delayed for further consultation, to make the work as accurate as may be. There have been distributed 35 copies of "Matthew with notes," six copies of the Acts, 28 copies of "Acts with references," 40 copies "Genesis, chapters 1—5, with notes," 40 copies Genesis, chapters 6—11, with notes.

The above from Hong Kong: also, of books printed at Ningpo, 800 copies of Genesis, 1,800 do., Genesis, 1st chapter with notes, do. chapter 1—5, 4,500, copies, 700 copies Exodus, 600 copies Sermon on the Mount. The amount of printing during the year has been, Exodus, 3,000 copies; Sermon on the Mount, 5,000 copies.

The following letter from our indefatigable and very successful translator, gives the latest information from this station:

NINGPO, Jan. 13th, 1851.

TO THE COR. SECRETARY:—Dear Brother—Since my letter of Aug. 16th, I have continued my work of translation with the ordinary degree of success. I have thus finished the Four Gospels, and am now on the 7th chapter of Acts. I should have published the Gospels before now, but have been waiting for Dr. Dean's suggestions. Instead of sending suggestions on mine, he has preferred to make an independent translation, the manuscript of which he sends me. This I carefully compare with my own, (a manuscript copy of which he has before him in making out his,) and with the help of my teachers make such amendments in mine as may be suggested by the comparison as improvements, and even usually adopt the reading, which he prefers in cases where there seems to be no choice, either being alike good. The changes which I am thus led to make are but few—his translation on the whole differing but little from mine. I make what suggestions I think desirable on his manuscript, and then return it. I propose to defer publishing until I have seen his manuscript of Matthew finished, after which a comparison of the other gospels with this, will enable me to secure to some extent the benefit of his suggestions on the whole. Our need of the work for present use will not allow me to defer publishing longer, and the fewness and unimportance of the emendations suggested by the comparison do not seem to require longer delay. I shall hope, therefore, before the close of the present missionary year, (Sept. 30th,) to have published the five Historical Books, and to have made some progress in the translation of the Epistles. I feel a good degree of hope that the version prepared with so much care, with so good native help, and with the assistance of previous versions, will prove both a faithful representation of the original word of God, and an intelligible and acceptable book to the Chinese. I have spared no pains to render it such. The difficulty about my lungs, which prevents me from preaching to so great an extent, as I otherwise should desire to do, leads me to more constant labor in my study. If in this way I can glorify God, and cause His word to be known among the heathen, I shall be satisfied.

I shall, of course, publish the Gospels on my own responsibility and under my own name, not putting the name of your Society to them, or making you in any way responsible for them, not having been authorized so to do.

Our ordinary missionary labors have nothing of special interest at present. We labor in hope amid much discouragement. With kind regards to yourself and the Committee of your Society, I remain, dear brother, yours truly,

J. GODDARD.

TELOGOO.

A colporteur, (employed by the Madras Auxiliary Bible Society,) under the direction of the Mission, distributed during the year 2,494 portions of Scripture. But this was only a part of his labor, and perhaps not the most important in its immediate effects. He read passages of Scripture, to persons unable to read for themselves—a numerous class. In this way some knowledge of the Scriptures was communicated to thousands.

The extent of these labors may be judged by the account of the first four months, during which time it is stated, he read portions of Scripture in the presence of 3,435 persons who for the most part received him in a respectful, and many in a friendly manner.

SIAM.

The event of the year, of greatest and most melancholy interest here, has been the lamented death of the senior missionary, and the distinguished translator, Rev. J. T. Jones, D.D., already briefly mentioned in our periodical paper for April. His long and familiar acquaintance with the Siamese language, his ripe Biblical scholarship, his devout reverence for the word of God, and the superior manner in which he had carried through, and twice revised, the publication of the entire New Testament, had fixed on him our too sanguine hope that God would spare his valuable life, and perfect his often enfeebled health, so as to enable him to translate the Old Testament also. On this work he had entered with vigorous enthusiasm, and had very nearly completed the book of Genesis, when He who seeth not as man seeth, called him away from the toils and cares of earth, to the rest and felicities of heaven. A great and good man has fallen—while we would not murmur, we cannot but mourn. May God enable us to improve the admonition thus administered—quicken us to gird our loins, and trim our dying lamps anew, so that what we would do, may be done quickly.

The fire which last year consumed all the buildings of the Mission, including the printing office, of course suspended the work of publishing Scriptures. The New Testament had been revised for a third edition by Dr. Jones, and he had entered on the translation of the Old Testament.

Twenty-seven chapters of Genesis, and a few verses of the twenty-eighth were translated, when Dr. Jones was called from his earthly labors to his heavenly rest. The work in which he was engaged now waits for a qualified person to carry it forward. The destruction by fire of all the books on hand for distribution at the beginning of the year, necessarily put a stop to that means of usefulness, until the press can be refitted, and a new supply printed.

The Tavoy office has been abundantly supplied with all needed material at heavy expense. The paper alone cost about $2,000.

At Hong Kong, the native assistant as well as the missionaries bear a part in distributing portions of Scriptures. A small supply of Chinese books, sent to Siam, were circulated by the Chinese assistants. The Telogoe missionaries supply all who visit their stations with Scriptures, and distribute also in their itineracies in villages and at festivals, and with great encouragement. At Doovoor, where they spent a month the previous year in distributing Scriptures, and instructing the people, the manner of their reception and the intelligent account which the people gave of the truths they had heard and read, "afforded pleasing evidence that the leaven of divine truth is at work, and though silently and slowly, is undermining the vast system of heathenism."

The aid received from the Madras Society was in consequence of some misapprehension as to funds. The appropriation would otherwise have all been expended, and the amount needed for 1852 would have greatly exceeded the estimate.

Before the fire in Siam, about two-thirds of Mr. Chandler's time were devoted to labors connected with Bible printing or distribution. The gospels had been bound up in separate volumes; also Acts, Hebrews, Romans, I. and II., Corinthians, Galatians to Philemon, James to Jude, and Revelations; and again, the Gospel and Acts, beside the New Testament in one volume.

ORISSA.

From Orissa the statements of Rev. Dr. Sutton are encouraging, and we make room for extracts from letters from his hand to the Cor. Sec'y of our Society. In the first, dated Dec. 1st, 1851, he says:

The chief subject of my letter must be the action of our Annual Conference arising out of the proposed scheme for Scripture distribution in Orissa. All my proposals on the subject have been made with reference to this annual gathering of my Missionary colleagues, as much of the efficiency of the contemplated plan must depend upon the aspect in which it is viewed by them.

The resolutions of our Conference are as follows:

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Bro. Sutton having agreed to make over to the disposal of Conference the future grants of the Am. and For. Bible Society, after deducting the expenses of his personal agency.

Resolved That we print 3,000 of the Acts of the Apostles.

Agreed that the following resolution be recommended to the Am. and For. Bible Society. That the Missionary brethren in Orissa be allowed the expense of a coolie in their Missionary excursions for the conveyance of Scriptures, and that such brethren in presenting their accounts furnish particulars of the number of copies circulated—the locality where distributed—and any interesting facts which may come to their knowledge in connection with the circulation of the Word of God in Orissa. And that if funds allow, a fair proportion of the expense of any brother who may engage in this important work shall be defrayed by the above Society.

The importance of the special efforts that bro. Sutton is desirous of making to distribute the Word of God in the province, was fully appreciated, and an earnest desire was expressed that the blessing of the Lord might rest on these efforts, as well as the more general efforts which the brethren have always made for the distribution of the Scriptures in connection with other parts of their work."

I deem it a matter of some importance to have secured this expression of opinion and of this willingness to take share in the work. These several brethren in their respective journeys will I hope more than they have ever done before (though never neglected) have an eye to the carrying out of the plan, and thus no doubt you will feel with myself that whether it be I or they it matters not. Indeed it is hardly possible for any individual (even without any draw back on his time) to do more than an approximation to completeness in this matter. Their co-operation therefore, and the terms proposed will I doubt not be duly considered by you.

The latest information from this beloved brother, is contained in the following letter, which, giving a full view of the extent of his operations, we insert entire.

CUTTACK, March 2, 1852.

MY DEAR BROTHER,—I have lately received a second grant from your society of a thousand dollars. Both for this and the previous one be pleased to accept our best thanks. Though not fully up to the estimate, viz: 1200 per annum, it is still a very munificent contribution towards the evangelization of this benighted yet important province. May it please the Great Head of the Church to return your society and all its supporters seven-fold into your own bosom, and above all, to grant such a measure of blessing to this effort that the dearest wishes of your hearts in relation thereto may be abundantly realized.

The aid now afforded us will enable us to continue our efforts through the coming year, that is, so far as supplying us with Scriptures is concerned. We have enough of single Gospels, Gospel Harmony, bound New Testaments, volumes of the Old Testament, selections from the Scriptures, and have ordered 3,000 of the Acts. Our list, therefore, we suppose, embraces all or nearly all your rules admit of our publishing on your account. The expenses of colporteurage and binding will, we expect, make a clear balance before the year 1852 terminates.

My last letter to your society was, I think, dated Khundittar. I had then started on an excursion in the northern part of our field, and calculated on at least three months' uninterrupted itineracy. But we soon found that while man proposeth God disposeth, and we were suddenly arrested in our progress by the unexpected illness and subsequent decease of our senior colleague, Mr. Lacey. He had been in the field about fifteen months longer than myself, and his death leaves me the next candidate in point of age and length of service, for the grave.

My last letter would make you acquainted with the doings of our conference in relation to Scripture distribution in Orissa. The removal of my colleague so effects my own position in relation to the mission as to make those doings of much more importance than they previously appeared. They are fitted to supply my own lack of service and present a feasible means of more speedily and effectually accomplishing the work than could be effected single handed.

I have been necessitated to be much at Cuttack since my able colleague's decease, many matters require attention, and which I must afford until the vacancy be filled up. While, however, our work has been hindered, it has not been stopped, and indeed on looking over the tracts of country we have visited, I cannot but rejoice that so much has been done. Bidwell's missionary map of India, does not very well delineate Orissa. The small one prefixed to "Orissa, and its evangelization" will better enable you trace our route. First of all, we went up the Brahmunee and its branch the Khnesna and distributed Scriptures and tracts in every considerable village accompanied by preaching and conversation. We then visited Jappoor, intending to follow the river and various branches to the sea, but in this we were interrupted. I then sent two of our preachers as colporteurs accompanied by Coolies carrying books up the Byturnee as far as Keonjhura. There they attended a gathering of 50,000 people and disposed of their treasures. I also attended a festival east of Cuttack, near Assureswar and my native assistants traversed that and the neighboring districts of Kendapara. They subsequently took a turn towards Bulwenta and Hurrihurpoor. This region and that of Kendapara was also traversed by my esteemed associate, Mr. Buckley, who wrote to me from Hurrimpoor, "I am doing what I can personally to aid in the distribution of the word of God. We have a very good supply of Gospels with us, and have distributed already a tolerable number. May the Lord scatter the sacred seed and give it large increase."

Messrs. Miller and Bailey are out in the Ponee division of the province, and have an especial eye to the circulation of the word of God. They write me they shall require a little extra pay for Coolies to convey the books.

In the most southern part of Orissa our brethren have been visited by affliction and their itineracies consequently hindered. The brethren Stubbins and Wilkinson are however now on a journey and we well know their zeal will lead them to do all they can.

I have recently paid a second visit to Barki with some of our native brethren, and thence passed into Tigiriya. These are native states lying west of Cuttack, and our journey was up the Nahanudde and Tivally. I am now arranging with three or four native brethren to visit several heathen festivals to be held this week and next. The weather has become very hot, and itineracy must now be suspended for a time.

I have omitted to say anything about our Free Will Baptist brethren in the north of Orissa as I have no definite information of their proceedings, but I know in the general that they are well engaged and that brother Phillips and Jillson have lately had some good degree of very encouraging success.

Allow me, dear brother to congratulate you on your return to this good office. I have written as long as I dare, and say farewell for the present.

Yours, for Jesus' sake,

A. SUTTON.

GERMANY.

The following from brother Oncken will supersede the necessity for any comments of ours. The circulation by him, and our twenty colporteurs the past year has reached the unprecedented number of sixty-five thousand of Bibles and Testaments, or principal portions of them :

HAMBURG, March 30th, 1852.

MY DEAR BROTHER,—My account of pecuniary disbursements for 1851, will have reached you before now ; and I herewith beg to give you a brief statement of our labors in the circulation of the Holy Scriptures during the same period.

At Hamburg, and in its vicinity, two colporteurs of the American and Foreign Bible Society, brethren Rittmann and Valentin have labored with much success, notwithstanding the violent opposition of an ungodly world. Thousands of our fellow-sinners have, through their instrumentality, been supplied not only with the boon of heaven and religious tracts, but they have embraced the numerous opportunities that offered of proclaiming the Gospel verbally.

While brother Rittmann has devoted much of his time to the spiritual interests of the Austrian troops, who were partly stationed here, and partly passing through Hamburg, on their return to Austria, Hungary, Bohemia, &c., supplying them with copies of the Gospel, the Epistle to the Romans, and the Psalms, brother Valentin has devoted his labors more to the seamen and bargemen, who visit this port from all parts of the world, he has visited about 1,200 ships and barges. It is also owing to these efforts that many persons have been led to come to our chapel, and in some instances to become regular attendants.

The seed thus scattered will doubtless yield an abundant harvest, for our Master has declared : "The word of the Lord shall accomplish that whereunto it is sent."

Brother Andressen, at Pinneberg, has chiefly labored in the villages of Holstein. And as he was formerly a Lutheran schoolmaster, he has now, as a Bible colporteur, renewed his acquaintance with many of his fellow colleagues, and they have, in not a few instances, admitted the Bible, without the Apocrypha, into their schools.

At Schleswig, your valuable colporteur, bro. Schlesier, continued to meet with success. This brother sells a large number of bibles, and is very precise in rendering a quarterly account. During the late war, he disposed of many copies of the Scriptures in Danish, among the troops. His labors in preaching at Schleswig and several villages, has been blessed to the conversion of sinners, and at present, there are six persons at Schleswig, who have applied for admission to the small branch church there. We are now sending large supplies of the Danish New Testament, that has lately left the press.

In the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg, bro. Behrend Fellange has circulated the Word of God both among Romanists and Protestants, and spread the truth by personal intercourse among the people. He is one of the few colporteurs who has, as yet, met with no difficulties from the authorities. He has also rendered valuable aid to bro. Haese, having frequently accompanied him on preaching excursions, when he has—as he is a strong, robust man—brought together congregations, by inviting people from house to house, in the villages, to attend.

Bro. Cramme, at Sabzgitter, in Hanover, one of the Society's most devoted and zealous laborers, has continued his important work, not only in various parts of that kingdom, but has extended it to other distant parts of Germany. He has labored much in the Lord, nor has this been done in vain. On the Lord's day he generally preaches three times, and at different places. He is, however, not unmindful of the primary object to be kept in view as a colporteur of your Society, and at all times is well supplied with Bibles, &c., which he offers whenever he can.

Bro. Grotefeud, at Spsangenberg, in Hesse Cassel, has not been permitted to effect much, owing to the sad state of the country, and for some time to come, his labors must, I fear, be effected by stealth. Independent of his labors as a colporteur, he has been useful to the little band of believers in Hesse, whom he has regularly visited and served with the word of life. At present, all the assemblies of our brethren in that part of Germany are interdicted, and when they meet it is at the risk of being exposed to heavy penalties.

Bro. Beyebach at Hersfeldt, in Hesse Cassel, has been placed in the same position as the former brother; but has, notwithstanding restrictions and threats, continued, to the best of his ability, to circulate the Scriptures, and to spread the gospel generally. Though both these brethren may not attempt much at present, they should be retained as colporteurs, for even the little they still can effect, is of much importance, especially their visits among the scattered members in that country.

I now turn to Prussia, where the labors of colporteurs are much hindered by government—for while the colporteurs of the Innere Mission, and of such Societies as circulate the Bible and Apocrypha together are countenanced, the colporteurs of your Society have been prohibited to sell the Scriptures, nor have their applications to have this command rescinded, proved effectual.

But in spite of these obstacles, our brethren have remained steadfast, and continued labors which they deem a holy duty. Where it has been impossible to offer Bibles from house to house, they have gathered a small congregation, and after holding a service, have frequently disposed of more copies, than they could have expected.

The foregoing remarks are applicable to brethren Fasching at Breslau, Ehlerst at Elbing, Klimber at Liegnitz, Altenstein at Seehausen, and Zeschbre at Neustadt.

It appears as if bro. Fasching would soon be banished from Prussia, and as he cannot possibly return to his native country, Austria, he will probably be compelled to emigrate to America.

The labors of bro. Engel, colporteur of the Society, at Stebbin, ceased from January 1st, 1852.

Dr. Brose, at Göttingen, continues to circulate a large number of Bibles, &c., among the students at the University, and among the peasants in the sur-sounding villages—and he being our only agent in that district, we highly prize his labors. The support Dr. Brose received from the Society is so small, that it cannot be a burthen.

Bro. Wolf, our oldest colporteur, and one who has been instrumental in the conversion of many sinners, is still very usefully employed in Back Pomerania, in circulating the word of God, and preaching the gospel in numerous villages. He only receives a trifling remuneration—thirty Prussian dollars per annum.

I have, from Jan. 1st, added another to the list of your colporteurs in Holstein, in the person of our zealous bro. Bettfreund. He had a flourishing business at Rendsburg, but the cause of Christ is so dear to him, that he has given up his former occupation, in order to devote himself to the spread of the truth. As this brother has some property himself, he will require only one hundred Prussian dollars for his support.

I trust that your Board will permit me to fill up the vacancies at Hamburg and Verden, as soon as suitable brethren can be found.

The very fact that persecutions are, at present, everywhere renewed against us, is a proof that the influence of our efforts is felt, and this is a strong inducement for us, not merely to maintain the ground gained, but to press forward in a cause that must ultimately triumph over the errors of mankind. That the A. and F. Bible Society has, from the commencement of our mission, rendered us most essential aid, is a fact so well known, that I need not attempt to demonstrate it. All I ask in the name of our common Lord, and on behalf of the perishing millions in Germany, who live either in the delusion of Baptismal Regeneration, or the soul-destroying errors of Rationalism, Infidelity or Popery, is a continuance of your generous aid for the circulation of the Holy Scriptures, and the support of your colporteurs.

It is a source of regret to me, that we have, hitherto, been unable to show our attachment to your Society, by contributing to its funds, but the poverty of our churches, and the many urgent calls for home-aid, are the causes of this apparent want of interest in an institution to which we are not only firmly attached, but to which, till our latest day, we shall remain debtors. All we can at present do, is to ask the Lord abundantly to reward the love and aid bestowed on the German Mission by you, and that He may cause His richest blessing to rest on the varied labors of your excellent institution. I am, dear brother,

Yours, in the best of bonds,

J. G. ONCKEN.

The last communication received from this beloved brother, adds a few additional items, for which we can make room.

HAMBURG, April 2d, 1852.

Cor. Sec. A. and F. Bible Society:—

"I hasten to acknowledge the receipt of your favor, dated 5th March. The vote passed by your Board of the munificent grant of $4,000 additional for the circulation of the Holy Scriptures in Germany for the present year, has greatly encouraged me in the work assigned to my hands, and calls forth the warmest emotions of my heart to my Heavenly Father, to the Board, and to all the dear Christians in the United States who contribute toward the Society's funds. How many precious souls will be enriched by the Scriptures, which will be circulated for the above amount. Let us, my dear brother, water the seed which will be scattered in every part of this unhappy country, by fervent supplications at a throne of grace, for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, to quicken His own word.

"Not being able to proceed to Verden, to attend the funeral of your late colporteur, bro. Heldt, I sent my assistant at the depot, bro. Braun. The funeral was attended by many of the brethren from Bremen, as also from the villages, where our late brother had been laboring. The funeral was attended by a large concourse of people, and though the Lutheran clergyman would not permit an address to be given at the grave, bro. Braun spoke to an immense concourse of people at the father's house of the deceased, who filled not only the dwelling, but also the street. The late bro. Heldt's labors were not confined to the circulation of the Scriptures, but he was much engaged in preaching, at a number of villages between Bremen and Verden, where small companies of believers had been formed chiefly through his labors, who greatly deplore his loss, and who are now like sheep without a shepherd.

"It must be a matter of devout gratitude to God, that the late bro. Heldt has not labored in vain, and that not a few sinners have been, through his labors, won to the Saviour."

FRANCE.

Not more than 500 bibles and testaments have been distributed at our expense—so far as definite returns have reached us—during the year. This is explained by the following statement of one fully conversant with the peculiarity of the circumstances.

Dr. DEVAN thus writes, under date of March 24th, 1852, of bible distribution in Southern France :—

"You speak of the smallness of the number of Scriptures placed here during last year. Let me explain this matter. You must not apply to France the standard of Scripture distribution in Asia. In the latter country books are given, and nothing but physical strength is requisite to distribute thousands and tens of thousands of copies. In France the experience of thirty years and upwards, has shown that books should not be donated but sold. Now it so happens that although the books are sold at scarcely 50 per cent of their cost, very few buyers can be found; this fact, perhaps, is mainly to be accounted for by the want of work, and the consequent poverty arising from political and social causes. It not unfrequently happens that a colporteur of the A. & F. B. S. after entering a number of houses in the course of the day, preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ, returns to his home at night without having sold a single copy. It is not the want of will, but that of ability, that hinders a larger distribution. It hence arises that the colporteur in his monthly report, announces the sale of sometimes not more than from 4 to 10 copies of the Word. This fact as you rightly say, puts at an enormous cost bible distribution. But what can I do? Will you have me do as in the East, stand in the streets and distribute to every person? This of course would swell the distribution, if the authorities would permit such a course—but I doubt much, whether as much good would be accomplished as by the sale of fewer copies. If your wisdom can suggest to me a better course than that I now pursue, indicate it to me forthwith, for I will do what will be for the best. However small the number of books now actually distributed here, in comparison with those distributed in Asia, I am persuaded that the number of persons who hear the gospel from the colporteur is infinitely greater with us.

IN CONCLUSION, we cannot but advert to the obvious character of our operations, as effectively auxiliary and indispensable to the enlarged success of all our other organizations for the evangelization of our country and the world. The Home Mission, the Tract distribution, the Sunday School enterprise, all require, and in turn will be greatly aided by, and themselves assist in, the more efficient and thorough diffusion of Bibles and Testaments among all classes of the destitute—natives or immigrants—in the almost illimitable extent of our rapidly peopling country. The Board express their own decided conviction, strengthened and confirmed by abundant and daily accumulating testimony from every quarter, that whatever may be the amount of service rendered by other Societies in this department, we cannot, without great injustice to ourselves, and injury to the cause, excuse ourselves from a fair participation in this work, which our blessed Master has assigned us. Having proper regard to the two-fold object of effecting an earlier supply of the Scriptures to the destitute ; and the reflex benefit on those who engage in this labor of love, it is intended by means of all our Life Members and Life Directors who may be willing to engage in this work, and by our Agents, both in their own personal efforts, and by their securing the coöperation of judicious coadjutors among the churches they visit : and more especially by our scores of Home missionaries. and the Colporteurs of the American Baptist Publication Society, and similar bodies, greatly to extend this branch of our operations in the coming years. Why should the thousands of Chinamen, of Sandwich, and other Pagan Islanders from the sea, with multitudes of Mexicans, as ignorant and degraded, who are now thronging our Pacific coast, be overlooked by us, in our endeavors to extend the supplies of the Word of Life.

Then turning our eyes to those foreign departments, where our chief labor has hitherto been expended, how encouraging are the indications of Providence, that the fields are white, ready for the harvest. In British India, cast and idolatry, and polytheism, are nearly worn out, and the alternative now seems more solemnly and urgently than ever, put to those, who more than half a century since, commenced in earnest the work of evangelizing her scores of thousands of millions, will you give them the true shaster—feed them with the bread of life—or leave them in this hopeful and inquiring state, to infidelity and starvation.

Forty years ago, the Salem Bible Translation and Foreign Mission Society, the first Baptist organization of this kind in our country, was formed. Shall not its first jubilee be made the fitting occasion for a vast enlargement of our efforts for the accomplishment of this blessed work ?

Burmah, Siam, and China, most invitingly open to us facilities for sowing the good seed of the kingdom. While nearer home, the distribution of the Scriptures in Germany Denmark, and even in revolutionary France, seems to present the only feasible means of securing those purblind peoples against the wildest anarchy, or the most degrading despotism. Verily, this is not a fit time to intermit our labors, but every indication demands of us to redouble them. If former beloved associates persist in leaving us the work to do without them, and cannot by our kindest entreaties be won back to our side, having furnished our defence against their unreasonable assaults, we cannot be longer detained. We are doing a great work, and cannot come down. Why should this work cease ?

It is certainly deserving of consideration, that in none of our denominational organizations. has so much of careful deliberation, and wise, patient, wide-reaching consultation been employed, to fix its foundation aright, as in this. Let us, then, stand in the old ways, and ask for the old paths, that we may walk therein. If innovators require space for their experimenting, let them, at least, be entreated to spare us, and take for their purpose an unoccupied field. In the meantime, we will fervently implore that Spirit, by whom the Scriptures were indited, to give to us, and to all engaged in their circulation, more of HIS own holy guidance.

ANNIVERSARY ADDRESSES.

ADDRESS OF REV. MR. CHENEY, OF COLUMBUS, OHIO.

MR. CHENEY in moving the acceptance of the Report said:—

MR. PRESIDENT.—In arising to move the acceptance of the Report, portions of which have now been read, I cannot deny myself the pleasure of addressing a word of welcome to those who have come for the first time to meet in an anniversary of this Society with their brethren in the West. Some of us here have been wont for many years to cross the lake or the mountains to meet you in the East, and now that this favor is reciprocated, we desire to bid you welcome. We have regarded these convocations, which bring together the wide extremes of our country, as well adapted to bind us more closely together as a people, and to bear us up and onward in the great benevolent enterprises in which we are engaged. Hence we hail them with joy and delight, and I doubt not, sir, I express the sentiments of my brethren in this State, and in States beyond this, when I say that we here looked forward to these anniversaries, here upon this threshold of what has been so long and so familiarly called the "Mighty West," with more than ordinary interest. We then bid you welcome, because here in these new and thinly settled States are many warm hearts and strong hands that will move in harmony with yours, in giving to the nations the 'leaves of the tree of life.' And because here too is an important field to be cultivated. We welcome this anniversary as a renewed pledge of our mutual co-operation in every good work;—that we are a band of brethren and that one is our Master.

To a single feature of the Report I wish to turn your attention—viz., that which relates to the work of Bible distribution among the foreign population in the home field. The Report recognizes the settled policy of the Society, so well stated in the constitution, "and in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in all lands." True, the demands from the foreign field are at present so urgent and numerous as to engross well nigh all our energies, nor would we have those demands overlooked; but if we owe duties also to the home field we should carefully look over that field that we may have our whole work distinctly before us.

Our foreign population is becoming exceedingly numerous. They already constitute an important fraction of our whole people. They are arriving at the port of New York alone at the rate of nearly one thousand per day—more than twenty-nine thousand during the past month. And if we take into the account those who reach these States through Canada, at other ports along the Atlantic coast, and through the Gulf of Mexico, we probably would not be unreasonable to say that fully another thousand arrive here daily. But abating the estimate one-fourth, making the daily average fifteen hundred, which is without a doubt below the reality, and you have in a single year an aggregate of nearly 550,000, enough to constitute a city numerically larger (certainly with but a single exception) than any now upon the American continent. Nor has this over-sweeping tide been confined to a single year, but has already extended through a series of years. Upon the Southern borders of this State, where sixty years ago the woodman's axe rang in the then almost unbroken forest, there is now a city embracing more than 80,000 foreigners. The German population alone is to the native Ohio population as thirty to thirty-three per cent of the whole. And what is true of Cincinnati in this respect is true also of the smaller cities and towns of the West. In Chicago and Milwaukee a stranger hears the dialects of different nations. Columbus has its "Germany," and Cleveland its "Oregon."

From the best data at hand it is believed that of all the inhabitants of the free States of the West, fully one-fourth are foreigners either in the first or second generation, and upon the same basis it is said that there are in the United States fully five millions, or about one-fifth of our entire population. A class of our fellow-citizens so numerous and so rapidly increasing, we surely cannot regard with indifference.

But we must not overlook the fact that taken as a people they are exceedingly destitute of the Bible. The number of evangelical Christians or even of believers in evangelical truth among them is small when compared with those who reject the Bible. Of these are two classes. To one class the Bible is forbidden. They are the adherents of Rome—a priest-ridden people. With but few exceptions they have not the Bible in their dwellings, it is not read in their churches, they carry it not even to their secret places. It is with them a contraband book. The other class reject the Bible and the religion of the Bible from choice. They count all religion as priest-craft and denounce revelation as a fable. They profane the name of God, and the Sabbath, and all things holy. They circulate the issues of an infidel press, and in our larger towns and cities they not unfrequently maintain mock religious services. They reject the Lord of glory and make reason their god. They are in theory infidels, in practice atheists.

So far as any saving knowledge of the truth of God is concerned, they are as destitute as if they were the inhabitants of the celestial empire instead of free America.

We have been wont to say of the countries of Europe when rocked by the storms of political revolutions, that we must give them the Bible to prepare them for civil and religious liberty. Must we not upon the same principles give the people of our own land the Bible to preserve our liberty, already so dearly purchased. The appeals of Oncken have stirred the hearts of the American Baptists, and called forth a generous response, but millions of those for whom he pleads, are now our own fellow-citizens. As lovers of the Bible, we should meet them with the open Bible when they land upon our shores, we should follow them with it to their houses, we should teach its lessons to them and their children, nor should we cease our efforts until they come to love its sacred truths, and the blessed Savior whom it reveals.

Again, we must consider the influence they are exerting, and are destined to exert, upon our civil and religious institutions, in order fully to appreciate the claims of our foreign population upon us.

They know that in coming to our shores they enter a land of freedom. They understand and they appreciate the privileges of the elective franchise. Already they have estimated well their strength at the ballot-box. They crowd into our cities, where they often hold the balance of power between conflicting parties, and are then left to decide our municipal elections, and questions often involving moral interests of inestimable importance. These people and their descendants must be Americanized, or soon the predominant influence of the country will be theirs, with all their European sympathies and predilections. In this is not only found an appeal to the Christian, but to the patriot, to the citizen: an appeal which we all do well to hear and heed while we may.

But they are exerting an influence upon our religious institutions of no unimportant character. The counterpart of a great principle of Christianity applies here with all its force. That the heaven of truth will diffuse itself through the masses of human Society, is the Christian's hope and strong consolation. It is equally true that the heaven of falsehood and irreligion will diffuse itself among the people unless counteracted by the word and grace of God, and even more rapidly, as it is more in harmony with depraved human hearts. Here, in this land of freedom, Christianity must meet its antagonisms upon an open field, and unless its movements are aggressive, its course onward to triumph and glory, is it not to be feared that there will soon be a retrograde movement, dishonorable to Christ and His church, and ruinous to the souls of the perishing? Here, in this mighty valley, where the millions of earth are so rapidly gathering, and where the representatives of almost all nations are now found, is to be merged the great conflict between truth and error, between a pure Christianity on the one hand, and a religion of forms and an open infidelity on the other. The lines for the conflict are already being drawn, and shall not we, my brethren, with the Bible, the sword of the Spirit, for our weapon, both of defence and conquest, stand firm in our appointed lot?

To these millions we cannot at once give the living preacher, for we have not the men, but we can give them the printed page. God has mercifully given us the means and the men that may be called into requisition for this service. Let it be ours now to do with our might what our hands find to do.

Mr. President, with these remarks I move the acceptance of the Report.

ADDRESS OF REV. H. G. WESTON, OF ILLINOIS.

REV. MR. WESTON said:—

This resolution (see minutes of Annual Meeting,) directs the attention of the Society to a special work, among a special people: a people that from their numbers, character, and situation among us, present claims for peculiar effort—claims not to be overlooked or denied. The statistics of the foreign immigration into this country have already been presented before us this afternoon. These statistics show us how largely this foreign element may and must enter into the composition of our national character. We are receiving an immigration, such as the world never before saw, and greater far than those which centuries past changed the institution, laws and language of European nations.

The influences of the German character has been somewhat misapprehended. We have contrasted the Germans with the Irish, very much to the disadvantage of the latter. The faults of the Irish lie upon the surface, known and read of all men. Versatile, excitable, ignorant, generally poor, and with but little desire to accumulate property, strongly attached to their religion, and easily influenced by the priests, they form a class in all our large towns and cities, whose faults are evident to the most careless observer. The Germans, on the other hand, are industrious, frugal, disposed to acquire property, persevering, sagacious, with cherished plans which they pursue with firm resolution. But these qualities, invaluable when under right influences, are all powerful for destruction, and with an evil spirit at the helm, will produce results the most deplorable. Their notions of civil government are visionary in the extreme. Their principles are the basest abstractions, and they love these abstractions with a love which frequently turns all other feelings into hatred. In religion they are Romanists, Formalists, or far worse than either, bitter infidels. And the very qualities which would add great strength to them as Christians, their habits of thought and of life, and their national characteristics are fearful weapons of destruction in the hands of communists, infidels, and visionaries, zealous for abstractions, which carried out, would destroy all civil society.

These people God has brought among us. He has placed them under our influence, and He now cries to us, Behold, I have set before you an open door. We be unto us if we enter not in. God has laid upon us motives the most powerful so to do. These Germans have immortal souls, and we are appealed to by all that is precious in the nature of those souls, to labor that they be saved. Had they remained in their own country, and we had done nothing for their salvation, deliverance would probably have come to them from some more faithful Christian nation. But now, if they are not saved through our instrumentality, they will not be saved at all. And they are now so identified with us that our own safety impels us to the work, for when they perish, they will not perish alone; in their fall they will drag themselves and us, our country and our children, to be buried in one common destruction.

The Germans must be reached by instrumentalities specially appointed for the purpose. Ordinary American preaching does not, and cannot reach them. There must be Christian laborers sustained in some way, who shall go from house to house bearing the word of God, and speaking to the people in their own tongues, the unsearchable riches of Christ. The Germans can all read, and while they are afraid of being overreached by word of mouth, they will read, mark, and consider. We must take them the Bible, and show them that they have misjudged its character and influence. It is connected in their minds with priestcraft and all the numberless evils of church and state under which their fatherland groans. They will soon find, by proper exertions being made, that there is no enemy of priestcraft of every shade, more constant, unrelenting, implacable than the Bible. The spirit of the New Testament is exhibited in the very first words of the Apostle, as he opened the kingdom of heaven to the nations, "Stand up, I myself also am a man." Thus ever sounds the voice of God throughout the Bible. Man made in the image of God, stand up—erect, kings, spirits, all. No foe to priestcraft is there like the Bible. Neither education, nor refinement, nor intelligence, nor high station, can insure one against a degrading subjection to the priest, but never has priestcraft, never can it exist in connection with a loved and valued Bible.

We have in the West a Society whose object it is to spread the knowledge of the truth among the Germans. It has a weighty but indispensable work upon its hands. It needs assistance. Brethren of the Bible Society, we ask your help, and we ask with the confidence that we shall receive.

BIBLE DISTRIBUTION IN BURM

APPEAL FROM THE LATE DR. JUDSON.

[Among the earnest letters of our deceased first Missionary several things not designed for publication, and the great has hitherto not been communicated to the public. There is any reason for withholding the following statements from the written several years since, derives enhanced interest and in events. May they be pondered as they deserve!]

"The Bible Cause in this country is now at a very low state; the hope that I should live to see a complete copy of the whole one volume, so as not to be liable to be scattered) deposited in every village throughout Burmah and Arracan. It is true that it would be requisite, great expense would be incurred, and money would have to be put forth. But the work being once accomplished, seed sown throughout the country, that with the blessing of God spring up in abundant fruit to His glory. From the habit of frequently assembling in large or small parties at the house of the master or principal person in the village, and listen to one read a book, it has appeared to me, that to deposit one Bible, at every resort in every village, was the least we could do for Burmah; this plan would tend more effectually than any other, to fill the land with knowledge of divine truth.

"But the doors of Burmah proper are now closed against us.

"Modern Missions have been distinguished from the Roman Catholic from all former Missions since apostolic times by holding out the word of God: and I do believe that those Missions which place the Divine word, will be most owned of God by the influence of the Holy Spirit. There is only one book in heaven descended from heaven: or, as I tell the Burmans,—there lamp, which God has suspended from heaven to guide us thither. Shall we Missionaries dare to throw a shade around it, or do ought to prevent the universal diffusion of its life-giving rays? O that one complete volume of the Bible, and not merely the New Testament, (for the word of God, though not such a book as human philosophy and logic would have devised, is doubtless in the eye of Infinite Wisdom, a perfect work, and just fitted to answer the great end which God has in view,) O that one copy of the Burmese Bible were safely deposited in every village, where the language is understood!

"Burmah is now shut against us, but it will not be so always; and 'where there is a will there is a way.' Arracan with her 2000 villages or more, is even now open for the reception and deposit of two or three thousand Bibles. I would not be understood to depreciate the preaching of the gospel, the grand means instituted by Christ for the conversion of the world, but all our preaching must be based on the written word: and when the voice of the living preacher is passed away from the village, the inspired word may still remain to convert and to edify.

"I would say, therefore, that the preached gospel and the written word are the two arms which are to pull down the kingdom of darkness, and build up the Redeemer's. Let us not cut off one of these arms,—for the other will by itself be comparatively powerless, as the history of the church in every age testifies."

REMARKS ON THE ABOVE STATEMENTS.

The above appeal and its cogent enforcement, will be found eminently suggestive, and the line of duty which it indicates, is specially appropriate at the present period. We venture to repeat in our own language a few of the convictions which seem necessarily involved.

1. The indispensableness of the diffusion of the Scriptures, widely as possible, in order to secure either the divine blessing on our labors, or the permanent and benign influence of the gospel on those evangelized, is here prominently and strongly stated, by one whose actual experience, as the earliest of our missionaries to the heathen, had been continued for nearly forty years. There will be found in it too, a substantial agreement with the testimony of all the more experienced and thorough missionaries in the foreign field, from the days of Dr. Carey's commencement of the work in India to the present time. Hence—

2. The earnestness with which such men devote themselves to biblical studies and translations. This has been a marked peculiarity, a leading and distinguishing characteristic of Baptist Missionaries. God has put this honor on his humble, but pious and devoted servants; enabling the Serampore Missionaries and their immediate coadjutors to give translations of the Scripture either entire or in important integral portions in some 40 of the different languages and dialects of India; while our American Baptist Missionaries, Judson, Wade, Mason, Jones, Brown, Haswell, Dean, and Goddard in Asia, and our deceased brother Clarke in Africa, have each labored indefatigably and successfully in this important field of evangelical enterprise, covering nearly half a score more of the nations and languages of the earth, which by their instrumentality, have first received the lively oracles of God.

3. Nor can it be deemed strange that men who have given the anxious labors of an entire life, chiefly to this object, should feel an intense concern, that others should "enter into their labors," and thus make them Judson, after twenty or thirty years of consuming mental by sickness, had found his prayers answered, and him finishing hand to the translation and repeated revision of great nation, what marvel that he should desire most fervent entire copy of the Scriptures should be furnished to every throughout Burmah and Arracan? Well might he say or explains it, that it "was the least we could do for Burmah several thousands of dollars would be required to furnish these copies, yet would it be an eminently wise, and an investment.

4. The faith of the missionary shines conspicuously in that Burmah was then shut, he described the coming of a bright assurance he subjoins—"it will not be so always." Ye brother: thy faith and toil, and prayers have not been for thy sun went down in darkness years ago, and the gurgling Ocean were thy winding sheet and sepulchre, while Burmah God had not been unmindful of the strong crying and tearing now the doors are thrown wide open—shall we not with our call, and enter on the blessed work to which the favoring providence now invites us? How noble would be the resolve—Burmah is open, and the faithfully translated word is ready to will immediately furnish the requisite means, so that the missionary may be accomplished. He being dead would that vain; the good seed would be sown, and ere long a nation of idols and receive the gospel.

5. There is something beautiful, harmonious and effective, illustration which Dr. Judson employs for setting forth the preaching and distributing the Scriptures, in order to pull out darkness and build up that of the Redeemer. His illustrations which coöperating are so successful, while either one if alone—deserves to be remembered, repeated and made familiar to us all. What instrumentalities have in the meantime been Burman, Karen and Arracan churches for carrying on this gloriously and extensively! The native disciples as yet too immature and not sufficiently removed from their noviciate for properly employed to excellent advantage in distributing the Scriptures—ful and self-sacrificing toil would they hasten from village each one of them—as their favorite teacher Judson requested—to hang up the one golden lamp God has let down from heaven way thither! Will you, dear reader, help to furnish thousands for darkened, but now open Burmah?

CALCUTTA VERSIONS.

WE have recently received from Calcutta the "Fifth in translating, printing and circulating the SACRED languages of India, by the Calcutta Baptist Missionaries." It forms an 8vo. pamphlet of about eighty pages, filled with most interesting statements of the operations of these beloved brethren for the last five years. The aggregate of Scriptures distributed during this period, amounts to 222,769 volumes in more than a dozen different languages. This number added to those previously sent into circulation, make a total of six hundred and nine thousand nine hundred and six volumes of the Scriptures, issued from the Baptist Mission press, to the end of the year 1851.

The contribution of our society towards this work since 1847, has amounted to about 21,000 rupees. For want of the requisite means, no remittance has been made by us the last two years; and there seems to be an indispensable requirement of two or three thousand dollars the present year, unless we would abandon this early and favorite field of our religious enterprise, on whose cultivation we had so successfully entered. We will not withhold the closing sentences of the appeal for continued help, which this report contains.

"For all these tokens of regard for our labors, and help in their prosecution, the liveliest thanks are presented, while at the same time an urgent Appeal is hereby made to all who wish well to the great work of supplying the written Word of the eternal God to the nations of India, to contribute to our aid. Past experience encourages hope for the future; God has hitherto helped; the cause is still His, and his blessing will not be withholden. Friends of the Bible, you have repeatedly helped in this work, your help is as much needed as ever; and will not your love to the Bible, your desire for its universal diffusion, and your longing for the coming of Christ's kingdom in India, prompt you still to contribute of what God has given you, to assist in sending forth the bible, to bless others as it has blessed you? Doubtless your conduct and your language will still say,— "Fly abroad, thou mighty Gospel,

Win and conquer, never cease,
May thy lasting wide dominions
Multiply and still increase:
Sway thy sceptre,
Saviour, all the world around."

Nearly one half of the pamphlet in small type is filled with reports from the different Missionaries of the great and good influence of Bible distribution in their several districts. The eagerness of the people, especially the more intelligent classes, to obtain books; the evidence that they are carefully preserved and perused, and the good effects, both of a general and particular character, are fully shown.

By the extensive diffusion and reading of the Scriptures in many large districts, idolatry and caste, and other abominations of heathenism, seem to have lost their hold on the public confidence. More delightful still, the evidence is here furnished, that, in repeated instances, the perusal of God's word has led men to the Saviour, who never saw a missionary.

Hence, the question begins to be seriously agitated, how shall scripture distribution be widely and thoroughly extended? One of the Missionaries,—Rev. R. Williams, of Agra,—suggests our Colporteur system as follows:—

"I have frequently thought that it would be a very excellent plan to adopt the colporteur system in this country, as has been done for several years past in America, and on the continent of Europe, and which has been productive of the most beneficial results. And why may it not be so in India? If we could obtain and engage suitable men and send them forth throughout the length and breadth of the land, with several boxes of Scriptures, and Tracts for sale and free distribution, might we not reasonably expect much and great good to result from such a measure? Most assuredly. They would find their way into districts never yet visited by Missionaries, and might prepare the way for yet greater things to be accomplished. At any rate, I should very much like to see the plan well tried. Will you recommend this in your Report? It may be, indeed, that some of our Christian brethren will coincide with our views on the subject, and take it up with spirit and energy. Perhaps, also, some of the more wealthy among the friends and supporters of the Bible Translation Society will be induced to give something over and above their usual subscription for this express object. What a debt of gratitude do we owe to God for his holy word, and how anxious should we be to impart it to others, that they with us may become wise unto salvation."

OUR DUTY AND ENCOURAGEMENT AS TO THE FUTURE.

Rev. T. Phillips of Muttra, after giving instances of hopeful conversion by this means, thus closes:

"There is, however, very much to encourage us to circulate the Bible. Those who have studied most closely the history of the Reformation in England, especially in the light of Anderson's Annals of the English Bible—must be convinced that it was chiefly by means of reading the Bible in the Vernacular that the English were converted from Popery. The Saviour then enlightened the Roman world by opening this book, as described in Rev. x. 2. Carey, Yates and others have done that for India which Tyndale did for England, and now we have to deluge the land with the divine word, to sow liberally, though with tears, that we may reap with joy an abundant harvest.

"Our obligations to do this are very solemn. To us, as to the ancient Israelites, are committed the oracles of truth, not to keep them for our own use, but as almoners for King Messiah. As Paul felt that he would be awfully guilty in not preaching the Gospel, solemnly committed to him, so should we feel both as to preaching and distributing the word. 1 Cor. ix. 16. "Woe is me, if I preach not the Gospel." That Gospel is a proclamation of mercy issued by the offended Monarch of the skies to his rebellious subjects. Now let us do with this as other proclamations are treated—read it aloud in the streets, comment on it, give away or sell copies of it, paste it on walls in public places, and talk about it earnestly with all we meet. If after this, men are not saved, we may say, if our Gospel is hid, it is hid to those that are lost, in whom the god of this world hath blinded the eyes.

"I may say in conclusion, that for some time I have so far approved of the system of selling the Bible, in order to induce men to value it, that I intend only to give away single Gospels in future, and sell all bound books for a small sum."

A LIBERAL DISTRIBUTION—THE PROPER COURSE.

Rev. W. Robinson of Dhaka, thus concludes his important testimony:

"Must it not then be admitted, that a liberal distribution is the proper course? Missionaries are few, and, at present, there is no room to hope for any great augmentation of their number; but books are a powerful auxiliary to the solitary missionary; by them a knowledge of the Gospel may be conveyed to hundreds and to thousands whom he had never seen. Of the diffusion of light, by means of the Scriptures, we can speak with confidence; for none can deny, that light has thus been widely diffused; and this fact is surely a cogent argument in favor of that liberal distribution, for which we contend."

BIBLE READING CLUB.

Rev. J. Parry of Jessore says:

"On our way to Tola, we preached in some of the villages which lay in our course. At one place I met about forty travellers, inhabitants of the Krishnagar district. I preached to them for nearly an hour, and I was much pleased to find them very attentive. In the Tola bazaar I preached to a large number of auditors, consisting of Brahmans, Sudras and Mussalmans. They also heard with great attention. Two Brahmans called on me, and asked for copies of our Scriptures. They said that their Shastras were false and inconsistent, and they were unable to learn from them the sure way of salvation. I was informed that about eight Brahmans daily met together for the purpose of reading our Scriptures, and conversing about the true religion. One of them had obtained a copy of the New Testament from me a long time ago, which he used to read, and some of his neighbors coming to the knowledge of it, expressed their desire to hear and read our Scriptures. Thus commenced their meeting daily together for this purpose. Those two Brahmans who called on me and asked for our Scriptures belonged to this reading club."

The London Missionary Herald for August, also contains a few testimonies of similar character, to one or two of which we call attention. Rev. T. Morgan of Howrah, thus writes:

"In the afternoon we visited a rich Babu, to whom ten years ago I gave a copy of the whole Bible in Bengali. Near his house there is an annual mela held; and formerly, it is supposed that no less than 20,000 people used to attend. During my former visit I preached there for several days at the mela, and gave away a great number of tracts and Scriptures. Since that time the attendance has much decreased.

"I found the old Babu alive, he remembered me very well, and gave us a cordial welcome. The whole family having assembled, and a large company of ladies having taken their position over head on the veranda, we preached. At the close, one of the young men said quietly, "My father is a sensible old man, has read the book you gave him, and has no faith in Hinduism;" then, turning to the women, he said, loud enough to be heard by them, "You say that Christianity makes the hearts of men good; it may affect the hearts of men, but never, never the hearts of women."

KAREN MISSION PRESS.

From the 17th Annual Report of the Tavoy Missionary Society, we take the following paragraph:

"Since the commencement of the present year, to the time this Report is made, there has been printed nearly two and a half millions of pages; comprising a portion of the Sgau Karen Bible as far as the middle of Exodus, an Edition of the Pentateuch nearly half completed; the Pwo New Testament commenced, a new Edition of Matthew completed; a vol. of 240 pp. Notes on Hebrews, by Rev. Mr. Abbott; the first vol. of a work on Ecclesiastical History by the Rev. Mr. Cross, of 468 pages, and some minor works. There has been a larger amount of new matter added to our Karen works this year, than formerly. Should a kind Providence favor us, we hope, if spared to see another Anniversary, to be able to report the greater part of the word of God printed, and in circulation among the Karens. The issues from the depository thus far, for this year, is about a million and a half of pages.

CONDITION OF THE WORLD WITH RESPECT TO BIBLE DISTRIBUTION.

The openings which Providence has made, within a few years past, for the unobstructed dissemination of the Holy Scriptures are of the most extraordinary character. When the foundation of this Society was laid, almost the entire world was closed up against the circulation of the Bible. Its friends can now carry this precious blessing with safety, almost literally, "into all the world."

With the exception of Spain, Portugal, and Italy, the Scriptures are at the present time circulating, to some good extent, in every country in Europe. In Turkey, "a wide and effectual door has been opened" for also in most parts of India, in Burmah, in Persia, and in Africa there are already many points where the light of the Bible is finding its way. Many of the islands of the sea are of the Bible, and some of them are already luminous with the light of the Scriptures are gradually gaining an entrance. In the West India Islands, Bible Depositories have been established, and copies of the Scriptures are circulating. In Mexico the friends of the Bible believe that this Divine Book is receiving universal respect even there. In every other part of the world, among the numerous Indian tribes which populate the western territories, the Scriptures are beginning to have an influence. almost the whole world, in the providence of God, has in wide open to the friends of the Bible, and they invited to the world for Christ. Changes the most astonishing have taken place among nearly all the nations of the earth. Hundreds of people could not be reached when this Society was organized, but now in their own language the wonderful works of God, and stand up without delay, the Word of Life: and the God of the Bible is opening the people in the heavenly enterprise of evangelizing the earth for them to advance, says to them, in language not to be understood by thy sickle and reap; for the time has come for thee to reap, the earth is ripe!"—Bible So. Manual.

WANTS OF THE PRESENT YEAR.

THOUGH the specific requisitions of the Baptist Mission have been communicated to us, enough is already known, to what we in the aggregate they will exceed those of former years. nine or ten thousand dollars for Germany, the 3000 for England at Calcutta, 1200 for Dr. Sutton in Orissa, and not less supplies; it is easy to see that a large sum must be forth for them are looking to us for the bread of life must be grievous

Board of Managers, on carefully looking over the whole field, and the urgent and imploring demands now made upon us, have not been able to see how these wants can be supplied, unless about $50,000 shall this year be raised from all sources. Probably one-fourth of this sum may be received for books sold. How far the balance may be relied on from churches and individuals, the receipts of the past five months may help us to estimate. Though fully equal to those of the last or the preceding year for the same period, it is obvious that they must be more than doubled in the remaining portion of the year, or a sad deficiency will be experienced.

Considering the direct and benign bearing of this labor of love on all our other religious and evangelical operations, both at home and in heathen lands, is it too much to expect that the prayerful, earnest and persevering efforts of all the friends of this cause, will be given to it, until its entire success is no longer doubtful?

OUR LATE ANNIVERSARY AT CLEVELAND.

Want of room, in our July Periodical Paper, prevented some formal reference to the interesting services, connected with our late annual meeting. The occasion had been looked to with deep and prayerful concern; and we are sure the testimony of all who were present, will corroborate our statement, that the evident blessing of God rested upon the services in an unusual degree. Brethren seemed to have come together under a deep and abiding conviction of the importance and sacredness of the interests involved. Extraneous things, and all matters of doubtful disputation were entirely excluded;—or rather by common consent they were not introduced. Thus we were enabled to return to the blessed experience of the earlier anniversaries of the Society.

The opening Sermon, by our esteemed brother, R. H. Neal, D.D., from the expressive and appropriate text, "the word of God is not bound," struck the right key note, in the happiest manner. It will soon be published and widely circulated.

The addresses which followed the reading of the annual Report, at the afternoon public session by brethren Cheney, Weston, and A. D. Gillette, were imbued with the right spirit, and were well received. An epitome, or abstract of the two former, kindly furnished at our request by the authors, appeared in our last Paper. The last was published more fully in the religious papers, and we yet hope to find room for some portion of it.

The evening was largely devoted to the addresses of our returned Missionaries, LORD, from China, and HASWELL, from Burmah. Between them room was found for a condensed, energetic, vivid argument and appeal from our brother Magoon—which has also been widely published in the religious papers.

Brother Lord's address contained an elaborate and carefully prepared sketch of the principal biblical labors in the Chinese language, from the first efforts at translation to the present time. His high, but we doubt not well merited encomium upon the translations of brethren Goddard and Dean, seems to be corroborated from other sources well entitled to full confidence. The earnestness of his call for help to publish abroad among the celestials, these translations, we are sure cannot be soon forgotten.

Our brother Haswell, himself a translator of the whole New Testament, into the Peguan or Taling language, was enabled to speak on this occasion, (as he often has on others during his years of sojourn in his native land, for the recovery of his health) so agreeably to instruct, interest, and move those who listened to his words. He has promised us a valedictory to the friends of the Am. and For. Bible Society, embracing of course some of the facts and arguments which he has orally communicated. We hoped to present it in the present number, that even while he with the large number of associates is taking leave of us, and sailing to the destined fields of their his parting words.

HOME SUPPLY OF THE SCRIPTURES

As was anticipated, the demand for Bibles and Testaments and contiguous places, is very considerably increasing; the present year having required some 27 grants, besides tributed through Life Members, amounting, in the aggregate valued at 879 dollars.

Some of these, as the Spanish Scriptures to New Mexico to Port au Prince, Hayti, and the 100 Bibles and the colored people in Canada West, and partial supplies the whaling fleet fitted out at some of our Eastern ports, of surpassing interest and importance.

To all the rest is also to be added the following appeal California, to which the Board are taking measures to respond.

SAN FRANCISCO

REV. DR. BABCOCK. Cor. Secretary American and Foreign

MY DEAR BROTHER:—The San Francisco Baptist Association, appointed a Committee on Religious Publications, instructed to ascertain the wants of the State, and to adopt thought advisable to supply them. This Committee met yesterday, the 13th inst. It organized by the choice of Rev. B and the subscriber as secretary.

It was voted, after a free and full consultation, to instruct a consignment of such books as were most needed American Baptist Publication Society; also to solicit a consignment of Testaments from the American and Foreign Bible Society. We are the Society of our own denomination, especially since foreigners among us who need the Scriptures properly translated into languages. Will you convey to the Society this expression of interest.

Should a consignment be made, your own judgment will tell what is needed in a field like this. Our Spanish population is very large, and with more eagerness than could be expected. A good consignment of Bible and German Testaments and Bibles would not be amiss.

The Committee also have instructed me to recommend to all our Congregational Societies, the appointment of a person who shall act as City Missionary. Such a person might also act as City Missionary, person, Bibles, tracts, and religious books. A missionary is much needed in this city. He would not only be an auxiliary interest, and one much needed, but would reach large numbers and exert any direct religious influence.

It is evident that such a person would need much more for his support than one of the Atlantic cities. If each of the Societies would contribute $250, the Christian friends of this city would, without doubt, contribute an additional amount as might be needed for his support. Also, as soon as practicable, raise funds in the denominational Societies. As the Baptists are now struggling somewhat with financial difficulties, perhaps but a small amount could be expected at first.

This action of the Committee will, with this, be forwarded to the Society, and in view of the important results that may be expected, we sincerely hope that they will be adopted.

Hoping that the request of the Committee will meet with your approval, brother, yours in the Gospel, very truly,

JAMES

ANNUAL APPEAL.

THE year just closing has been one of signal prosperity, so interests of our wide-spread communities are concerned. In measure of worldly success attended all the varieties of among us, as during the last twelve months. Agriculture, mining, manufactures, and the elegant arts, have all flourished; such a time it is solemnly incumbent on all those who heed which our blessed Lord warns us—of laying up our treasure are not rich towards God—to consider in what way we may guard against this evil, and to what special duties this exuberant bounty should lead us.

The exhortation of the apostle Paul to the disciples in Corinth (chapters 8 and 9,) will furnish the caution and encouragement especially need. A few of these injunctions are here subjoined.

“By an equality, that now at this time your abundance others wants. Avoiding this, that no man should blame us which is administered by us. Wherefore shew ye before the of your love.”

“But this I say, He that soweth sparingly, shall reap also that soweth bountifully, shall reap also bountifully. Every one poseth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may at work.”

How simple and impressive, how just and reasonable, as adapted to our own circumstances, are these suggestions. rather enhanced than lessened by the recollection that this the apostle was here exhorting, was for the supply of the mere bodily necessities of the poor in a distant city, for sufferings and loss of all things, these later disciples of a common faith were now taught to exercise a lively sympathy, and extend a prompt and liberal measure of relief.

If all this charity, in its noblest sense, could be thus appropriately called forth by the wants of the perishing body, much more may ours be challenged by the wants of the undying soul, and by the appeal which now once more we make to you, as is usual at this season of the year, to aid the Society of your own organization and choice, in the noble effort to give the word of the Lord, the true bread of life, to millions now perishing for want of it!

The circumstances of our present appeal are in every respect auspicious. Not only have you, to whom it is addressed, the ample means of meeting it promptly and generously; but those also for whom it is made, in our own and in foreign lands, were never before so accessible to Scripture distribution. Think, for a moment, of the hundreds of thousands of immigrants every year landed on our shores, many of them coming from countries where they have been forbidden to possess or peruse the Scriptures. As they are about to be incorporated with ourselves, to share in the privileges and the direction of our self-governed Republic, who does not understand the indispensableness of early imbuing their minds with Bible instruction, and thus fitting them, safely for us, and wisely for themselves, to share with us our noble patrimony of freedom? The religious welfare of themselves and their children can in no way be promoted so successfully, as by the careful and early distribution among them of THE BEST OF BOOKS. Now are they generally indifferent or opposed to its reception and its use. This very week we conversed on this subject with a very intelligent shipmaster, who, for years, has been accustomed to bring into this port hundreds after hundreds of German and other immigrants. He introduced this subject to us, and volunteered the remark that in no way could so much good be done among this class of incoming population, as by judiciously furnishing them the Bible, the Testament, and such tracts and books as are most fully imbued with Scripture sentiments. He represents his numerous passengers as very uniformly desirous of receiving from him such books; and he assured us, with tears of manly sympathy, that though not a professed Christian himself, he never felt more pleasure than in giving away, to these needy and hungry souls, the bread of eternal life.

Our colporteurs at Hamburg, at Bremen, and other ports from which such emigrants in greatest numbers embark for this country, do a most important work in furnishing them with Bibles and Testaments ere the voyage begins. The colporteurs of our efficient auxiliary, the City Bible Society, meet them as they land at this port, to complete what has been so well begun. Or, if they fail of adequate supplies through both these channels,—the 150 Home Missionaries, with whom we are now sustaining intimate fraternal relations, and the Colporteurs of our Publication Society are instructed by us to seek out these pioneers in their frontier or other settlements, and see to it that they have the light of God's word in their humble dwellings.

Through all these, and the channels opened to us by the increasing zeal of thousands of our Life Members and Life Directors in all parts of the country, who seem waking up to the duty and privilege of personal effort in this good work of Scripture distribution. We hope to do our part of filling our own land with the knowledge of the Lord.

But the greater portion of our efforts and expenditure will be directed to foreign lands. In several countries of Germany, France, and Greece, nearly 10,000 dollars were our Society in Scripture distribution; nor can the demand be met with a smaller sum.

The recent reinforcements of our Mission in Africa, with the expenditure some years since commenced for the distribution of the Scriptures for the native tribes of thousands of those who can read the English Scriptures may be as heretofore.

There remains for consideration our earliest and far largest establishments in Asia. Burmah, so long closed against us, Her difficult language has been mastered. The entire Bible into it, and repeatedly thoroughly revised. Our sainted you saw spread out in our last Periodical Paper, calling for LAMP to be hung up in every town, village and city, in that did he say, that this seems to be the least we can do for B

While God's providence is so wonderfully opening the way for many millions hitherto inaccessible to us; and while the Scriptures translated, on which work a most laborious life has been ready to be printed and distributed by thousands, shall we enter into this labor remain indifferent and inactive? It is sure we are that those who have prayed for and sympathized with missionaries, enduring so much in mingling with all classes of their palaces to their prisons, on purpose to learn that difficult living language, into which they were to translate God—those of us who have truly made their case our own backward in furnishing the means requisite, to render the Scriptures available for the benefit of darkened, degraded Burmans in that transition state, just coming from under the rod of uncheerful joy a liberty regulated by law, how important is it that they be furnished with this blessed guide book—the holy law of

Nor would we forget that other classes of inhabitants, the Peguans, a people eminently prepared of the Lord for the Scriptures may now be furnished with the Scriptures.

Our esteemed Missionary, Mason, has successfully prosecuted his work of learning, and reducing to written form, then enlarging from sources the language of the Karens, (see his admirable letter Report, describing his method and extent of investigation for years,) so as to enable that language to receive such a translation. Then with all this difficult preparation accomplished, his herculean task of translating the entire Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments. His work is done, and Bennett has for months been publishing a book, far larger and more important than that language ever

In a similar manner, our Haswell has learned the Peguan or Taling language, and translated and printed the New Testament in it, before his recent visit to his country for the recovery of his health. Both these classes, the Karens and Peguans, are likely to be immensely benefitted by the recent transition of their country from Burman to British rule. Under the former they have endured a grinding and abject vassalage; henceforth they will share the ennobling influence of freedom. Shall we not put forth a mighty effort, and at this, so momentous crisis in their history, furnish them with the means of self-improvement, of moral and religious culture? What can be comparable for this purpose, with the one only book which God has indited, designing it for all the human family and making it as good, as perfect and well adapted for its end as infinite power, wisdom and benevolence could make it?

Then turning to the Kingdom of Siam, what a spectacle there meets our view. A bigotted, cruel, idolatrous King had long sat on the throne, hedging about the way of our Missionaries, and impeding at every step their benevolent efforts. Behold him, by the providence of God removed, and the place filled with one who had long evinced an intelligent interest in the religion of Christ, and studied our sacred books, and having learned their beneficial influence, he now says to the Missionaries, preach and publish as freely as you please. Religious liberty, such as even the Protestant world but little understood two centuries since, (and which so large a part of it has not yet learned,) seems dawning in Siam. What a motive does this furnish us, to put forth adequate efforts, without delay, to multiply by tens of thousands the carefully revised New Testament which Dr. Jones was spared to complete. This is now our work for that country. While our beloved Missionary lived, our appropriations were freely devoted to sustain him as a translator in his work. But now God is inviting us in another manner, to enter into his labors and scatter the seeds of a glorious harvest to the Savior's praise in that interesting country.

Somewhat similar are our relations to Assam. The indefatigable Brown still abides on there in the good work of completing what he has so well begun, the translation of the Bible. Himself and the other Missionaries, seconded and aided in this work by nearly half a score of native converts, are now going broad among the people, and while distributing the New Testament and such portions of the Old as are ready for use, they meet with such a reception as affords them ample encouragement.

Among the Telogoos, also, a wide field is open. A most important part of the work, both of Missionaries and assistants at present, is the distribution of the Scriptures, of which one Colporteur circulated the last year 2494 copies and portions. Can we question whether He who declares that His word shall not return void, will crown such efforts with abundant tokens of His divine favor?

There remains for our consideration the mighty work now being done in China. It is not claiming too much for our Missionaries, Goddard and Dean, that they are more successful than any of their predecessors, translating the Scriptures for the four hundred millions of Chinese. What a work is thus devolved on these beloved brethren! Well may we ask for them the prayers of all our churches. But they are not only translating. The New Testament, with important portions of the Old are already published, and ver their way among the over-crowded population of tl people. Before the year on whose threshold you ar hope to have one or more men employed in distribut tures among the scores of thousands of that people, their way to our Pacific coast. While they come to u eth, we may thus give to them the unfailing riches.

In the mean time, our missionaries, churches, and Celestial Empire, will claim the largest share of our re be reached quite extensively and thoroughly with be writings of Confucius, even with the inspired records

What a field is thus spread out for your contem this Paper! And while God has given you the me work of giving to all these millions his own saving whether to give your generous aid?

Will you not also remember that what we do, must dreds of those to whom our last annual appeal was addi course. Does one of that number now regret the amo cause? We, too, are rapidly passing away. Many w soon be summoned to give an account of their steward DO QUICKLY.

HOW 10,000 DOLLARS MAY BE OBTAINED FOR :

While revolving the wants of the year, as indicated above given, a letter came to hand from the pastor of far away among the hills of New England, containing their number a Life Member of the Am. and For. B. :

their accustomed annual donation for years past. The thought was at once suggested,—how easy for 3 or 4 hundred such churches to do like this. Will they not try the experiment? We know that some will; and why may we not reasonably hope that, on an average, one each week-day through the whole year, will send such a memorial of their love for the Bible Cause? In that easy, noiseless, efficient way, nearly 10,000 dollars a year would find the way to our treasury, without one cent of expense for collecting agency. Would these 313 churches—not half of a tithe of the whole number connected with us—find themselves at all the poorer for this offering? No: those who have tried the experiment will all testify that they are amply recompensed. In watering others their own souls have been watered. Will you not try it also? The resolute purpose, on the part of the Pastor, or of a few working brethren or sisters in each of these churches would soon bring about the desired result. How many such will promptly make the effort, secure and forward their offering to us, and receive the blessing of those ready to perish.

An editorial of the Ohio Journal and Messenger last month, gives the following notice of our Society: "The American and Foreign Bible Society, coadjutor and faithful ally of the Missionary Union, as confidently and as rightfully looks to all portions of the field of the Union among the Baptist family, for pecuniary help as well as for the prayers of God's people, that it may be enabled to furnish the unenlightened and the benighted nations of the human family with that 'one golden lamp,' 'suspended from heaven,' so touchingly plead for and graphically alluded to in the letter of Dr. Judson, as inserted in our last issue. Reader, refer to it, read it, pray over it. The Missionary Union annually is dependent on appropriations for this specific purpose, from the American and Foreign Bible Society. It likewise is looking to Ohio and Indiana at this time, for funds.

IMPORTANCE OF SUPPLYING BIBLES TO SEAMEN.

The following letter from the Rev. I. R. Steward, Pastor of the Baptist Seaman's Bethel, N. Y., will be interesting to the reader:

"In the year 1849, a sailor was invited to the Baptist Mariner's Church, where he heard the Gospel, and received a Bible from this Society. After attending church a few weeks, he called on the Pastor, who wrote his will, and gave him some religious instruction, at the same time urging him to read and study his Bible with prayerful attention, Bidding the minister farewell, he left the city to seek his fortune in the land of gold. Nothing more was heard of this friendless orphan sailor until March, 1852, when the Pastor received a letter from him, written in California, stating that when he left the city, his mind was deeply affected with the truth he had received, and was exercised for a considerable time; but after awhile these feelings subsided, and he became quite careless: but he was not suffered to remain in this condition. A circumstance occurred which led him back to his Bible, which he read and studied with prayerful attention, and he was soon made a possessor of that wealth, which the 'world can neither give or take away.'

"A few weeks afterwards the sailor suddenly returned to New-York, and fully related to the Pastor what the Lord had done for him, spiritually and temporally. He was finally baptized by the Rev. S. Remington, Pastor of the 3d Baptist Church, Philadelphia, and like the Eunuch of old, went on his way rejoicing."—Report of City Bible Society.

The following report on the A. & F. Bible Society is from Canton, Ohio, in June last:—This Society has now been in existence a period of 15 years, during which time it has expended God's word at home and abroad, nearly half a million. The year has been marked as one of embarrassment, and at the same time as one of triumph. (The receipts are larger than in any previous year, with one exception, was 1851.) The Board were enabled to meet all the demands of the work, expending some $22,000. The Home supply has been more than in former years, and a large number of copies of the Bible have been donated to the destitute. More has also been done for the colored population, who are pressing in among us from every quarter. An increase of means for this special work, and to supply the demand for Chinese now in California, will be required.

In view of the past year, your committee cannot but be gratified of this society on its steady improvement. The great Baptist friends and supporters. It may be affirmed otherwise they are to be known. Over $300 have been contributed to the Association during the past year.

Your committee would conclude, by earnestly recommending churches, increased efforts during the present year. The confidence and is doing no uncertain work, but one of the fruits of which are perceptible and make for peace. Having its rooms, an effort will doubtless be made to provide for the occupancy, placed beyond the reach of sectional feelings and

IMPORTANCE OF BIBLE SOCIETIES AS TO PRICES

The time has been when the Word of God was the most precious in the world. Madox, in his History of the Exchequer, says of the building of two arches of London Bridge cost eight pounds, "the estimated value of a single Bible which a certain abbot bequeathed to Croxton." In 1272, it is said that a laboring man was obliged to work wages of fourteen years in order to be able to procure a Bible. A Bishop of Winchester borrowed a Bible from a convent, and was obliged to give his bond, drawn up in the most formal manner, and its return at a certain specified time.

At the time when this Society was formed, the very cheapest Bibles published could not be procured for less than one dollar a copy; half a copy; while the larger and better prepared edition was more expensive. In the early history of the Bible effort in the districts were supplied with the Scriptures at the prices of the consequence, the friends of the cause labored under very great difficulties.

A good plain quarto Bible, with Family Register, is now sold at octavo for 87½ cents; a minion at 37½; and a nonpareil at 64 cents. The New Testament is furnished for 6½ cents. The Bible is infinitely the best of all books, has become also, for the people, of all in price. It should be remembered too, that the Bible is circulated, like other books, through private dealers, the who have the means and the disposition to purchase; through Bible societies reach first those who are without the means, often with little desire to seek the treasure which is brought to the hand of benevolence. Bible societies thus begin their work where the book-merchant leaves off. This accounts for the great fact that in the first half of this century nearly forty millions of Bibles have been distributed by Bible societies alone.—Bible Soc. Manual.

Letter of Rev. Mr. Goddard—Missionary and Translator—China.

TO REV. R. BARCOCK D.D., Sec. Am. & For. B. Soc.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—Your favor of Jan. 7th reached me only a week ago. Please accept my thanks. I hope the correspondence thus re-opened may long be a source of satisfaction and profit. I sent you two months since a copy of Matthew, and now send one of Mark, just from the printer. You see they each form a beautiful tract for general distribution. I think it better at present, to distribute the Scriptures in small portions, giving whole copies only to the more intelligent, and those who have become interested, or to persons from a distance. One Gospel gives a fair account of the life and instructions of the Saviour, from beginning to end, and whoever feels sufficient interest to read it through carefully, will be almost sure to come for another, and thus his interest will be supplied as it increases. A copy of Matthew costs a little less than two cents; Mark, a little more than one cent. We have printed 3000 of Matthew, more than 1000 of which are already distributed; but as the plates are on hand, we can at any time print off as many more as we wish.

On a recent visit to Pootoo, a small island outside Chusan, inhabited almost exclusively by Buddhist Priests, having some sixty temples, I distributed a large number of the Gospel by Matt., and left it to be a witness for God in that land wholly given to idolatry. On visiting temples a second time, I often found that some of the priests had read and understood portions of the Gospel. I sometimes found the books which I had given them, carefully laid up with their own sacred books. In one instance, I found written on the book, "A Memento of a benevolent man." It is certainly a great consolation after conversing freely with a company of people to be able to leave with them a portion of the word of God, to be a witness for him in the absence of the living ambassador. While at that Island we met persons who had come from different parts to worship—who also took to their homes, portions of the word of God. The same is true at our chapels here at Ningpo. Every day, probably there are more or less who come from a distance; they listen to the word spoken, and then take a portion home with them. The word of God is thus made its own witness; but the fruit cannot be fully known, until the day when all things shall be revealed. We only know the word of God shall not return void, but shall accomplish that whereunto it is sent.

I am now and then encouraged in the work of translation, by learning that persons capable of judging, consider my translations faithful, and adapted to be useful. A private letter from Rev. S. Johnson of the A. B. C. Mission, at Fuh Chau, acknowledging the reception of a copy of Matthew, adds: "So far as I have been able to examine it, I am much pleased. I like your faithfulness to the original. Your Map of Palestine is a valuable addition. In your phraseology, describing the conception of Mary, by the Holy Spirit, you have adopted the precise form of expression which seemed to me most appropriate. I never felt satisfied with the form of expression used in most former versions." Rev. L. B. Peet, of the same Mission, says: "I am pleased with the execution of the work, so far as I have had time to look at it; and I have heard several of the brethren here, make the same remark. I am happy to be able to make the same observation about your Genesis. Some of the brethren are now reading it in their families, and are pleased with it."

You speak of wishing full information relative to my principles of translation. I believe they are essentially those recognized by your society, viz:—to translate the original as completely, faithfully, idiomatically and plainly as possible. I have translated the gospels mostly in harmony, thus having before my mind, all the corresponding passages at the same time. This has often been of great use, the varieties of expression in the different gospels, suggesting corresponding varieties in the translation. I have constantly by me, two good teachers; one of whom has been a disciple for six or seven years. With them I prepare the translation from the original, with the help of former translations, after which, I go over the whole by myself, very carefully, comparing with the original, and with previous versions, and mark various changes which thus occur to me. I then go over the whole again carefully with the teachers, after which, I send a copy of the manuscript to Dr. Dean, for criticisms and suggestions. Having received these, I again go over it carefully with the teachers, and fix upon the final rendering, which seems to me on the whole most faithful to the original, and most conformable to Chinese idiom. After this, the work is ready for the printer. I did not commence printing, until the five Historical books were completed. I now propose for the next portion, and go over the whole before printing any part. my reach, (which are not few,) in ascertaining both the true original of it. I incline to the "Textus Receptus" for the sake of uniformity; has thrown important light on the text, I do not feel at liberty to shut

You see the work is not an easy one, or to be finished in haste, and I will exercise due patience, and continue unwearied in the good work.

With kind regards, I am Dear Brother, Yours

[From a manuscript journal (16 closely written pages,) of a month's tour of Rev. Dr. Sutton, with native assistants, in the Northern district of Outtack, for preaching and distributing Scriptures. We can find room for only two day's record.]

December 16. Found Ghunee and Damadar here last night, but they started en route to Outtack this morning, intending to take the old line of road and reach home D. V. Lord's day. This morning I went to Mungulpoor market, where I met with my fellow-laborers, Seaboo and Khomboo, and with them had a good opportunity and little opposition. They attended a market at Bokinda yesterday, where they were well received. The people showed their kindness by giving them permission to sleep in a small shed within an enclosure, rather than let them occupy the root of a tree. This may appear a small favor, yet it is what our dear brethren do not often receive. Poor fellows, I wish they could prosecute their arduous labors with less exposure and contempt, but at present, it is not easy to point out a remedy.

We gave away a number of Gospels, and a few bound volumes to-day to eager applicants.

In the evening I went with Mrs. Sutton to look at the three large images of Kales, Indrance and Baharance, mentioned in a former journal, I think 1837. They are still in the same neglected state, sat on their backs, surrounded by filth and jungle. Still the sculpture, where not mutilated by ruthless hands, is fresh as when it was first chiseled. Alas! for the poor helpless gods to be thus exposed century after century to contempt and neglect! The Mussulmans have destroyed many of the Hindoo temples at this place, and built their mosques on the spot and with the old materials.

Wednesday 17. Another market to-day at the north-east of the town of Jajepoor. In every direction is seen the traces of former prosperity, ruined palaces, dilapidated temples, crumbling houses, and a population proud, idle, insolent and poor, attest the glory of departed days. Old Seaboo, who is a perpetual talker, and always twice as loud as ordinary men, thus harangued the Brahmins as they sat at their doors along the streets through which we passed, "Ah, you boast there were 10,000 families of Brahmins here, where are they now? Look at your ruined temples, your houseless abandoned gods, your poverty-struck town. You have forsaken God and he has forsaken you. What then do all your gods avail? Turn to the true God—receive the true Shastree—believe in the true Saviour, and prosperity will be yours; eternal life will be yours." And so he went on, going and returning, too deaf to hear replies, and indifferent to them when he did. I followed and deposited several copies of the Gospel Harmony, and single Gospels in the most promising hands, with a word as two of admonition.

We had a good opportunity at the market, and as yet have had none of the abuse so liberally bestowed upon the Missionaries who have been here. It is truly an important field for evangelical labor.

A casual inquiry from a man in the crowd as to what our books contained, gave me a good opportunity for a lengthened address on the three great defects of the Hindoo system, and which were so admirably and satisfactorily supplied by the Christian Scriptures; namely, they contain no true knowledge of the character of the blessed God; no intelligible account of man's being and final destiny, and no satisfactory plan of salvation for sinful beings. Here we shewed them christianity was just the boon they needed, and which was freely offered them. Oh, that they but knew even now that this is the day of their visitation!

Extract of a letter from Rev. J. Thomas, Superintendent of the Mission Press, Calcutta—chiefly in reference to the misrepresentations of a writer in the New York Observer.

CALCUTTA, Oct. 8th, 1851.

MY DEAR BRO:—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 18th June last, as also of the printed alips mentioned in it. As to the question about the Armenian Testament, a heavy pressure of engagements puts it utterly out of my power to attempt anything like a reply to the ill-natured remarks, and cavils of the writer in the New York Observer of May 27th, to whom you refer. I believe the records of your office contain materials which would have enabled you to show that the version is not deserving of the reflections cast upon it. It so happens that in the last report, we have not merely given specimens of the different languages, but to that of the Armenian, a note has been appended, which will afford every reasonable mind, entire satisfaction as to the meaning of the word employed in that version for baptism. It proves to be the identical word, used in the Armenian church service for baptism, and is repeated every time baptism is administered. We may therefore, rest assured, that whether the word ever means "drowning," or not, when employed in connection with Christian baptism, it means drowning. Greek word baptizo in every place in the new Testament where that ord takes its name from the word is referred to—and no more. But may word be objected to, because it is, or may be, sometimes used to convey even drowning, why should not the original Greek word baptizo, be itself in a number of places has used it with precisely the same import?

One word about the agents employed in carrying that version through the rest of my European brethren had nothing whatever to do with it, all of us were occasionally consulted as to the meaning of some passage plying one or two omissions in the Armenian text. Neither Dr. Yates nber, ever learned the language. The brother [Aratoon] who accomplished by birth and education an Armenian—Armenian was his mother tongue alone, as he was in the habit of consulting educated men of his nation r

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE SIXTEENTH

It has been thought desirable for the present, at least, to have the services, alternately with the Home and Foreign Missions, we sustain a relation so intimate and fraternal. Having been invited to the Mission at Cleveland, Ohio, the last year, it has been decided to have the celebration of the Pearl Street Baptist Church, Albany: and the twentieth Annual Meeting of the Am. and For. Bible Society at that house of worship. The Annual Sermon may be expected to be preached by Rev. J. A. Ide, D. D., of Mass., or his alternate, Rev. Charles Hill, on Lord's Day evening, the 15th of May next.

The usual business meeting for the choice of officers to be held in the Lecture Room of the Pearl Street Church of May, at 2 o'clock, P. M. The other anniversary exercises fill up two sessions, at 3 o'clock P. M., and at 7½ in the address usually expected from the President, Rev. Dr. chair, and the presentation of the Treasurer's and the Missioning addresses may be expected from the Hon. Judge Davis, Rev. I. Wescott, of N. Y., from Rev. Dr. Turnbull Burrows, of Pa., and Rev. J. Hyatt Smith and J. M. Ho returned Missionaries, Cross, from Burmah, probably Oncken from Germany, may also be expected to be seen and heard and felt in connection with giving the perishing.

A season of spiritual refreshment may reasonably be expected to follow with these services; especially if, as on some former occasions, God who fervently love His holy word, will come up to the occasion of these solemnities with devout, intense prayerfulness, for the blessing of the Spirit on speakers and hearers.

The Home Mission Anniversary is to be held in the morning on the three preceding days; and the Miss. Union and their annual meetings immediately after our own, begin on the 17th of May—so that little more than a week's time will

BIBLE HOUSE.

The committee appointed at the special meeting of the Am. & For. Bible Society, held in Hope Chapel in April last, "to procure suitable premises for the Society," have extended much attention to the subject, throughout the season past. Time, and careful consideration have been given to a variety of plans, and the comparative merit of different localities has been canvassed, with an earnest desire to reach such results, as would generally be approved. The decision finally arrived at, has been the purchase on individual responsibility of the valuable premises in Nassau Street, for more than 30 years owned and occupied as the American Bible Society House. There we commenced with them, and for many happy years coöperated in the good work of giving the Scriptures to the destitute at home and abroad.

As that Society are about to remove up town, for the convenience of their greatly enlarged operations, especially in their extensive publishing department, an opportunity was offered to procure a situation, where our own and the other coöperating Societies of our denomination may all, if they choose, be conveniently located. On making extensive inquiry among pastors and other brethren, having most frequent occasion to convene at such head quarters, it has been satisfactorily ascertained, that for the present, at least, and probably for many years to come, this lower focal point, from which all the lines of communication in this city and its surroundings ray forth, will be more generally convenient than any other. Should another generation demand changes, for their better accommodation, it is believed they can, not only without sacrifice, but probably with great pecuniary advantage, dispose of the property now offered.

The purchasers of these premises have offered them to the Am. & For. Bible Society on the conditions, that the nett cost of $55,000 be raised to pay for them by the 1st of May next, and that suitable accommodations be there proffered rent-free, in perpetuity for the American Baptist Home Mission Society, and for such an agency as may in this city be required of the Baptist Miss. Union and the Am. Baptist Publication Society.

The time for action is short; but the purchasers, who now offer this property on the above terms, believe that the amount can be secured, and they give largely themselves, for the promotion of this desirable object.

It has long been the deliberate conviction of some of the wisest and most far-seeing among us, that all our benevolent Societies, of this general character ought to have accommodations, in convenient proximity, in this great city—not dependent on the contingent good-will of a few individuals or of a single church. The opportunity for securing this and much more for the public advantage is now offered; and if each one to whom this appeal for coöperation shall be carried, will give to it adequate consideration, so as to understand fully its benign bearing upon the general harmony, efficiency and welfare of the denomination, it is believed the requisite sum will be promptly subscribed.

The following cut, and the accompanying explanations, which have been sent forth to some extent in another form, are here subjoined, for more general and definite information.

GENERAL AGENT AND FINANCIAL SECRETARY.

It has been found requisite, to revive the appointment of such an assistant in this Institution so as to secure more efficiency, by a due division of labor, without materially increasing the expense. The Rev. J. J. WOOLSEY, long and favorably known as one of the Agents of the Society, was, in February last, invited to accept this office and entered on the discharge of its important duties the 1st of March.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

We have entered upon the last month of the fiscal year of 1852-3, and a sum not less than 8,000 dollars should yet, without fail, come into the Treasury. An amount less than this will not suffice to meet the demands, at home and abroad, which are being pressed upon the attention of your Board. This is by no means the language of distrust or complaint. "We will remember the years of the right hand of the Most High." God has graciously continued his smile upon this Society. We have increasing cause of thankfulness, in prosecuting the noble work which called this Institution into being. The same work grows upon our hands. The more we do, the more there is to be done. Every step in advance seems to enlarge, by ten-fold degrees, the field of our vision, until we are made to realize an impressive sense of the weight of our responsibility. Often are we burdened with the magnitude of the enterprise in which we are engaged, and the inadequacy of the "material aid" by which we hope to see it accomplished. We are led to inquire, if "the Field is the World," and "the Seed is the Word of God," How can the seed be made commensurate with the field? The desirableness and the duty of multiplying copies of the Word of Life, so as to meet the necessary wants of the world, none, it is presumed, will dispute. Equally certain does it appear that, a work so intimately associated with the salvation of men, should be prosecuted with untiring zeal and growing liberality.

But, brethren and friends, we are constrained to say that, there is a painful disproportion on between the ample field now waiting for the sower, and the seed to be sown! The receipts into your treasury have at no time equalled the absolute necessities of those, whose hands are stretched out for the bread of life. And yet, our work should be regarded as aggressive. The world is but poorly supplied with the living oracles of Truth. Every part of fallen humanity groans under burdens which would be immediately greatly relieved, by the presence and vital energy of the Sacred Scriptures.

No instrumentality, brought to bear upon the recovery of a lost world, if we except the herald of the cross, can command so powerful a sway over the consciences of men, and impress them with such a just sense of their personal and relative obligations, as also, with the duty and absolute necessity of repentance towards God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, as the Inspired Scriptures. In numberless instances, indeed, the Bible takes the precedence of the living teacher. It has no life that can be extinguished, no blood that can be spilt. It addresses truth to the understanding and the heart, speaks as plainly and as pointedly in the presence of king and plebeians, or even the man of misfortune, on his par with the most respectable of persons. Its lessons of spiritual wisdom attending Spirit its light is reflected upon the inner man into the citadel of the soul. God has constituted his Spirit. Where that sword is, there is the potent arm. And so the word becomes the power of God unto salvation.

Many are the instances, gathered from Mission fields, illustrations of these remarks. A Karen Testament in the interior of the country, where a missionary had never been, spirit of inquiry is awakened. Difficulties, hitherto unthought of, the conscious spirit is alarmed. Presently the earnest question is asked, "Thee be saved?" "What must I do?" "Is there hope for me?" amazement, the trembling sinner turns to the missionary, him, and there, to his utter astonishment, finds the solution which his case demanded. Salvation comes to him. Many are soon rejoicing in hope of life everlasting.

A Missionary in Southern India hears of a man of noble mind engaged in preaching the gospel, and persuading the people to the worship of dumb idols, to the service of the living God. With this noble man, in the presence of a number of his converts, Jesus the Son of God, their Saviour. This novel mission scene a Missionary. He had only been favored with pictures, and a few religious tracts. The truth of the gospel penetrates the dark mind of the poor idolater, and bows him at the feet of the Redeemer. No commissioned herald of the precious Bible. The renewing Spirit is present, and says, Truly, "The testimony of the Lord is sure, making the way of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul. The statutes of the Lord are perfect, converting the heart."

Similar instances are met with by the itinerant Missionary acquaintance among those who have never been favored with the Word of the Lord disseminated.

How emphatically does the voice of Providence speak in such instances, in favor of sending the blessed gospel to the ends of the earth! Ought we not to be more industrious in dispersing abroad the leaves which are for the healing of the nations?

And now, especially, when the way is admirably opened, effort. Need we remind you, as an additional motive to the cause, that, of late, extraordinary events have opened up new and promising fields? The recent political revolution has removed the formidable barriers which have long opposed the progress of the Sacred Scriptures.

The life-labor of the sainted Judson—the Burmese monument of his Christian fidelity and zeal, may be millions for whom it was prepared. Hitherto, almost from the hour when the successful translator lifted toward heaven the last sheet of the entire Bible, rendered into the Burmese tongue, and exclaimed with manifest exultation, and devout gratitude to God, "I have attained," that noble labor of his life has been impeded in its circulation. Much of the time it has been under regal proscription, and therefore, not permitted to go forth among the people to tell in silent grandeur, the tidings of bleeding mercy. But now the scene is changed. Those hindrances are, we devoutly hope, forever removed. The genius of liberty lifts her voice to the late imprisoned conscience, and says be free. Millions of the hapless sons of Burmah are now accessible by our Missionaries. They are laid at our doors full of bruises and putrefying sores. If saved, they must receive the Bible at our hands. There is not another in all the world, that they can read. The A. & F. Bible Society alone has the only translation ever made into the Burmese tongue; and it cost the devoted Judson a full generation to complete it. It is for the Baptists of America to say how extensively under God, that Bible shall be a blessing to the nation to whom it is given. Shall copies of it be multiplied sufficient to cover the present and successive pressing demands? Or, shall we suffer generation after generation to go down to the idolator's grave, unblest with the "One Golden Lamp" which can illumine their path? No. Generous humanity forbids. Redeemed and sanctified humanity says No! Judson himself shall speak. Hear him. "In this momentous era, can any believer in the Christian religion hope to lie down in the grave and pass quietly to paradise, without having made some effort to diffuse the light of the Bible throughout the world? Before he cherishes such a hope, and makes up his mind for such repose, let him consider how many millions there are who have never seen so much as one leaf of the sacred volume, never tasted so much as one drop of water of that well from which he is drawing and drinking every day. Let him consider how much money must be expended, how many toilsome efforts made, and how many lives sacrificed before the book can be translated, printed, published and distributed—before the well can be unsealed, and the water of life drawn and presented to all mankind. And then, let him inquire of his conscience what he has done towards accomplishing this great work, during the years that have passed since he ventured to hope in the Savior."

But Burmah is not the only people whose longing expectations are turned towards this Society. What shall we say of China? of China in Asia, and China in America? of China with her 360 millions of souls? of China with our noble corps of translators, hard at the work of rendering the word of God into two of the principle dialects of her difficult language? What of Orissa, with a devoted Sutton? Of the mysterious Karens and neighboring nations, where your Society is doing an immense labor? What of unhappy and Romanized France? Of Denmark and other portions of Europe? One field specially cannot fail to invite the prayerful consideration of every lover of Bible truth. The reformation in Germany in connection with the apostolical ministry of the far-famed and beloved Oncken, and kindred spirits is almost without a parallel. Dear Oncken is holding out his imploring hands for additional aid. His appeal is fresh before us—and though he is receiving thousands of dollars annually from this Society, yet the demand is but poorly supplied. Such are the growing wants of Germany that, Oncken has resolved to visit the U. S. of America to urge home, in person, the claims of that whitened harvest. He says, "Now is our time for sowing." Others are sowing tares with a diligent hand. Shall not we cast abroad the precious wheat. Shall Neological or Rationalistic principles be suffered to prevail over the German mind? Will we not favor them with the pure testimony of truth?

Nor must we close our eyes against the stern demands of our own favored land. Perhaps there is not another people in the wide world, whose religious privileges can compare with ours. And yet, recent explorations furnish long and detailed accounts of the humiliating and appalling destitution which prevails in many parts of our highly favored country. Shall it truly startling reach us in vain? It must not. the deafening cry which comes up to us from every part. Not one family should be suffered to grow up to maturity out the precious book of God in its dwelling. And y States, families can be reckoned by the thousands, with the lamp of heavenly truth to cheer their passage to the duties of a free people. What then may be said of Territories? What of Oregon, Utah, California and Nevada? the tide of emigration from abroad, settling among say, "No man cares for my soul."

Brethren can you not much increase your annual contributions of this Society? The preceding statements can but indicate the vastness of the work in which we are engaged. We commend itself to your kind regards. But O, let it call for earnest and hearty continual coöperation. Our work is for a perishing world, must be done soon, for the night can work.

We need your aid this hour. Will not the church have lacked opportunity to forward their contribution? Treasurer of this Society, avail themselves of an early appeal? What your hands find to do, do it with your

Letter, without date, from Rev. J. Goddard

MY DEAR SIR:—Your kind favor of June 1st came to hand on the 10th, obliged for the kind expression of your confidence, and for your words of a translator is slow and difficult, destitute of stirring incident and encouraging evidence of present usefulness. Hence an encouraging word is often of far more value than its cost. Since my last date the printing of the Gospel by John, has been nearly completed, and that of the Acts of the Apostles commenced. We have already printed 9000 of the portions which are completed—the Bap. Mission at Shanghai having requested 5000 of each. We at present distribute more of the Gospels than of Tracts, and I hope that the Gospel, which is its own witness, being thus sent into so many families, will prove the power of God unto salvation to many souls. Each Gospel has a page of explanatory remarks and a map of Judea prefixed. We very often have opportunity to give copies to persons from distant parts of the country—parts never visited by Missionaries. One of our chapels is so situated that persons from abroad visiting this city are almost sure to pass it, and they usually call to see what new thing is there. Many such almost daily receive a portion of Scripture—usually a Gospel—and carry to their distant home. We cannot, except by the eye of faith, follow these messengers of glad tidings on their errand of mercy. If they are often treated with contempt and abuse, so was he whose name they bear. But we may rest assured that the Word of God shall not return void. But now is the seed-time, and we must wait with patience to behold the ripening harvest. We can see it by the eye of faith, and we can rejoice in the certainty of its final complete in-gathering. But now we must with great patience prepare and scatter the seed. Much of this seed may fall by the wayside, or on stony ground, or among thorns. But that which falls on ground prepared by the Holy Spirit will bring forth an abundant harvest.

I am now engaged in translating the Epistle to the Romans, which is half finished. It is a most interesting as well as difficult work to transfer into the Chinese language the deep and precious truths contained in that epistle. To accomplish this work is more than worth all the labor it costs. Well do I remember the deep interest with which, just twenty years ago, I first went over this Epistle in the original, in a careful thorough manner, under the excellent instruction of Dr. Wayland. It produced an impression on my mind never to be effaced. Many of his illustrations are brought back vividly to mind by the attempt to transfer the thought to another language. I find translation a very different thing from explanation. Still, with divine help, I hope to be able to prepare a version which shall be a fair representation of the inspired original. It is a consolation to be assured that you and your fellow-laborers are helping not only with pecuniary means, but also by your prayers to God for me. Much of the influence of that Spirit who dictated the original is necessary to enable any one to make a proper translation.

My health has much improved since cold weather commenced, so that my prospects for being able to go on with the work are now as good as at any time since I came to this place. As you request and authorize it, I shall hereafter affix the imprint of your Society to the portions which I publish.

With kind regards, I remain, dear sir, yours truly, J. GODDARD.

CANTON, CHINA, Nov. 11th, 1852.

TO THE SECRETARY OF THE A. & F. B. SOCIETY.

DEAR BROTHER,—As a life member, will you permit me through you, affectionately to address the distributing committee of the Am. and For. Bible Society.

Dear Brethren,—We are in great need of your aid here in Canton. As your great object is to distribute the Scriptures in the best version, and by the best agency that can be procured; and to the widest extent that promises a fair probability of doing good, permit me remark, that the facilities for the prosecution of your great object in Canton, are amply at hand, and I trust such as will be satisfactory.

1. The best Version. The Rev. Mr. Goddard's New Version, is now coming out; several of the gospels are already prepared for the press; and I doubt not but it will meet your approbation, that it should be circulated with your funds, as the best; and indeed, I know not but it is the very best. He has the vantage ground of all who have gone before him on which to work; and at least I think he uses the right words, for God and baptism about which there has been so much writing, and I prefer his word for baptism, to either used by the other Baptist missionaries. My assistants say, it is just the character that should be used.

2. Agency. Behold here am I, use me. I am the only foreign baptist missionary now in Canton, and consequently the only person here that would circulate Rev. Mr. Goddard's version; but I am more than anxious to be engaged in doing so; and therefore, beg your aid, and co-operation in this great and good work.

3. Opportunities. I presume you know that in so great a city as this, there is no want of opportunities to scatter the seeds of life. During the last twelve months, I have not had a sufficient supply for my own Chapel, where the people usually request the Scriptures. The whole city lies in a good measure destitute! Why should I supplied hundreds, if not thousands, of shops and houses with some this, if I had had the pecuniary means! And hundreds of Junks, and bound to every section of the country, where books are always received with the people, and I presume read extensively. In this way books, if sent to the country all around, if we had them. And the students I have here yearly, by thousands for examination, which forms a fine collection of Scriptures among those whose business has been to study books from place to place in this province, if in this nation, that is so favourable for the cause of the Gospel. As to a fair probability of their doing good, we must leave that to God. As has promised that his word shall not return void. Let us trust his word to-day.

You are aware, brethren, ere this I presume, that I am not now at the Southern Mission Board at Richmond; and hence your generous desire to send you the Holy Scriptures, need not be impeded by consulting will depend entirely upon a sense of your own duty.

I am very anxious to distribute the Scriptures here. Nor can we do it without them; and if entrusted with the work, I will do it faithfully to the best of the means put at my disposal. As blocks are to be cut I should be glad to have the work done by the year 1853.

Yours most affectionately in the Lord,

REV. RUFUS BARCOCK, COR. SEC. AM. & FOR. BIBLE SOCIETY:

MY DEAR BROTHER:—I have your letter of Jan. 5th, with the halcyon acceptable gift among our friends here.

Mr. Johnson has kindly consented to furnish you with some translations of Genesis, and I enclose with this a page of the New Testament as well as a few marginal references and readings, which are designed chiefly to give names of weights, measures and money, which could not be made perfect by rendering the translation paraphrastic. The four Gospels are thus in progress. The printing is done with metallic type, at the press of the Hong Kong, in a style which promises to be satisfactory to all concerned. Thus be put into one volume, not exceeding 200 Chinese, equal to 400 enclosed count as one page in Chinese.

Our contract is, for the New Testament.....	.....
Matthew with notes, already printed,.....	.....
Genesis with notes, do. ....	.....
Exodus with notes, do. ....	.....

Besides this, several editions of the above have been printed in tracts, and the entire edition of Exodus is reported by the Secretary as taken under their patronage. It is not for us to decide by whom funds shall be supplied, leaving that question for you and other good men may seem to you expedient, while it shall be our aim to aid the Chinese Word of Life, and you will join with us in prayer for the efficient co-operation of inspiration to the Holy Scriptures that those who thus read may have the word of life.

The portions of Scripture printed, as above reported, have been mostly sent to Siam, some have been sent to California, some to the Chinese towns and villages around us.

The answer to your inquiry concerning our progress in translating may be stated in few words—viz: the four gospels are printed, the proof of the last chapter of John, and received the MS. of the Romans and the two Epistles to the Corinthians may be said to be portions I have at various times gone over, so that I hope to be able to give each portion a careful review before we have time to correct the forms as they come from the press.

At a time when versions of the Scriptures in Chinese are being multiplied, it is beyond the reach of hope to obtain uniformity, and all we can aim at is a faithful translation of the Book of God in simple and intelligible language. In attempting this we gladly avail ourselves of the aid of our predecessors and associates, and look to the Author of the Bible to give us his help and accept our service.

Most affectionately your brother, W. DEAN.

P. S. Please tender my thanks to brother Ward for his kindness in sending the books. Remember me kindly to such of your family as I once had the pleasure of meeting with you in New York, and in my behalf extend a hand of congratulation to your associates in the Bible cause and a welcome to a participation in the honor and privilege of giving to the perishing millions of China the only light that can cheer their way through the dark valley when their lamp of Confucian philosophy and the smoking tapers of pagan superstition shall have gone out! The Chinese, with all his boasted light and worldly wisdom, and in this he is truly far in advance of the rest of the unchristianized world, in all that pertains to the future world and fitness for heaven, is no better than the Hottentot or the Polynesian. To give to him a knowledge of the book of God is a work worthy of an angel's sympathies, and one in which the philanthropist and the Christian may rejoice to bear a part. Who would not gladly extend his hand to mitigate the sufferings and increase the happiness of a fellow-creature for an hour—but here is an opportunity for bearing a part in the work of aiding the sorrows and blessing hundreds of millions for eternity.

MAULMAIN, November 18, 1862.

MY DEAR FRIEND:—For a long time I have purposed writing to you, but a pressure of engagements has hitherto prevented.

At this time your Mission is in a state of partial abeyance. While no less active than at any past time, all are looking forward with intense anxiety, not unmingled with fear and apprehension. Hitherto, the Mission has been hanging on to the outskirts of an immense kingdom. A little strip of land, comparatively speaking, just wide enough to afford a safe harbor for the ships which brought foreigners here, has been the field of labor. Here a good many missionaries have toiled and died; and it has been seemingly very difficult for the American Baptist churches to furnish recruits sufficient to occupy even this little spot of ground. What, then, can the churches do, now that the gates which so long shut you out from Burmah are thrown wide open. The field will be occupied; there is not a particle of doubt on that score; but the question which is now agitated is, by whom?—by Baptists, or by Pedo-Baptists? or by both together? or by American and English Baptists? Or will the Church, with all its Puseyism and Popery, come in to take a part? Or will the whole Baptist denomination of the United States, with British America assisting, make a giant effort, and secure the field? I am sure your Board, with only its present supports, cannot meet the exigency. They can neither command the men nor the money. It is just possible, if the South would unite with the North, the field might be secured by one denomination, so as to prevent the ingress of others, and then cultivated as means might accumulate. But such a demonstration must be made as to satisfy the world that the ground is taken, or the exclusive occupancy will certainly be lost.

And suppose one denomination fail to occupy the field? What evil will follow? If the heathen are converted, what matters it about the instrumentality—whether by Baptists or Pedo-Baptists? Doubtless such questions will be asked, and they must be answered satisfactorily to querists. It is difficult to enumerate the evils that would follow—the retarding influence which might result from the exhibition of sectarian zeal, where, more than in all other places, apostolic zeal should be paramount; but there is one great and prominent objection which will be appreciated by every Baptist.

The translation of the Holy Scriptures into the Burmese language, by the late Dr. Judson, is admitted to be the best translation in India; that is, the translation has given more satisfaction to his cotemporaries and successors than any other translation of the Bible into any other Eastern language has done to associate missionaries in other parts of India. It is free from all obscurity to the Burmese mind. It is read and understood perfectly. Its style and diction is as choice and elegant as the language—itself peculiarly honorific—would afford, and conveys, doubtless, the mind of the Spirit as perfectly as can be. But it is, as the original required, thoroughly a Baptist Bible. There is no sprinkling—no half-way work—no covering over the true meaning of words—consequently, no man using this Bible can bring an infant to the font and sprinkle it. Not the most illiterate native who has read the Scriptures, but would demand his authority for such an act. It follows, then, that the first work of a Pedo-Baptist missionary would be to make a new translation for the Burmans, Taliengs and Karens, to mystify the truth, and confuse the natives. Who can tell the multitude of evils issuing from such a base policy?

Should no more of Burmah be annexed to British India, at this time the ancient Peguan kingdom, it would require a great many men to occupy the province opened within that Province; but the Burman court, though its opposition is comparatively weak, and entirely fruitless, has shown no desire for peace; and, by menacing and compelling them to advance against their will, so as to render the downfall of Burmah has been decreed by a higher than human power, the annihilation of the gospel east of the Bay of Bengal to the northern border removed.

As an evidence of the feeling in India on the subject under consideration, from a private letter which I read the other day, from one of the missionaries in Bengal, addressed to one connected with the mission. He says: "I am expecting so large a reinforcement of missionaries. I hope you will land, when it is placed under the government of a civilized power. I upon your Board the necessity of straining every nerve, to supply the Mission. Your body has long labored under every aspect of discouragement to see you jostled out of your position by others, who will merely use you as a platform clap-trap, in order that they may obtain more money from the Government."

The "re-inforcement" now on the way, as I suppose, is a good earnest land. The expenses to be incurred in settling these men in entire new land and with the restoration of tranquility and the establishment of the Macedonian cry will be louder than ever, so that there will, indeed, every nerve, to meet the demand.

HAMBURG

MY DEAR BROTHER:—I addressed you a day or two ago, stating that I respond to the warm invitation of yourself and the respected Board V.) I shall leave Europe about the middle of April, for New York.

I beg now to reply to your two last letters, dated January 5th and 14th enclosed in yours of the 5th, for £227 16s. 2d., accompanied by the 1 to visit the United States, I beg to renew my grateful acknowledgment.

From the enclosed letters you will see that the spirit of persecution is highly desirable if your Board can use its influence on behalf of the people especially on behalf of your Society's two colporteurs—A. Bettfreund J. Schlesier, at Schleswig—as their labors have been prevented; at against them by the government are destined for this end. Some of them have even been taken away by the gend'armes. I think if a monarch of Denmark, it would not be without desirable effect.

In the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg, where our churches enjoy a greater freedom than any other part of Germany, Hamburg excepted, I have,—at the earnest request of the brethren—appointed, on my recent visit to that place, a new colporteur for urgent reasons, last autumn.

The amount received for Scriptures sold is most gratifying; it reaches 14,182 4½.

The School Bible is still in great demand, and in a day or two a new edition. I hope that as soon as your funds will allow, you will do what you can and the dear brethren on the Board will forgive my importunate begging which I claim your help. For all that you have already done for the people especially in Germany, I feel more than language can express. The amount which has, by the reading of the Scriptures circulated at the expense of the Board, imparted, under divine teaching, we cannot possibly know. But as we are and we know from that word that it shall not return void, but accomplish what we have sent it, now is our time for sowing, and in due time we shall reap.

Popery and infidelity are more powerfully at work than ever; and the churches are unconsciously aiding the spirit of popery, by continuing to publish the productions of lying prophets, full of errors, and more calculated to

way to perdition than to bring them to the knowledge of their own character as lost, guilty and helpless worms, for whom there is only one way of escape—through faith in the person and finished work of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Dear brethren, God has assigned to you and to us a great work in Germany—may we see its importance and magnitude; and though it has not the attraction of novelty, may it still enjoy the powerful aid of your excellent Society, from the consideration of the fact, that with small means, and under the most difficult circumstances, it has pleased our adorable Redeemer to effect great things; and I trust we shall see yet greater manifestations of God's sovereign grace in the wider spreading of his own truth and the ingathering of many of his chosen ones in this and the adjacent lands. In anticipation of this delightful prospect, let us, in humble dependence on our risen Lord, labor on until we are called home by the master whom we serve.

With affectionate regards to yourself and the Board, I remain yours, in the Lord,

J. G. OSCHER.

From Dr. Devan.

LIONS, Jan. 22, 1853.

MY DEAR BRO. BARCOCK:—I have the pleasure of enclosing you, herewith, my account current with the A. & F. B. Society for the year just terminated. By it you will perceive, there remains in my hands unexpended a sum perhaps (?) sufficient to cover Scripture expenses for the year on which we have entered. This fact is a great encouragement to me, in view of the difficulties which seem to threaten this department of the Mission during the next twelve months.

You will see by the above report, that francs 413.23½ were realized from sales of 369 copies of the Word of God. You must not, however, suppose that they constitute the sum total of the copies of sacred Scriptures distributed through this Mission. We have been in the habit of permitting poor brethren (when their work fails,) to distribute copies, reserving for their own use the amount of money received from the sale. The sum total of the sales I am not able to settle with any exactness. My returns exhibit only about 500 copies.

You have kindly permitted me to say to your colporteurs, that they are not to regard themselves simply as booksellers, but also as heralds of the Cross as the Lord gives opportunity. I have freely availed myself of this latitude, and hence your colporteurs have acted also as evangelists, while on the other hand, the evangelists have also acted as colporteurs.

Through all the instrumentalities brought to bear upon the field, I have, by the blessing of God, been able to report as follows for the year 1852:

1852. Jan. 1. Total number of baptized believers here was...114

Excluded during the year..... 13

Died, " ..... 2

Dismissed, " ..... 4      19

Baptized during year 1852..... 76

Received by Letter..... 2      77

1853. Jan. 1. Total number of baptized believers is      172

Of these 172, there are 120 who had never been members of any evangelical church before joining our churches. They are converts from the heathenism of papal Rome. This success has not been obtained without much and bitter opposition from Satan and his Roman vassals; but the Lord has been with us.

Since writing the foregoing, I learn that —, your partially supported agent in —, is again thrown into prison. And for what? Simply because he was present at a meeting of fourteen persons, from which there were very carefully excluded all who are not members of the church! Oh how fierce is the rage of Satan and his satellites. The day of persecution has begun to break upon us, and Baptists have the vanguard in the army of Christ's martyrs. I have instanced — as a sufferer, but he is not alone; a brother, named —, is also within the bars of a prison for the like crime, and a warrant is now already issued against —, (pastor at —,) ordering him to be arrested. Where will all this end? May the Lord forgive the persecutors, for they know not what they do.

I trust the A. & F. B. Society will not be discouraged or afraid to stand by us in our straits, and that you will not only allow me to proceed as heretofore with the funds, but will also assure us of an interest in your sympathies and prayers.

Yours, in best of all bonds,

T. T. DEVAN.

The following resolutions were presented by the Corresponding Secretary, according to the directions of the Board, and its recommendations were unanimously adopted :

1. Resolved, That the restrictive resolutions passed at the Anniversary of this Society in 1850, as a substitute for the original resolves of 1838, on the same subject, which had the previous year been modified, be and are hereby repealed, for the express purpose of substituting again the original resolutions of 1838, which are hereby re-affirmed in the original words.

2. Resolved, That these original resolves of 1838, reported then by a large and judicious committee, and unanimously adopted by the Society, be and are hereby incorporated as an addition to the Second Article of the Constitution as a part of the same, to the intent they may be prominently before the Society, its managers and all its friends.

The addition proposed by these resolutions makes the Second Article as follows :

ART. II. It shall be the object of the Society to aid in the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures in ALL LANDS. In carrying into effect this Article of the Constitution, the Society will expect the most sedulous care in patronizing such versions only of the Sacred Scriptures into the languages of the heathen, as have been, or may be, faithfully made, and are approved by competent examiners ; and that in the distribution of the Scriptures in the English language, the commonly received version will be used until otherwise directed by the Society.

The Building Committee reported progress, as follows :

TO THE AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY :

THE Committee appointed by you on the 14th April, 1852, to procure suitable premises for the use of the Society, beg leave to report progress.

In pursuance of their charge, and after much examination as to the relative merits of different locations, your Committee found that the property which was formerly owned by the American Bible Society, situate on Nassau Street, in the City of New York, was well suited for the purposes of this Society. These premises were offered for sale at public auction in January last, in one parcel, and in order to procure that portion of them which was adapted to and sufficient for the purposes of the Society, it was necessary to purchase the whole. This purchase was made by one of your Committee, Mr. Nathan C. Platt, for $105,000. Upon consultation, after this purchase, it was determined that the southerly portion of the property, that known as the "Bible House," being about 50 feet wide on Nassau Street, and extending through about 100 feet to the Street in the rear, would be sufficient. This part of the purchase, which was more than one-half of the whole, was assumed by your Committee at $55,000, and the residue, containing about 44 feet front, was kept by Mr. Platt, on his own account, at $50,000 ; a proportion of price larger than his proportion of the property.

Mr. Platt has completed his purchase according to the terms of the sale, and received the deed of the property, and this Society went into possession of their portion on the second day of this month. Your Committee believe that this property, with reference to its central location, its adaptation to their business, its price, the prospective improvements in the neighborhood and enhancement in value, is both suitable and desirable for the Society.

They farther report that subscriptions to the amount of about thirty thousand dollars have been made toward the $55,000 necessary to complete their purchase.

According to the terms of this subscription, and the wish of the donors, they have provided that rooms and accommodations in the premises should be offered to the Am. Bapt. Home Mission Society, to the Am. Bapt. Missionary Union, to the Am. Bapt. Publication Society, and to the New York Baptist Missionary Convention for their permanent occupancy, and free from Rent.

It is intended that this property shall be conveyed to the Society as soon as the necessary arrangements can be completed. Your Committee are desirous that the residue of the subscriptions should be raised by the 1st day of September next ; and hope to be able to make a final report at the next Annual Meeting.

Respectfully submitted,

S. P. TOWNSEND, Chairman.
JOHN W. BRUCE, JR., Secretary.

NEW-YORK, 14 May, 1853.

At 3 o'clock, P. M. the Society assembled in the body of the church. The President in the chair.

Exercises introduced by reading the 19th Psalm, by Rev. C. G. SOMMERS. Singing 392 Hymn of the Psalmist :
"How precious is the Book divine."

Prayer by Rev. LEWIS LEONARD, of Casenovia, N. Y.

MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY.

ON behalf of the Board of Managers, and with all my heart, I tender to you, dear brethren, fraternal and affectionate salutation upon this our sixteenth anniversary ; and I do so the more feelingly, as the peculiar incidents and associations of the occasion are to me alike pleasing and impressive ; at the Capital of the State, in this house, in the bosom of this Church, in a position and under circumstances that awaken the memories of the past, recalling, in strong impression, scenes and events of deep and solemn interest. In this city, where the prime of my manhood was exhausted in the labors and trials of the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ ; in this pulpit, where my head whitened under the anxieties and responsibilities of a long protracted ministry, which, however weak and imperfect, was graciously sustained ; in this place, where I have enjoyed so much of blessed elevation of spirit from the Master's presence, and of painful depression from conscious inadequacy, I am permitted, in the kind providence of God, to greet you brethren, beloved in the faith and fellowship of the Gospel, and as coadjutors in a precious cause. May God the Holy Spirit descend upon this Church, multiply its numbers, and establish it in the truth. May an unction from the Holy One prepare us for the duties and responsibilities concentrate our entire moral being upon the great work to which we are called recollections of the past year, there are some of a solemn and impressively reminded of the necessity of redeeming our time, and of girding God, by the recent departure of our beloved brother and Recording Secretary, to the rest that remaineth for the people of God. At our last session of his valuable services, and listened with profit and pleasure to his judicious active hand is now still, and that persuasive tongue is now silent in death to be cherished, and his loss deplored by the members of this Board. Amiable as a child in disposition and feeling, yet wise in council, prompt and energetic labors were inestimable to this Society, while his admirable qualities endeared him to the entire circle in which he moved, and especially to those who had confidence. It was my very great privilege to be near him in his dying moments, and to unite in prayer with and for his departed spirit; nor shall I soon forget the sweet and precious beyond expression were those moments of communion, just about to be made perfect in heaven. Eloquent and artless he certainly was on the platform, but more impressively and touchingly so upon the bed of affliction, and listened to his affecting deprecations of an imperfect life and ministration of confident faith in the merits, grace, and cross of his Redeemer, and his eternal life, until I deeply realized that—

“The chamber where the good man meets with death
Is privileged beyond the common walks of life,
Quite on the verge of heaven.”

Among the last of his expressed desires and prayers (not the least fervent of this Society and the successful prosecution of its work. Upon one occasion he had intimated some encouragement, and I had expressed the hope that he said, “Yes, it would be pleasant to live for my family, and that I might be permitted to visit Albany.” Then, after a pause, in which he appeared absorbed in thought, he said, “I am not probable, but you will be there. Say to our brethren, the word of the Lord let it fly! let the Bible fly over the whole earth!” I have delivered the spirit, when standing as upon the threshold of the Father's House, and as if it came back upon us as a voice re-echoed from his lone grave! Or rather the prophet that fell upon Elisha, as he ascended in a chariot of flame; it was as if heaven, as he was starting upon his upward flight from this dark world of bright abodes of perfection and bliss. May the last desire of our departed brother be fulfilled, while he lives in the presence of God and the Lamb in heaven.

Beloved brethren, our Anniversaries not only afford the opportunity of congratulation, but also to review the past; and from the recollections derive motive to grateful confidence in his faithfulness and power, and earnest devotedness in the important work confided to our hands. The history of the Foreign Bible Society is replete with interesting reminiscences that forcibly and progress, the smiles of the Divine favor. Its origin was marked by the interpositions of His unseen but mighty hand, leading His people in a way in a path and progress beautifully illustrative of His superintending providence eminently calculated to glorify His name, and vindicate the authority of His history you are perfectly familiar, and have frequently admired the display by which it has been characterized. After long and pleasant co-operation with this honored national institution, to whose treasury the zeal of our Church contributed in proportion, and after protracted and painful discussion, aid was refused for the foreign translations of the Scriptures; their patronage withheld, and because the fidelity of our translators imparted the inspirations of the Bible in their terms, making known the will of God in heathen lands, in relation to the same. Our duty was plain and unquestionable. We were impelled, by our allegiance to His sovereign claims upon us as the subjects of His moral government, to prosecute it in our own hands, and prosecute it in humble dependence upon His providence who are and whom we serve.”

Who that was present at our great Denominational Convention at Philadelphia (an assembly unsurpassed in number and sanctified intelligence by any assembly convened in this country,) could fail to have marked the evident tokens of divine guidance? It was indicated, and by many deeply felt, in the progress of the deliberations, and especially in its wise and almost unanimous conclusions.

The concentrated wisdom of our churches then and there gave birth, impulse, and efficiency to the noble institution whose sixteenth anniversary we have convened to celebrate. Truly, "The Lord of Hosts was with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge." A society originating in the clearest evidence of the Divine will, has been most graciously sustained in its onward progress of increasing usefulness by the strongest expressions of the Divine approbation.

All is animating in the past; I would now briefly advert to the present condition of our affairs. As our true position has by some minds been misunderstood, and by others questioned, it may not be improper upon this occasion to define that position. Since that memorable day, the principle embodied in the concise and sufficiently definite language of the Constitution has been faithfully adhered to. The will of its constituency then, so distinctly and with so much unanimity expressed, and so unequivocally repeated at the meeting of the Society in New-York, in 1850, has been regarded by your present Board as of solemn and binding obligation. They have not felt at liberty, in any case or in any form, to transcend their constitutional limits, while they have labored with earnest devotedness for the promotion of its great object, to aid in the wider circulation of the most faithful versions of the Holy Scriptures in all lands. Our labors in the department of home circulation have been necessarily limited, as by far the greater amount of the means confided to our trust by the liberality of our churches has been demanded by the more pressing claims of the foreign field. In this work we have been strictly confined to the English version in common use, without note, comment, or slightest alteration. We are not in any sense a revision society, nor have we understood that its founders ever contemplated this service. To revise and to circulate are terms of different import, and involve a responsibility of a very different character; it would surely not require a very elaborate argument to convince a candid mind that the one does not necessarily include the other. Neither can we be regarded as a translation society. Other minds and hands are charged with this responsible duty; and if in the progress of our labors it is ever requisite to employ agencies to this end, it must be regarded not as our proper and appropriate work, but rather as incidental if not indeed unhappy. We circulate foreign translations prepared by our missionaries in heathen lands and in Europe, under the direction of another Board, and whose seat of administration is in a different locality. We sympathize with them in their labors, and aid constitutionally their operations, but in their work we have neither control nor responsibility. In making this avowal we must not be understood as resisting all advancement in theological science and sound Biblical criticism; on the contrary, we would freely open our minds to the light that may radiate from any quarter upon these important subjects; and as freely contribute all we possess, of mind, means, or influence, for their promotion. Nay more, should a new version of the English Scriptures be produced, that is more faithful, and pronounced to be so by competent learning, and by the expressed confidence of the Church of God, why then, acting under the sanctions and in compliance with the requisitions of our Constitution, we would do our best endeavor to give it the wings of the morning and send it abroad through the length and breadth of our land. But we must be permitted to say, that with the wild radicalism of the day, that can approach even holy things with reckless temerity, and affiliate with various forms of error for the attainment of its object, we have not the slightest sympathy, nor can we have, so long as we regard the honor of God, the peace of the Church, and the highest good of mankind, as the primary objects for which we live, move, and have our being.

The reports of our secretary will make you acquainted with the progress and incidents of the past year. They have been such as strikingly manifest the Providential favor of God, and call for our devout and grateful acknowledgements of his continued goodness and sustaining grace. Under circumstances of peculiar embarrassment; the death of some and the protracted indisposition of others among our most efficient agents; the untiring hostility to our advancement, to which it is painful to allude, and which any thing more than allusion might be considered as of questionable propriety; with all that has tended to depress and discourage, the amount gathered into our treasury exceeds the preceding year. The receipts in donations exhibit an excess of $5000, evincing the cheering fact, that, however strenuously assailed, the society is sustained by and is constantly gaining upon the affections and confidence of the churches.

Among the most gratifying events of the year has been the purchase and occupancy of a Bible House. A devoted brother, to whom pecuniary sacrifices are pleasure, and whose heart and hand is ever opened by generous impulses, purchased the premises, No. 115 Nassau street, until recently in possession of the American Bible Society, and made the liberal tender of 50 by 100 feet to the American and Foreign Bible Society for $55,000. We have gladly availed ourselves of this opportunity for obtaining a permanent location, and have already entered upon possession. A subscription has been opened, and about $30,000 of the required amount has been pledged to this enterprise, and I cannot entertain a doubt but that the entire sum will be obtained ere the close of the present year. I need not detain you upon this subject, as the peculiar advantages of this locality, the objects contemplated and the means by which it is proposed to attain them will be p the report of the corresponding secretary. There is much in this event to induce unhesitating reliance upon the wise and gracious government of G the lessons of His holy Providence, and how important that they should faithfully improved. The spacious room in which your board now conven painful conflict. It was there that under adverse depressing circumstan their faith in God and the power of holy principle in controlling his people Sommers, Colgate and Winterton, then in the prime of life and intellect, strength, contended for the truth of God, urged the just claims and susta Denomination. We the subscribers, a committee appointed by the Board of Managers of the American and Foreign Bible Society, to audit the accounts of the Treasurer, do report that we have examined the accounts and vouchers of the Society for the last year, and find the same correct. The receipts from all sources have been Forty-four Thousand Two Hundred and Fifteen Dollars and 84-100, and the payments have been Forty-five Thousand Two Hundred and Thirty Dollars and 35-100. Including a balance in the Treasury at the commencement of the year of Six Hundred and Twenty-nine Dollars and 27-100, leaves the Treasury overdrawn this day of Three Hundred and Eighty-five Dollars and 24-100. The Society is also in possession of a Bond and Mortgage on unencumbered real estate, for One Thousand Dollars, drawing interest for the same.

SIXTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

WITH mingled emotions your Board of Managers proceed to the discharge of their accustomed duty, in presenting to the Society the report of their transactions for the last twelve months. On the one hand they have to acknowledge that it has proved to be a period of unusual prosperity. Objects of interest and importance which have long been contemplated as desirable for the prosecution and permanency of the Society's operations, have been entered upon with cheering success. On the other hand, however, for the first time in the whole history of this organization, one of its executive officers, greatly beloved and confided in, has been called away by death, in the midst of his usefulness, and surrounded by all the affecting mementoes of his intense interest in the work which we are now prosecuting. Our beloved brother and associate, MORGAN J. RHEES, D. D., one of the Secretaries of this Institution, both by his life and his death has furnished the most powerful appeal to all of us who remain, to do with our might what our hand findeth, and our heart hath purposed. A suitable testimonial of regard for his unsurpassed worth, and his noble fidelity to the cause with which this Society is identified, was entered on the minutes of the Board, and has been extensively published in the following words :

"At a regular meeting of the Board of Managers of the American and Foreign Bible Society, at 16 Park Place, on the 3d of March, the following action was unanimously taken :

"The Board of Managers of the American and Foreign Bible Society, deeply penetrated with a mournful sense of the bereavement they have experienced in the removal by death of their beloved and highly esteemed associate, Rev. M. J. RHEES, D. D., for nearly three years, the Recording Secretary of this Institution, and a most efficient member of the Board, desire to enter upon the minutes of this body their unanimous, cordial, profound testimony of the inestimable value of services which, officially and otherwise, this brother beloved had rendered to this Society.

"An arrangement had been entered into by which he was expected to give constant assistance in the Corresponding Secretary's department, especially when that officer was necessarily absent from the Rooms. On these duties he had just entered, with characteristic ardor, and that noble far-seeing devotement eminently characteristic of his renewed and sanctified nature. His last visit to our city was paid to these Rooms, and on this embassy of holy love. Here, where we meet for deliberation, he suffered a severe paroxysm of the disease which soon hurried him to the grave, thus rendering the very place of our assembling henceforth more sacredly endeared to us.

"For the merciful interposition of Divine goodness which smoothed his passage to the tomb, and irradiated his pathway with a light so pure and glorious, we would record our devout acknowledgments, as well as for the assurance that in a higher sphere, where the Master has called him, not one of his estimable qualities will be lost. May his bereaved family and church experience Divine consolation, and, in the assurance of our mutual sufferings, may our sympathies be also blended. Entreating of our Heavenly Father, from whom cometh every good and perfect gift, to sanctify to us and to them, as well as to kindred organizations of Christian benevolence, this dispensation, and to stimulate us all to trim our lamps and gird our loins anew for more thorough and earnest devotion to the duties devolving on us, we would reverently bow before his footstool, and from the heart say, "The will of the Lord be done!"

WARREN CARTER, Rec. Secretary.

B. T. WELCH, President.

Other deaths among directors, members and supporters of the Society, echo the same solemn lesson.

HOME OPERATIONS.

Notwithstanding considerable embarrassment and hindrance in the performance of our accustomed duties, forced on us by the unwelcome necessity of removal from our established place of business in Broome St., where for so many years our friends had been accustomed to resort from all parts of the country, to premises temporarily occupied in Park Place, and but imperfectly known; more than an average amount of prosperity has on the whole been experienced during the past year. The sales of Bibles and Testaments from our depository, for the reasons just adverted to, and from other causes of a temporary character, have been considerably less than in some former years. Legacies also, always a very uncertain and widely varying source of income, have been less than the preceding year by more than 3000 dollars in actual receipts; while it has come to the knowledge of the Board, that unusually large bequests have been made to the Society, which will come into its possession in future years. The following twelve items constitute our receipts from this source for the year just closed.

The same tendencies in regard to receipts from Auxiliary Societies except the comparatively few vigorously engaging in Scripture distribution, thus keeping alive and increasing their zeal in the good work, which were commented on at considerable length in our last report, have still continued to operate to nearly the same extent as in the preceding year. The following comparatively meagre list of such of the number as have forwarded to us efficient aid for the last two years, is here presented for the double purpose of encouragement to those who have done well, and of gentle admonition to others, who as they do not find themselves included in this list, may readily understand the cause. So far as practicable the entire sums paid into our treasury by these auxiliaries in the whole period of their connexion with us, is also appended. There may be some mistakes and unintentional omissions in this list but they will be promptly corrected whenever they are pointed out to us.

The augmented amount received from churches and the past year, viz. : $27,905, or about $5,000 more than from this source, becomes, therefore, a most cheering and satisfactory proof of continued and increasing confidence and cooperation.

In another aspect the above amount may indicate the success of our indefatigable agents, toiling on in their respective spheres, often greatly impeded by having laboriously and repeatedly to remove misconceptions from the minds of our friends. Such obstacles have, no doubt, increased the labors and expensiveness of our agency in some parts of the country greatly. Hence the more praise is justly due to those indefatigable servants of this good cause, who through evil and good report, have patiently and successfully persevered. The health of some of them or of their families has suffered considerably during the year, and one of their number, the Rev. Joseph Wilson, of Maine, for many previous years a successful agent of the Baptist Missionary Union, has died, after being for some eight or nine months in our employ. We commend all these laborious and self-denying men to the sympathy and cooperation of the churches. We know that in many, indeed in almost all instances, they have been cordially welcomed, and have well approved themselves, and successfully advocated the cause of Christ's Word committed to their hands. It can excite no especial wonder that frequent changes take place in this agency corps. Our sedulous efforts will not be spared to secure the utmost practicable amount of permanency and efficiency as well as true economy in this important branch of the service. The special attention of our General Agent is expected to be unremittingly turned to this part of his duties. After much and successful experience in such labors himself, he will be able more wisely, and with a truly fraternal spirit, to superintend them in all parts of the widely extended field; while both he and the Corresponding Secretary as far as his engrossing duties at the rooms will allow, may be expected to aid this agency labor by cooperating with the brethren employed in it more or less fully as circumstances require in all parts of the country.

Total receipts, including the small balance on hand at the beginning of the year, from all sources, have reached the gratifying amount of $44,845.11. Disbursements $45,230.35. Had considerably more been received, it could have been wisely appropriated. Had any less come into our treasury, the painful necessity would almost for the first time in our history have been imposed on us of denying the aid urgently solicited of us in giving to the perishing the bread of life. Four hundred and nine Life Members and Life Directors have this year been added to our lists.

The above list of these appropriations will give so extent and variety of objects embraced in these grants. Among them will be found United States troops in their remote cantonments; the keepers of light-houses and light-ships on a portion of our sea coast; the depraved and degraded in our large cities; the immigrants to Liberia; and the large colored settlements in Canada; as well as the swarms of German, Irish, and other immigrants just reaching our shores from the Old World, who have shared largely in these benefactions. So have the young both in the city and in the wilderness, wherever Sun-day Schools for the destitute are required, in which they may be taught to read and understand the inspired Guide-Book.

To all the 150 missionaries of the Am. Bap. Home Mission Society, and to the scores of colporteurs employed by the Am. Bap. Publication Society, the tender has been or will be made, that such grants of Bibles and Testaments as their several exigencies require, shall promptly be furnished to them on their requisition. In this way, the wilderness and the solitary place will soon be made glad for them, and with God's blessing the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose.

FOREIGN APPROPRIATIONS.

The foreign appropriations remain now as they have been from the beginning the grand feature both of interest and importance in our operations. In other departments of our labor we are mere helpers, or we are participants with others in a great and good work, where in some cases at least, theirs is the leading and ours but a subsidiary instrumentality. But wherever we have been required to make versions into the languages of the unevangelized, from the days of Dr. Carey and his associates to this hour, all the Baptist translators have, without previous concert, found themselves constrained by an intense and uniformly operating severity of conviction, that they must give uncompromisingly the full, unveiled import of divine revelation to those expecting the oracles of God at their hands. If others choose to stand aloof, refusing their aid, and even frowning on what they call our pertinacity, we still must, as we have done, perform this work without their help, and even against their remonstrances. Hence the burthen—or the honor and privilege rather—of this vast and momentous service, which God's providence and not our devising, has thrown upon us.

In India and China, to say nothing of the renewal of this work in Africa, some six or eight of the missionaries are wholly or a principal part of their time engrossed with the work of translating, revising and publishing the Scripture versions required at their hands; and of course their support to just this extent, is made a charge upon the appropriations of the Am. and For. Bible Society. Then besides this, the entire expense of paper, printing, binding and distributing these versions is also sustained by us. These expenses of course vary considerably from year to year; and by the wide door now opening in Burmah as well as among the Karens and Peguans, the prospects are that a very largely increased demand upon this department must immediately be met.

As we look over the appropriations from our treasury of past years, amounting in the aggregate to $262,833 for the foreign work alone, we ought to be greatly encouraged. When, moreover, we regard the large increase of late in these operations, the view is still more cheering. In 1848, before any note of schism and dissonance in our ranks had been sounded, the entire foreign appropriations of the year amounted to only $10,130, or adding in the two previous years the whole sum was but $26,380. They have since so rapidly increased that for the last three years they have reached to nearly $68,000. And why should they not go on to increase in a similar ratio for years to come? The demand warrants it, and the means which a favoring providence has put into the hands of those among us, who desire, we would fain hope, to be faithful stewards for God, is amply sufficient to meet such a requisition.

The following list comprises the appropriations of the year just closed, for the various portions of the foreign field:

Through the Baptist Missionary Union we have devoted—

For revising and printing the Karen Bible.....	$3,000 00
For translating, printing and distributing Chinese Scriptures.....	3,500 00
For the purchase and distribution of Telugoo Scriptures.....	1,000 00
For translating, printing and distributing Assamese Scriptures.....	1,500 00
For distribution of Burmese Scriptures.....	500 00
For Scripture distribution in Northern France.....	500 00
For Scripture distribution by the Missionaries of the Union in Germany.....	500 00
	10,500 00
For Scripture distribution and evangelizing purposes through Rev. J. G. Oncken in Germany, Denmark, and adjacent places.....	$3,371 00
For Scripture distribution in Southern France, through Dr. Devan.....	80 00
For Scripture publication and distribution in Orissa, through Dr. Sutton.....	1,000 00
For Italian Scriptures, through Rev. O. Winslow, D.D., of England.....	245 00
For support of a German colporteur in Canada West.....	176 00
For Chinese Scripture distribution in Canton.....	500 00
For publication and distribution of Bengali and Sanscrit Scriptures, through the Calcutta Bap. Missionaries.....	1,500 00
Additional to Rev. J. G. Oncken for Germany.....	1,000 00
Total.....	$23,372 00

A small portion of two of the above items had not been actually paid when this report was written, but will be, probably, before it goes to press.

A brief review of the progress and present state of the Biblical operations connected with the principal of the above grants, will here be presented, furnishing the latest information possible.

THE KAREN BIBLE

Is now rapidly approaching completion, having been nearly all printed at the last advices. How mercifully God has dealt with the mission, in allowing the translator, bro. Mason, and the printer, bro. Bennet, so nearly to complete this great and most important work. The latter seems to be tasking his diligence and enterprise to render the printed forms of the language perfect as possible; while the former, whose extensive, varied and exact biblical scholarship is fully attested, has brought all the stores of his acquisition to bear upon the perfecting of this life-labor to which he has so long devoted himself. From a conviction that scholars especially, and indeed all classes among who feel an interest in such subjects, need to be much more fully acquainted with the difficulties in the way of what is so flippantly claimed "a perfect translation of the Bible," we give nearly entire an interesting letter just received from bro. Mason, addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

LETTER FROM BROTHER MASON.

NOMMAGON, DEC. 22, 1852.

MY DEAR BROTHER,—Your kind letter of June 1st was received a month ago, and lest by waiting till I have something to say, as I did when you wrote me several years ago, and so never write, I will reply at once; excusing the barrenness of my epistle by the barrenness of my circumstances, living as I do on a barren sand, a mile from the nearest inhabitant, in a bungalow more like a caravansary than a house, surrounded by piles of books and proof-sheets, like a wandering pedlar in the midst of his wares. Still I am made aware at intervals that I am not quite cut off from the world. Some weeks ago a priest in the yellow cloth, with the village doctor and two or three pious men, constantly counting their beads to prevent their minds from being distracted by external objects, and a numerous train of youths from a monastery a few miles distant made me a visit. The priest and all his followers sat down, and listened half an hour while I talked to them and answered their pertinent questions. The priest urged me strongly to give him a Bible, alleging that he wished to see the whole of our system. Though we are not in the habit of giving away whole Bibles, yet as he voluntarily promised to read it and to consider its contents, and as he said there were seven other priests in the Kyoung where he resides, I thought it best to comply with his request, for it is not often that the Bible can find a welcome reception in a Buddhist monastery. Subsequently a fisherman that I met one evening, asked me for the entire Bible, when I spoke with him on the subject of religion. Small books, he said, he had seen, but never a large one. I could not, however, venture to promise him one—though he called at the house next day and renewed his request—because it has not been the habit of missionaries to give away the entire Bible. When one of my Karen copyists obtained a copy he paid two rupees for it. Still I do not feel quite satisfied to refuse a Bible to a heathen when he earnestly asks for one. What ought I to do in such cases? What would you do in my circumstances? There is no great difficulty in giving away Bibles, but to make the distribution of the Scriptures valuable and effective, the living teacher should accompany and follow it, wherever the people are destitute of religious knowledge. The written Word does not bring with it to the fireside of the heathen the same hallowed associations, and communicate the same religious ideas that the English Bible does to one educated in an enlightened Christian land. This is in a measure understood, but some seem to suppose that the reason is, some way or other, in the imperfection of the translations, and new versions have been made till, as in the case of the Malays, seven versions have been printed; and yet the difficulty remains, and the first version printed at Serampore is pronounced the best. Dr. Malcom saw the mistake. "The necessity of using new terms, though embarrassing in oral communication, is much more so in writing. In speaking, explanations may be made; sentences may be uttered in half a dozen different ways and truth effectually imparted." Yet the missionaries to the Malays have done little in "the way of preaching." The consequences are that none are converted; and everywhere, in proportion as there is a lack of preaching, there is a lack of conversions.

Unless a translation is turned to a paraphrase, there are many important words in the Bible which must be rendered literally, though used in a tropical signification by the sacred writers, wholly unknown to the languages of heathen nations. Flesh and spirit, life and death, life and glory, are a few that now occur to me. Take of these, for instance, 504-5. All the missionaries with whom I have conversed on the subject, if I recollect right, prefer a verbal rendering; and thus Rom. viii. 4, will read in any language as in English: "Who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit." A man educated among evangelical Christians, who has been taught the doctrines of the Bible from his mother's lap, who has read Luther's version, or the English translation, from his infancy, will find no difficulty in understanding the passage; but I will venture to affirm that no heathen, and no recent convert from heathenism, will, uninstructed, derive any correct idea whatever from the passage.

Another class of words which lie at the foundation of Christian knowledge have to be rendered in the vernaculars by terms that correspond only generically to the words of the originals. and their specific use in the Scriptures has to be taught by the living teacher. These are illustrated by the discussions that have been going on in China in relation to the proper word in Chinese for God. The first Romish Missionaries to China adopted, I believe, for God, Shang ti. But others followed who were dissatisfied with the word, and after long discussions, the Pope decided that the proper word was F'ien chu.

When Protestant Missionaries entered China, and when Marshman made his version at Serampore, another word was adopted—Shin. This word was used by Morrison and Milne, but when a new generation of missionaries entered China it was voted down; and Shang ti met with almost universal approbation. It was used by Medhurst and Gutzlaff in their translations; and Bishop Boone says: "This way of rendering θεος, was concurred in by nearly all the missionaries, by the writer among the number." A few more short years sufficed to produce another change, when Shang ti was as universally rejected as it had been adopted; and the majority went back to the Shin of Morrison, Milne, and Marshman; while a minority brought forward a new word that no one had heretofore advocated—Ti.

In all the discussions it is unanimously admitted that none of the words denote the true God, or suggest to the mind of the reader the Eternal God, the Creator of the universe, and infinite in power, wisdom, justice, holiness, and compassion; as the word God does to an English reader. Whatever word becomes the standard, it only forms a starting point from which to teach the knowledge of God.

The Chinese is not a solitary case, though one that has produced the most discussion. When I first came to India the Principal of Bishop's College was printing a pamphlet on the proper rendering of various theological terms into Sanskrit, in which different terms for God were brought forward, and their merits discussed; but I believe the missionaries have settled down unanimously in the opinion that Eshawara is the proper word to use in Sanskrit and the languages derived from it; for I find it in the Bengali Bible as well as in the Sanskrit, and the corresponding Pali name Essara is also used in the Pali version of the New Testament made in Ceylon. That the word must be full of unholy associations in the mind of a Hindu is sufficiently clear from its definition in the Dictionaries, where it is said to be "applied to all the different divinities, but mostly designates Siva." There has never been any question, so far as I am aware, about the propriety of the term usually used in Burman—Puyathakken. It was used in a Burmese tract printed at Rome in 1784; and has been adopted by all Protestant Missionaries as well as Catholics. Still the word being constantly applied to Gaudama, the reader or hearer cannot understand the character of the God we speak of, only by instruction.

Not long ago I fell into conversation with a fisherman on the coast who had read some of our tracts; and I found that one difficulty in his mind was that he could not understand how God should be in koungen, the Burman word for heaven, and how Christians should regard that as a place of great happiness. The word is understood by a Burman, as defined in Judson's Dictionary, "the expanse of heaven; any vacant expanse, whether above or below." To the mind of a Burman it is a vacuum, "the desert air;" and every thing that Christians predicate of heaven he has to learn from the Christian teacher; who has to change the wilderness into the paradise of God. The Sanskrit version has akasha for heaven in some places, a word of precisely the same signification as the one used in Burman. Occasionally ananolala, "a district, province," is added, as bung, "a mansion," is added in Burmese; but often a different word—swarga—is used, which denotes the heavens of the Hindu gods; and though associated in the mind of a Hindu with the greatest happiness, yet that happiness is all of an impure nature; and the ideas he obtains on first reading the word in the Bible have to be corrected by the teacher at the expense of as much labor as in the case of the other word, where new ideas have to be imparted. The Pali version of the New Testament, made in Ceylon, uses sagga, which is the same word as the Sanskrit swarga, with the regular differences of dialect. The corresponding Burmese term might have been used in the Burman version with equal propriety, but I think the one we have much better; though I doubt not but our brethren in Bengal have good reasons for adopting the two in their versions.

Had natpyee, the corresponding word to swarga, been used in Burman, it would have called forth more opposition than manat has, the word for Satan. The present officers of government in the Tenasserim provinces object so strongly to this word that the Commissioner has requested Mr. Stevens to erase it wherever it occurs in his "Ancient History," in all the copies to be used in the government schools. The objections raised are based on the usage of the word being very different from the Biblical usage of the original word, which Dr. Judson knew better than the objectors before he adopted it. Though differing in many particulars, yet that the general character of manat corresponds to the character of Satan, we have the best of evidence—that of the Buddhists themselves. Fahian, the Chinese Buddhist pilgrim, who travelled through India at the close of the fourth century, says, in his Journal, referring to this manat, when he tempted Gaudama: "Then the king of the demons sent three lovely damsels, who came from the North to tempt him, and himself also came with the same purpose. The Phou-sa [i. e. Gaudama] struck the ground with his toes; the crew of the demons recoiled, and were dispersed, and the girls were transformed into old women." In another place, I noted while reading the book, Fahian calls him "the king of the demons," and represents him as exercising an evil influence on the mind of one of Gaudama's disciples, which accords exactly with the Biblical representations of Satan, and where they differ the living teacher must apply the correction. There is certainly no other word in Burman less objectionable. The Sanskrit version has in some places prataraka, which signifies a cheat or deceiver; but in other passages shayatana is found, which is I judge, the word. शैतन (Satan) transferred through the Arabic, where it is written Sheytan. If the word must be transferred, it is an advantage to give it in the Arabic form; because Persian having been the language of the courts of law for many centuries in Hindustan, it is much studied by the upper classes, and the word for Satan in Persian is the same as in Arabic; as may be seen on turning to Henry Martyn's version of the New Testament, where Sheytan is used. Mr. Clough, the translator of the Pali version appears to have followed the Sanskrit, for he uses Sayatana; but the Pali form of the word used in Burman, Mara, would, in my judgment, have been much better. It could not, however, be used in translations for the Braminical Hindus, though Mara is a Hindu personage, and the name Sanskrit; yet in the Braminical system he does not figure in the same scenes nor perform the same offices that he does in Buddhist mythology. He is the same being as Kama, the god of love, in the Hindu Pantheon.

To one or other of these two classes may be referred nearly all the words which obscure the Christian system in the mind of an idolater when he reads the Bible in his own tongue. Many portions may be misapprehended from other causes, but these terms lie at the basis of the doctrines we teach, and form the framework of the edifice we are endeavoring to erect among the nations. Secondary difficulties may be surmounted by improved versions; but these primary ones, no translator, be he ever so acute, laborious, and erudite, can control. How then shall these obstacles be met so that the tidings of salvation may reach the hearts of these heathen? I answer by the COLPORTEUR. This is the agency now demanded throughout Extra Gangetic India. Where appear the most interesting results of Bible distribution, in Burmah or Hindustan? I need not answer where. Western India is already moved to its centre. The educated classes among the heathen that still adhere to Hinduism, are laying plans to counteract the effects of missionary labors; and in a public document that they have recently issued they state: "There is scarcely an educated Hindu in the country but has obtained a knowledge of Christianity, and if something is not done to arrest the progress of the system, Hinduism will be abandoned." This has not been accomplished without effort. Hundreds and hundreds of missionaries have been preaching and expounding the Word of God in the market places, and by the wayside, and from house to house, for half a century. Like causes produce like effects; give us the same agency in Burmah and Siam, and, with the blessing of God, you will hear like reports. It is not colleges, or orphan houses, or homes for the friendless that we need. Braminism, Buddhism, Islamism and Popery must be met by the living teacher with the Bible in his hand. And why should not the Bible Society send out Colporteurs to Burmah and Siam? Why not send out a few devoted young men for a limited period?—men who should devote themselves exclusively to distributing and expounding the Word of God.

Affectionately yours,

H. MASON.

THE CHINESE VERSION

Of the New Testament, under the joint labors of brethren Goddard and Dean, is rapidly approaching completion; and as we have repeatedly had occasion to remark, seems to give more satisfaction to all classes, than any other in that language. The advantages of these beloved brethren have been great, and they seem to have turned them to the best account. The demands for the portions of the work as they are printed off are encouragingly large, and the discrimination with which, in many cases the sacred books seem to be read, gives cheering indications of the blessed results at which we aim.

Some of the Old Testament has also been completed and published. Brother Dean has prepared several of the books of the Pentateuch with extensive and full explanatory notes. By our request a portion of these have been translated and sent to us for examination. They seem judicious, and will no doubt be hailed by the sincere inquirers, as well as by the disciples, with great delight, and used with abundant profit.

The rigid fidelity with which as a translator, he adheres to the determination to give in the text no paraphrase, but a simple version, is indicated in the following sentences, accompanying some sheets of one of the gospels, in Chinese, where the necessity of slight explanatory notes is accounted for.

"I have supposed that if we render the Chinese expression as specific as it is in the Greek text, as translators our work is done, and the rest belongs to the expositor, and should find a place in the margin, or be left for the oral teacher. By this principle I have been guided, and thus have thrown into marginal readings, or explanatory notes, what others have incorporated with the text. So, in rendering Matt. 25 : 15, καὶ ὃ μὲν ἔδωκε πέντε τάλαντα, ὃ δὲ δύο. ὃ δὲ ἓν, instead of reading "He gave to one 5000 ounces of silver, to another 2000, and to another 1000," I have used τάλαντα, and explained it in the margin. So with coins and weights and measures generally, which often for accuracy would require fractional parts to meet the meaning of the original, which would be inconvenient in the text, but which may be explained in a note.

"I shall ever gratefully receive any suggestions you may give on these or other points connected with translations.

Yours,

"W. DEAN."

The immensity of the numbers who can read the same printed version, and a considerable proportion of whom can understand it, so as to gather from it a knowledge of the way of life, renders this work one of moral sublimity and God-like benevolence which a finite understanding is inadequate fully to appreciate.

THE TELOGOO SCRIPTURES

Are circulated with a generous hand wherever opportunities for this purpose can be secured. One of the assistants last year gave about 2500 copies of the gospels, or entire New Testaments; the schools are increasing and are well supplied. A marked indication of the speedy prevalence and triumph of the truth, in this way diffused, is clearly perceptible.

IN ASSAM,

Where the fourth edition of the New Testament, very thoroughly and carefully revised, is now ready for the press, and where some of the most important portions of the Old Testament, also, are nearly ready, the missionaries and assistants are now engaging more actively and widely in Scripture distribution than at any previous period, and our sacred books appear to meet with a reception among the people which affords ample encouragement.

IN BURMAH,

The small sum this year required by the Miss. Union is accounted for, in part at least, by the considerable balance on hand at the beginning of the year, from former appropriations which we had made. The disturbing influence of the war was also a reason why less was this year attempted. Our attentive correspondent, T. S. Ranney, the capable and efficient superintendent of the Mission press, has sent us a very full tabular statement of what has been accomplished there the year past, which it will gratify the friends and supporters of this Society to see here copied, so far as Biblical printing and issues are concerned.

If to the above we add the amount of issues in former years, as nearly as can be ascertained, viz.: Scriptures, 43,178 Volumes containing 10,679,830 Pages; Parts of Scriptures, 109,634 Volumes, containing 5,925,540 Pages, nearly the whole of which has been paid for by the appropriations from the Treasury of the American and Foreign Bible Society, the magnitude of this enterprise is in some degree manifest.

The following remarks were appended to this statement :

Issues.—Though the number of pages distributed during the year above reported, is not much less than during the previous year, yet the work of distribution has been hindered by the occurrence of the war, which commenced early in the year, after which but little intercourse could be held with the natives in the interior, and tract distribution and colporteurage were thereafter mainly confined to the large towns near to the sea. This remark, however, does not apply to the Provinces of Tavoy and Mergui, nor to Arracan, except upon her southern border, as those Provinces are far removed from the scenes of hostility, though the excitements incident to the war, have unfitted all, more or less, for a right and profitable reception of religious truth.

Previous to the war, and after a fierce opposition from the Viceroy of Rangoon had been overcome, a few boxes of books were passed through the custom-house at Rangoon, and they had begun to be distributed, though with great carefulness, as tract distribution had been prohibited by the Viceroy. After the blockade of Rangoon, most of these books unfortunately fell into the hands of the Burmese army, and were destroyed. The brethren connected with the Mission left Rangoon in January and returned in May, since which time the work of distributing books has recommenced. The town of Bassein, situated on the northernmost branch of the Irrawaddy, about one hundred miles from the sea, in close vicinity with numerous Karen Churches, has also been made a Mission Station, from which place, and Rangoon, hereafter, as doubtless from other stations in what is now called Burmah Proper, an immense number of scriptures and tracts will go out into regions hitherto either entirely unopened to mission laborers, or impeded by many obstructions.

It will be seen by the record above, that the current edition of several books and tracts is nearly exhausted, among which is the Burmese New Testament. New editions are demanded, and will be printed as soon as possible—the New Testament, probably, with marginal references.

In the work of evangelizing Burmah, nearly 60,000,000 of pages have issued from one printing house alone. That this immense issue has not been in vain, thousands of converts to Christianity have joyfully testified—and the testimony of God in regard to his own truth remaineth—“IT SHALL NOT RETURN UNTO ME VOID.”

The leading article in our Periodical Paper for October last contained the solemn appeal of our first missionary, Dr. Judson, for placing one entire copy of the Burman Bible in every town and village throughout Burmah and Arracan as the least we could do for Burmah, and declaring that such a plan would tend more effectually than any other to fill the country with the knowledge of divine truth. The pertinent illustrations and arguments by which this appeal was enforced for hanging up one golden lamp in every village in that dark land have produced a wide and favorable impression throughout most of our churches and contributors. Our Board have solicited of the Missionary Union their approbation in carrying into as full effect as possible this proposition, pledging ourselves to defray the entire expense of it. It has been submitted by the Union to the consideration of the convocation of the Missionaries, and the deputation sent to meet them, which was expected to be held at Maulmain early the last month. Should this proposition be favorably regarded and acted on, a new incentive would be furnished to many of our friends promptly to furnish the cost of hanging up one of these golden lamps.

The high and holy inducements now appropriately furnished us to engage with becoming zeal in giving to Burmah, recently thrown open to our efforts, the oracles of God, are of a character well adapted to produce profound and permanent impressions throughout our entire constituency. Judson, and Mason, and Haswell, and Brayton, have toiled long in hope, cheered by the glimmering expectation that a time would come, when a wide and open field would be ready in which to scatter the blessed seed they were preparing to be sown. Some of them have gone to their rest and their reward on high; but of the departed, and of those who still remain, the Savior's words are literally true: “Other men have labored and ye have entered into their labors." Long as the Burman, the Karen, the Peguan, shall be blessed with the Sacred Scriptures, will the fragrant memorial of what these early translators have accomplished, be held in grateful and hallowed remembrance; while it is ours, joining our active efforts and contributions to the accomplishment of what they have so nobly begun, to share with those who, in this gospel harvest, whether as sowers or reapers, are gathering FRUIT UNTO LIFE ETERNAL!

IN ORISSA,

The communications of Dr. Sutton, portions of which have from time to time appeared in our Periodical Papers, show clearly the success which attends the efforts for Scripture distribution. By the death of the senior missionary, Mr. Lacey, and the temporary absence on a voyage to England of Mr. Bulkley, the Secretary, unusual cares are thrown on Dr. Sutton, which in a degree confine him more closely; yet by the following extract from his letter, dated Cuttack, Feb. 1st, 1853, the progress then making in the good work is clearly indicated.

LETTER FROM DR. SUTTON.

"I need scarcely assure you that, although I am personally unable to do all I contemplated in the work, my desires to see it effectually accomplished have suffered no diminution. If possible, I view it with greater interest, and a more thorough conviction of its vast importance. Changes in our mission and loss of strength have interfered with our itinerancy to some extent; still, we have not neglected the work. The great festival at Jugurnath was attended by several of the brethren, native and European; another party went in a different direction to a branch festival, on both of which occasions, numbers of copies of portions of the Sacred Scriptures were put into circulation.

"In August and September I was about a month travelling along the rivers in our neighborhood, with especial reference to the circulation of the Scriptures. During this season of the year, the channels of numerous streams, which present mere belts of sand in the hot months, are filled to overflowing, and I determined, though at some risk, to make an experimental tour by boat. I accordingly fitted up a flat-bottomed boat, built a house upon it, with leaf hurdles and a thatched roof, and first started for about a week. In this trip, accompanied by a native assistant, we went a considerable distance along the Katjures, Soroah and Deb rivers to the south-east of Cuttack. We visited most of the villages on the banks of these streams, leaving gospel tracts, and occasionally the New Testament or Gospel Harmony. Finding our plans succeed, we resolved on a longer trip to the north and north-east, and accordingly fitted up another boat, to accommodate four native brethren, and took our journey along the Beroopa, Gungotee, Brahmanee and Kelooa rivers. We visited the villages on both banks of these streams, and attended a number of markets scattered throughout the whole of our tract. We thus were enabled to put into extensive circulation large numbers of Gospels, copies of the Acts, Psalms, New Testaments and Gospel Harmony. We endured some fatigue and exposure; but, on a review of the journey, I esteem it one of the most useful I have been permitted to undertake.

"In November we all journeyed to Berhampore for our annual conference. This station is about 120 miles south of Cuttack. During our session a man was baptized whose case well illustrates the usefulness of these journeys and of Scripture distribution. About three or four years ago the Southern brethren, in coming to conference, distributed a number of Gospels in the neighborhood of the Chilka lake. This man obtained, through the medium of another person, the Gospel by John. He was then a dark idolater, but the reading of this book somewhat enlightened his mind. He then begged of a neighbor a volume of our practical tracts, which enabled him to read his book with greater profit. While his mind was thus exercised the cholera visited his village and many died. His own wife was attacked, but instead of yielding to the remonstrances of his neighbors to use heathen remedies and propitiate the gods, he replied that that gracious Lord who gave back to Mary and Martha their deceased brother, could save his wife, and in Him he would trust. He did so, and his wife recovered. He had never seen a missionary nor a Christian; but soon after, two native brethren, being in his vicinity, heard of him and found him out. They introduced him to Mr. Stebbins, who gave him suitable advice. He had many difficulties to encounter, but he struggled on, and while we were at conference broke away from his home, friends and caste, and travelled to Berhampore—some fifty miles. The detail of his experience was most interesting and satisfactory, and none could forbid water that he should be baptized. Details of his case may be forwarded hereafter. He is now deprived of wife, children and property: how far he will obtain redress remains to be decided. He is by profession a cloth weaver.

"At the above-named conference it was agreed to print 5000 copies of the Gospel by Mark, if funds allowed.

"Also, a small selection of the poetical portions of Scripture, to be printed in Sanscrit and Orissa on opposite pages. The edition to consist of 2000 copies, to be edited by brethren Sutton and Buckley.

"I have thought it right to make a small attempt at colportage in an adjoining district. Having a native brother who promised fair for usefulness, though not a regular preacher, I felt it right to employ him on a small salary of two dollars a month, to perambulate the Ashgur rariary, in which our flourishing Choga church is situated. It was the rainy season, and he could not work so well as in the dry weather; nevertheless, I thought him worth his pay. He also accompanied me on the before-mentioned journey, and is now out to the eastward of Cuttack with Mr. Stubbins. Besides his own pay, there will be a little extra for a Cooley to assist in carrying his books, cooking utensils, bedding, &c. I am anxious to try the plan fully, and endeavor to ascertain how far it may be desirable to adopt and extend it, and whether separately or in connection with general missionary labors.

"Here I must close for to-day. When our cold season labors are completed, I will glean whatever of interest I can find and write again. Meantime, with my warmest Christian remembrance, believe me yours, for Jesus' sake,

A. SUTTON.

"P. S.—From the 9th to 14th of last month, bro Stubbins and myself were engaged in a trip to a large festival at Boideswar, 40 miles up the Mahanuddee. We had a splendid opportunity of sending a good many books and tracts into the hill districts, as well as of preaching the Gospel to a crowd of hearers. I expect to join at another festival to the eastward about the 8th inst."

IN GERMANY

And contiguous portions of Europe, the good work of Bible publication and distribution, under the care of our esteemed bro. Oncken and his score of faithful colporteurs, has been continued with happy success, and on a large scale. As he is expected to be personally present with us at this anniversary, to portray the work and plead for its continuance, we may safely refrain from occupying our pages with a written statement of what has been suffered by persecution and interference of various kinds, which these beloved brethren have been called to endure; or what has been achieved, in spreading widely this year and the last, more than 100,000 copies of the Divine Word.

The above-mentioned expectation was frustrated by the appalling railroad accident, by which nearly fifty souls were in a moment hurried into eternity. Others suffered severely, of which number bro. Oncken was one. From his bed of pain he addressed the following letter to the Society.

LETTER FROM BROTHER ONCKEN.

To the Members and Directors of the American and Foreign Bible Society, assembled at Albany, May 16, 1853:

MUCH ESTEEMED AND BELOVED BRETHREN IN OUR COMMON SAVIOR THE LORD JESUS CHRIST.—The long cherished hope that, in the good providence of our Heavenly Father, I might be permitted to visit the shores of this free and highly favored country, and thus have an opportunity of being present at an Anniversary of your excellent Society, and then to pour out the grateful feeling of my heart to you for the valuable and efficient aid rendered to the German Mission, was on the point of being realized, when the awful catastrophe took place, on the 6th inst., at the place from which I now address you, and in which I was a sufferer. The effects of the injury which I then sustained will not permit me to appear in your assembly at the ensuing Anniversary. But it is the Lord who has chastened me. He is too wise to err and too good to be unkind; and though my hopes with reference to meeting with you are disappointed, he enables me to say, "Thy will be done." I have, indeed abundant cause for gratitude; for, whilst death was reigning all around me, terminating the lives of many of my fellow travellers, the good hand of the Lord was over me for my protection, and my life was mercifully spared. Help me to adore the signal interposition of God in rescuing me. Help me by your prayers, that the great deliverance which I have received may accomplish that for which it was sent, and that I may devote myself more unreservedly to the work in which I am permitted to be engaged. I feel still too weak to add much more, and I would now, only in a few words, present to the Board and all the friends of the Society, the warmest and most grateful thanks for what you have done and are still doing for Germany, in the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom.

More than thirty thousand copies of the Holy Scriptures have, the last year, been circulated among Papists, and Protestants, and Jews, alike destitute of a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ, at your expense. Between fifteen and twenty Bible Colporteurs, supported by your liberality, have, along with the circulation of the Scriptures, testified verbally and by the circulation of millions of religious tracts, that salvation is of grace, through faith, in the person and work of the Lord Jesus Christ. Millions, perishing for lack of knowledge, have thus been pointed to the only Mediator between God and man. Nor have these efforts been in vain. God has been faithful to his promise; his Word has not returned void; and many of our beloved brethren and sisters now constituting our churches, are blessing God, and will through all eternity bless him, for the labors of your Society on the continent of Europe.

But, beloved brethren, permit me to add that, whilst acknowledging your love and labor for my country in the past, your work is not yet completed. The Mission is extending on every hand, and God continues to bless our efforts in the conversion of many sinners and the increase of our churches. But what is a mission without the Bible! There may be other missions without the Bible. There can be no Baptist missions without the Bible. It is the Mission of the Bible; and we look to you with confidence to fill up this great and important want of our mission, in Germany and the adjacent countries.

I will speak freely to you, for I speak in the name of my Master. We expect, we hope, we plead, and we pray you, in the name and for the sake of our exalted Lord, to give us annually ten thousand dollars. We must do with less, if we cannot obtain that amount, but that is the sum required, if the opportunities now presented to circulate the Scriptures are to be properly improved, and the urgent demands for an increase of the number of Colporteurs are to be responded to.

J. G. ORCKER.

NORWALK, Conn., 14th May, 1853.

[We have marked for insertion here, if room can possibly be found for them, the Journals of two of the twenty Colporteurs in our employ—one for a quarter of the year and the other for a month. As specimens of the usefulness of such labors, they will be interesting. Several of these men are now supported, either by an individual contributor furnishing from 100 to 150 dollars for each; or, by a Bible-class or Sunday school paying the requisite amount. In all such cases, if desired, we send the manuscript Journal of the Colporteur, when received, to the individual, or the class, or school sustaining him. These journals, we know, are thus read with great interest and profit.]

JOURNAL OF — EHLERT, BIBLE COLPORTEUR AT ELBING.

FROM JULY 1 TO OCTOBER 1, 1852.

July 1st to 10th.—I sold 12 Bibles and 10 Testaments. On the 11th, although still weak from the effects of a recent illness, I was able to hold a meeting. The schoolmaster, Grabouaky, was present; he called upon me the following day and bought a copy of our "Confession of Faith." He is diligently searching the Scriptures, and takes much interest in the circulation of our Bibles in his own circle of acquaintances.

13th.—Received Polish tracts from Allenstein; and in consequence of a letter received from the lady of the Consul-General, Von Place, sent her 1000 copies. In the same letter this lady inquires whether I can read Polish fluently, as she is anxious to have the Gospel made known to the Flusz. Polen, (Poles who live entirely on the river in barges,) on the plan of the Irish Scripture-readers, and offers a salary of fifteen dollars monthly, provided I will undertake to act as her missionary; she at the same time enjoins upon me to abstain from every thing sectarian in my instructions, and from trying to make proselytes for the Baptists. She concludes by requesting me to confer on the subject with Rev. Mr. Karman, and to send her an early reply. In answer to this letter, and to the points especially dwelt upon, I dispatched the following:—

MADAM,—In reply to your favor of — I beg to refer especially to the four conditions you state as essential to my acceptance of the engagement in question.

1st. With regard to my knowledge of Polish, I must say I can speak it better than read it; yet I have had sufficient instruction in the language to be able to read the Scriptures in Polish aloud.

2nd. Having experienced the blessedness of faith in Jesus Christ in proclaiming the Gospel to sinners, it is my duty, not to point to the Son of God alone, who taketh away the sins of the world; nor baptism, or the union of Christians, as they are described to us in those with whom I have to do are seeking the truth and have an interest in it.

3rd. I do not consider the Apocrypha to be divinely inspired writings, copies of the Scriptures where they are omitted. I inclose several of your kind perusal.

4th. I am quite willing to keep a journal for your inspection. Should his unworthy servant, am to occupy the place offered, I must be agent of the American and Foreign Bible Society, Mr. J. G. Oncken station I now occupy.

A very kind letter soon reached me from this lady, in which she stating my views, but regretting that difficulties had occurred with the Poles at Danzig, that would render it necessary for her to absent herself, however, requests a new supply of Polish tracts, and I have sent her 15th and 16th.

15th and 16th.—Visited families with Brother Bernicke, but sold none.

19th.—Visited thirteen families and sold two Bibles. A man to whom I suppose I have never been to school that you wish me to buy a my Bible long ago." I asked him whether he remembered that David the Bible that it was "a lamp unto his feet and a light unto his way?" you," I continued, "cannot make the Word of God a lamp and a light possess it." The man was silent, but his wife, bursting into tears, offered a copy, which he at length did, giving it to her with the words, "Take your own way; but mind me, read the book to yourself. I have nothing to say rather from pique at having been over-persuaded in my previous last words to me when I left were: "You must owe me no ill will be very happy to see you again."

20th.—Distributed tracts, and had many opportunities for telling sinners of the Gospel.

21st.—Sold one Testament. Some fishermen refused to buy, saying told them that the Word of God would teach them how to become Christians; that bought the New Testament.

22nd.—Visited families who have been awakened by reading the Bible conversations with them, and trust that He who has begun the good work on to perfection. On my return home, I found there three commissaries have a house-searching, as I was supposed to harbor proscribed pamphlets; was therefore ransacked, but the books in question not being found any farther charge against me.

23rd.—Visited the ships on the Elbing river, and sold seven Bibles. A member of our church, was also in the harbor; he received me very kindly, my Bibles to his crew, with whom I had a long and interesting conversation, some men on a neighboring vessel, who had heard part of what I said; this I did, and felt much pleasure in reading and explaining the Bible to men, for they received the word gladly, and it will, I trust, take no long hour passed away in this little circle, and I was about to leave, when I overheard all in the cabin, rushed up the hatchway like a lion, furious trying to make his men crazy. Assisted by the sailors, I, however, safely seated in the boat, left him raging and swearing on the deck, and returned to my quarters.

25th.—Accompanied by my wife, I to-day traveled to Forstnan, where the Word of God. There are several sisters here, who well deserve to be with one of these we lodged. These friends are very zealous in distributing tracts in this place, and have, by so doing, as it were, prepared the way for the gospel. On the 26th I held a meeting here, and was surprised at the number of my hearers. At the close of the meeting, I found, in conversing with them, were well acquainted with the Scriptures, which have been introduced by the sisters. From Forstnan we proceeded, on the 27th, to Neulang, where we persons, and received many invitations soon to return. When we left Forstnan, my mate of mine accompanied us a part of the way, while I, at his request, remained for conversion.

28th.—A woman to whom I had some time ago given tracts, called thank me for the little books which had made her "so unhappy and then so happy." Sold, besides, three Bibles and one Testament.

37th.—Received a summons to appear at the police office, for trying to persuade the people to leave the church and to join our community. The president of police inquired whether I possessed a certificate as a pedlar of Bibles. I replied: "No; because the government does not grant certificates of permission to sell Bibles; but I have, in accordance with an injunction received, united myself with the clergymen in this district who take a part in Bible circulation, and we now act together." My answers were put down.

38th.—Engaged in packing up and sending off bales of Bibles to different parts of Polish Prussia. I have lately received orders from places where, as far as I know, we have no connexions; but this proves that the Lord can find an entrance for his word "without our aid."

29th.—Went from house to house through several streets, and met with various receptions. My best advocates are generally the little children, who, pleased with the gay covers and pretty pictures of the tracts I give them, run to their mother and say, "Here is such a kind man, do let him come in," while my experience makes true the saying: "The way to a mother's heart is through her child," for I am frequently admitted for the children's sake, where otherwise I might be sent away.

30th.—Continued my peregrinations in the city, and was permitted in many a splendid drawing-room and rusty garret to make known the glad tidings of salvation; but everywhere I experienced that the carnal mind is at enmity with God, and that no station is exempt from what are termed "hindrances" to becoming a Christian. The rich lay the blame of their sin on their wealth, and the poor on their poverty; but amongst both. I rejoice to say, I met with some instances where grace had triumphed over innate corruptions and outward hindrances. A lady, who sent for me into the room where she was sitting, entered into conversation with me with regard to my labors, and besides expressing much interest in my work, gave me a donation for the Bible Society; she also took several copies of Bibles, and ordered more, which she intends to give away with clothing for the poor when winter approaches. She appeared to be a true Christian, and desirous of the spread of the gospel.

August 1st.—Brother Riedel and I distributed tracts in the Roman Catholic district, Geismersede, where the people are poor and ignorant. A poor woman, who told us that her husband had been recently killed by an accident, was anxious to buy a Testament, and as she had no money Brother R. and I gave her one between us. We called on a man who has long professed to love the Lord, but when we urge him publicly to declare his faith in Christ, he only replies: "The time has not yet come;" by which he means, as I to-day discovered, that the circumstances are not yet favorable. We told him that he must not expect ever to find outward circumstances favorable to a profession of Christianity, for the Saviour himself says: "Whoso will be my disciple let him take up his cross and follow me."

3rd to 9th.—Sold ten Bibles and eleven testaments, and visited friends who have been attacked by the cholera, which in this season is very prevalent here.

21st.—Went with Brother Bernicke to Rosengarth, where I disposed of several Bibles; and brother B. held a meeting. We were generally well received.

23rd.—Travelled by rail, and distributed tracts among my fellow-travelers.

26th.—Sold thirteen Testaments and one Bible. Applied at the railway-office for permission to sell Bibles at the terminus, but did not obtain it.

29th.—It was my intention to go to Dirshan, but brother L. told me that the road leading there is entirely deserted by travellers who are not obliged to go, as the cholera is raging fearfully at Dirshan. He also told me that there were many inquirers in his native place, Marienberg; I therefore went there, and conversed with these people. On the following day I went, accompanied by brother B., to Dirshan, and we found that the accounts given of the cholera here had not been exaggerated; its presence in the village could be seen and felt everywhere, and a solemn awe took possession of us as we passed through the quiet streets. Our friends here have all suffered from the epidemic, but their lives have been spared, and they were most happy to unite with us in a little service.

31st.—Sold a Bible to a man on the Vistula, who listened to my words with much eagerness; he told me that his wife and children had recently died, but that his comfort was the Word of God. At Kunzendorf, I saw two ladies in deep mourning sitting in a garden; I entered and addressed them, but they would not hear of religion, they said they were melancholy enough without it. Sold three Bibles on the railway; at one of the stations, as I distributed tracts, a number of workmen surrounded me, and begged me to tell them about the Bible, as a gentleman (Brother Bernicke) who passed this way some weeks ago had done. As there was time allowed for dinner at this station, I had time to answer all their questions, to recommend the Bible to them as the best of books, and to sell several copies. When I left the train, Brother Bernicke joined me, and after we had walked several miles across a barren moor, we entered a little inn to take rest. The landlord told us that in the neighboring village death had also made fearful ravages, and we took occasion to point him and his family to the solemnity of eternity. The landlord listened attentively, and would gladly have kept us longer, but we were compelled to proceed.

September 1st.—Received a command from the Danish government to provide myself with a certificate from some Lutheran Home Missionary or Bible Society, empowering me to act as Bible-Colporteur. I applied to the Superintendent Eggers, who received me kindly, but said it was not in his power to do any thing in the matter. Rev. Mr. Faber advised me to apply to the highest quarters for a permission, he promising to use his influence with the Landrath in my favor.

3rd.—Sold two Testaments and one Bible, and collected Missionary contributions, which I forwarded to Hamburg.

7th.—Traveled to Mohrungen, in consequence of a summons received, and sent my friend Horn to offer Bibles to the men working at the railway; there is a great desire for the Word of God among them. Friend H. disposed of seventeen Testaments and seven Bibles; and the workmen expressed a strong wish for a Missionary to come and preach the Gospel to them on the Lord's Day.

On the following Sabbath, I went to the place where the greatest number of workmen are employed, hoping to be able to hold a little service with them, but was disappointed, for the Inspector of the works would not permit them to break off an hour from their labor, although they promised to be doubly diligent afterwards.

9th.—At the request of Rev. Mr. Gehrman, the clergyman of L—, I preached at the Vicarage; and a large number of persons were present, among whom Mrs. Gehrman, the magistrate of the place, &c. At the close of the service I disposed of several Bibles, and the Baroness Schleunitz ordered some to be sent to her house. I was then hospitably entertained by the clergyman and his lady, who expressed much surprise that I could preach, although I had never been either at high school or university. Mr. G. also showed me his church, a pretty Gothic building; in crossing the threshold of the edifice he knelt down and silently prayed, which, as he is a Protestant, rather surprised me.

11th.—The schoolmaster, Grabousky, called upon me to order Bibles, and to converse with me on baptism; my wife, who was present, and who was an old acquaintance of Grabousky, joined the conversation, and never did I hear her so clearly and forcibly avow her faith in Christ, and her delight in the word of God, as on this occasion. How little I expected that in one short day I should be bereft, and a widower! On the following morning my wife awoke with all the symptoms of the fearful disease that has made so many of our hearts and homes desolate;—the same evening she lay stretched before me a corpse. Her loss is much felt by the church here, whom she served like a true Martha; while to me, and all she has left behind her, a bright example of all the virtues of Mary—for she sat at the feet of Jesus and learnt of him.

I must not forget to mention, that when summoned to Mohrungen, I was fined five dollars for preaching there; and the husband of Sister Kleefeld was fined seven dollars for having permitted the meeting to be held at his house. This sum he willingly paid, but I refused to pay my fine, and was remanded to another time.

ENLERT.

JOURNAL OF I. ANDRESEN, AT PINNEBERG, BIBLE COLPORTEUR.

July 17th.—Offered Bibles at an estate near Pinneberg, but met with an unfavorable reception; I was more successful at a neighboring limekiln, where, besides having interesting conversations with some of the men, I disposed of one Bible and several Testaments. Three persons from Lockstadt came to see me; they had bought a Bible when last I was there, and had now walked a distance of many miles, to have some passages of Scripture explained, and to tell me that they had learned to love the Bible, and were seeking the way of salvation.

14th.—Sold one Bible and one Testament at Hoppewand, distributed tracts. The schoolmaster of this place was formerly much opposed to us, but seems gradually to assume a more friendly position towards us.

15th.—Offered Bibles from cottage to cottage at Blankensee, but the people have no hearts for the Word of God; they are only intent on gain, and their avarice is well known to the Hamburgers, whose favorite summer resort is Blankensee. Still, though to our imperfect judgment this village long seemed a hopeless land of labor, the Lord has found entrance there, and a little meeting is held weekly by one of the brethren from Hamburg.

16th.—At Bahrenfeld, where, in calling on the schoolmaster, I met the well-known author, Mr. Wienberg. As soon as the latter perceived my errand, he began, in blasphemous terms, to deny every thing godly, and the Cross was to him folly. I, therefore, endeavored simply to declare the truth to him: but he said, "perhaps I know the Bible better than you do, my good man, and yet I do not believe it. The schoolmaster, a self righteous man, expected to work out his salvation by good deeds, without regeneration, and I found that the Spirit of God had not entered his heart, but that Satan used him as an instrument for evil. His Christianity was quite as dangerous as Wienberg's atheism.

20th.—Went to Halesin and called on the clergyman. He seemed not heartily to enter into the saying, "now is the accepted time," which proved to me that he has not yet experienced the influence of the Holy Spirit on his heart. The organist, Mr. Mein, who was present, spoke not a word; he, too, is blinded by self-righteousness. Woe upon the blind leaders of the blind.* Called upon my former friends, the exciseman and his wife, but our intercourse was not of the most pleasing nature, as they upbraided me for going about the country, disquieting the minds of men; they spoke only of the mercy and goodness of God, and founded the hope of their own salvation and that of others, on them. When I reminded them of the justice of the Almighty, and that he is a "jealous God," they became very angry, and said it was a good thing that they would be judged by God, and not by me.

22nd.—Disposed of two Bibles and one Testament at Syldorf; here all is dead and cold, and spiritual life is nowhere to be met with; the clergyman of the place is a Rationalist, and, besides this, a man who does not make the welfare of his parishioners his concern.

23rd.—Travelled by rail to Altona, and visited the surrounding villages. At Ottensen I called on the vicar, Mr. Fakquardsen, and in a friendly manner asked him why he writes and preaches so much against the Baptists. He appeared a little surprised at the question, but frankly told me that he believed the Church to be the only arbitrator in matters of religion, but that we had taken upon ourselves to overthrow one of the chief pillars of the Establishment, "which, in my estimation," he continued, "is arrogance which ought to be exposed and punished." The vicar also wished to prove from John 3, that baptism conveys regeneration; and after some farther arguments on both sides, I asked him to prove to me from Scripture, that baptism after faith is unscriptural. But the clergyman had now quitted Scripture ground, not to return to it; he quoted the church, the fathers, and the good men of the present day in favor of infant sprinkling, and as I could not admit this authority, we soon separated.

24th.—Visited the villages in Pinneberg. As I am now well known here, the persecutions which at first attended my labors have ceased, and I am well received by many. Conversed with a young schoolmaster, who is a true disciple of the Savior, and endeavors to lead his scholars to Jesus Christ. He has introduced our school Bibles into his school, and now took a fresh supply.

25th.—Went to Elmshorn, where, however, the people were so busily engaged in gathering in the harvest, that I met with very few customers. The chief clergyman of Elmshorn had told one of his parishioners to request me to send him twelve of my Bibles; this I accordingly did, and on the following morning called to receive my payment. The clergyman received me kindly, but soon entered on an argument with me regarding the ordinances; he called all his philosophy to his aid, to draw me off from the Scriptures, but I could not afford to give away my only weapon, and with simple passages of Scripture succeeded in silencing if not convincing my opponent. "I cannot argue with you, he at length said, "you are a layman, but circulate the Scriptures. The Bible is the book for the people." These were his parting words as I left the house.

26th.—Went to Onieckbar and Ellernan. At the latter place I sold two Bibles and two Testaments, and found the people simple and childlike; many of them rejoiced to speak of the Savior, and were diligent readers of the word of God. Called on Mr. Lorenzen, a former colleague of mine, who now owns a large farm at Ellernan. I made known to him the glad tidings of salvation, and reminded him of the day which is approaching for us all. As Lorenzen is occasionally intoxicated, and occasions his wife much anxiety and grief, she now requested me to try and convert him; of course I told her this was not in my power, but that I trusted the Lord would bless the words spoken to her husband. I also took occasion to point her to the Savior, and she bought a Testament with a promise to read it.

August 1st.—Went to Hamburg to give in my accounts to brother Onchen.

2nd.—At Siehvendi, and offered my Bibles to the fishermen at a place called Greenland; distributed many tracts, and sold two Bibles.

3rd.—Visited the Greenlanders, but as they had not caught many fish lately, they could not afford to buy. I therefore distributed tracts among them, and while making known the way of life verbally, had many attentive listeners. At the limekiln, mentioned before, I met with a good reception; the men were highly delighted with the tracts, which they read during their meal times, * (Note of the transl.) Bro. Andresen was formerly a highly respected schoolmaster in a government school, but put out of office on account of becoming a Baptist. He is an able, active and devoted laborer; perhaps, rather "zealous overmuch" in his warfare against state-church systems and their supporters, but, nevertheless, much respected both by friends and opponents, and he frequently succeeds in obtaining a hearing, where a less fearless man would shrink from the encounter.

and were thus, as one of them himself told me, prevented from indulging in much idle and profane talk. I found a great desire for the word of God to day among these people, and notwithstanding their extreme poverty, (for they live almost entirely on peas and barley,) much contentment and happiness.

7th.—At Elmshorn, and the surrounding villages, where, since the opening of the railroad, and consequent influx of visitors, much dissipation has been introduced. Tea-gardens and dance-houses are seen on all sides, and it is difficult anywhere to find an entrance for the word of God; still I met with several encouraging instances where, in spite of outward temptations and allurements, the spark of divine grace had not been entirely extinguished. I was particularly pleased with a girl at a public house, who, when I showed her a Bible, exclaimed, "My mother's book! Oh how this reminds me of my childhood!" It appeared that she had been religiously educated by a pious mother, but that in the vortex of the world, early impressions had been effaced, and I therefore endeavoured to take advantage of her present emotion, by speaking of the vanity of every thing earthly, and the lasting pleasures which Christianity affords. I left her not without a hope that my words had made an impression on her mind, and praying that the Lord would add a blessing.

11th.—At Hackelshorn I could sell no Bibles, and met with little encouragement of any kind.

14th.—Went to the limekiln, to take a large-sized Bible which had been ordered; had an opportunity of conversing with the owner of the limekiln, who is not opposed to the word of God, says that in his position it is particularly difficult to do all it enjoins, especially with regard to the Sabbath. I, however, referred him to the promise given to those who ask help for the performance of their duty from God, and he seemed really desirous to know and to do the will of God; as the evening was approaching and the dews falling, the gentleman invited me to accompany him home, where we continued our conversation, and I at his request held family worship.

16th.—Walked to Barnstedt, where I soon disposed of all my Testaments. Never having been here before, I inquired for believers, and was told there were four betbruder (pray-brethren) in the place. I called on these people, and found them to be simple, hearty Christians, true to their own convictions, but too fearful of the scorn of their neighbors to proclaim the truth to them. They themselves confessed, and while I could sympathize with the difficulties of their position, I yet decidedly told them that God requires a fearless and open profession of our faith in his dear Son, if indeed we possess this faith.

19th.—At Ternesee, a place lying in spiritual darkness and death. On a threshing-floor I sold two Testaments, but could no where meet with a response to the question: "Do you love the Savior?" Outwardly, the inhabitants of this fruitful marsh-country are richly blessed, but internally, in their hearts, all is naked and barren, and the good seed finds no entrance. May the Lord take away the heart of stone, and give them a heart of flesh, so that Satan may be obliged to quit the field.

J. ANDRESEN.

IN FRANCE,

There has been an increase of interruptions and vexatious annoyances experienced by our Bible colporteurs. "How long, O Lord!" is the frequent exclamation of these suffering witnesses for God's truth. Lest we should increase their embarrassments, we refrain for the present, from any detail of their endurances. But assuredly they will share in the sympathies and prayers of all who rejoice in the experience of religious freedom. Our esteemed brother and former associate in the Board, Dr. Devan, may be ere long expected among us, to give fuller and more definite information of what our brethren are there enduring for the testimony of Jesus, and to furnish also any hints as to the best and most hopeful method of seeking relief, and the enlargement and security of their religious privileges.

In a large German settlement in CANADA WEST, one colporteur has been employed and paid by us to distribute, both by sale and, where requisite, gratuitously, the Sacred Scriptures. The good effects of this service have been partially manifest already, and, if satisfactory, will be continued. In a similar way, our efficient auxiliary, the N. Y. City Bible Society, have the last year employed seven colporteurs at a time in dispensing the word of life, chiefly among the German and Irish immigrants in this city and vicinity. This has so fully tasked their resources, as to render them unable to pay for but a small portion of the Scriptures they have received of us ; and, since the financial year closed, a grant has been made to them by the parent Society of 965 dollars, the amount of their indebtedness for Scriptures bought of us in prosecution of their important work.

It must have been noticed in the foregoing pages that Rev. Mr. Mason is now calling earnestly for colporteur labor throughout Burmah and Siam. Dr. Sutton is adopting it with happy effect ; and very soon the services of humble, faithful Bible readers and distributors will be required, wherever a thorough evangelizing process is attempted.

It has been tried so fully and variously, and with such marked benefits, by bro. Oncken and his associates in Germany, that it can no longer be reckoned an experiment. The conviction of the Board is now fully confirmed that we are called on to put forth the requisite efforts for securing a systematic and thorough colporteur organization for the Canadian French, and for the Spanish residents of New Mexico. Arrangements for entering vigorously on this work have already been commenced ; and, though they will necessarily task to the utmost the powers of the Board and of its executive officers, it is hoped that there will be no drawing back from these toils and cares. This, as well as the extra duties this year required for procuring and paying for a Bible House, left the Board no alternative in regard to renewing the appointment of a general agent and financial Secretary. The good providence of Him whose word we circulate has seemed to guide our choice in this matter. The Rev. J. J. Woolsey, widely and favorably known as one of the laborious and successful agents of the Society for years past, has been elected to fill this position, and two months since entered on its responsible duties. By a proper division of labor between the Cor. Sec. and the general agent, greatly enhanced benefits to the common cause are anticipated, with but little increase of expense. The disbursement as well as the collection of funds in the most judicious, energetic and economical manner, will be constantly aimed at, and it is hoped may in a satisfactory manner be secured.

THE BIBLE HOUSE.

The great importance of securing permanent accommodations for the Society's business in all its departments, could not be overlooked. The experience of all similar organizations evinced the wisdom of the measure set on foot at the special meeting of the Society in April, 1852, for procuring such accommodations, rent free forever. This has become, therefore, an object of engrossing attention for a large portion of the year. The executive officers, together with the finance committee of the Board, have joined their efforts to those of the large committee appointed at the special meeting. Not less than a dozen different positions and edifices were examined, and their eligibility more or less thoroughly canvassed. In the end, with signal unanimity of conviction, the premises 115 Nassau-st., for more than thirty years occupied for a similar purpose, have been selected and purchased.

One object aimed at has been to secure ample room for the convenient accommodation of all our coöperating denominational Societies of a general character, so that proximity of location, and the mutual advantage of these organizations, and of the public resorting to them, might be happily promoted. Immediately on our securing a title to this valuable property, by the very proffer of it to us by the donors and purchasers, we were required to make a formal tender of advantages of occupancy similar to our own, to our neighbors of the Am. Bap. Home Mission Society ; to such an agency as might be required in New-York of the Bap. Miss. Union, and the Am. Bap. Publication Society, as well as to the Bap. Miss. Convention of New-York. This offer, involving no pecuniary responsibility on their part, they can accept, if they choose, any time within two months, so as to enable the Society to arrange for the wisest disposition of any portion of the premises not at present required for the actual occupancy of any of these organizations.

The entire cost of the Bible House, occupying more than 50 feet by 100, in a very central position, equally convenient to citizens and visitors, is 55,000 dollars. More than one-half of the purchase money has been pledged, and most of it actually paid, chiefly in New-York and vicinity. Nor can it be doubted that the entire amount at an early day will be obtained, thus placing the Society on a basis of permanency, and securing for it advantages and conveniences which have been earnestly desired from the beginning of its career.

With the sampler room hereafter at our command, it is recommended that special attention be given as early as practicable to securing in our sales-room, the fullest and most complete varieties of esteemed versions of the Sacred Scriptures, both in the English and the other languages most commonly called for ; so that these can be furnished from our depository, either singly or in quantities, at the lowest prices which can be afforded. Manifestly, there should be some place in our country where the curious, and those engaged in Biblical investigations, should be able to find specimens of all these without paying for them enormous profits. Why should not the American and Foreign Bible Society proffer such facilities ?

The Board have also recommended to the Society, so to amend its Constitution as to incorporate into its 2d Article the original resolutions of 1838 ; evidently intended to define and limit its application, instead of those substituted in 1850. The reasons for this change will be sufficiently obvious, to those most intimately conversant with the whole history of these resolutions and their changes, and need not here be recapitulated.

The entire review of the events of the year is well adapted to constrain all the friends of this Institution to thank God and take courage.

LIBRARY.

For want of room to arrange our books, little has been done the last year for increasing their number. The present ample accommodations invite to new efforts. Books of the following descriptions are particularly solicited:—

1. All the various editions of the Sacred Scriptures, either in English, or in any other language; whether of the entire volume of inspiration, or of any of its separate books; either with notes and comments, or without.
2. All works of Geography, History, and Chronology, which show the past or present state of the world.
3. All works, periodicals, or others, which furnish the statistics of religious benevolence, the rise, progress, and present numbers and condition of religious sects, whether Christian, Jewish, Mohammedan, or idolatrous.
4. Missionary Journals, and results of investigation.
5. Printing and Book-binding, its history, improvements and present state in different countries.
6. Educational information, and discussions of every variety.
7. The Biography of those who have distinguished themselves in any of the arts and sciences, in piety, or in beneficence.

ADDRESS OF JAMES M. HOYT, ESQ., OF CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Resolved, That the Bible—the gift of the Creator to man, and the fountain of spiritual truth—addresses its revelations to the soul, as the voice of God, demanding faith and obedience.

Man, in this life, has a compound nature—material and immaterial. The presumption is, that his Creator has made provision for man's whole nature. That the Creator has made provision for man's material nature is palpable to the senses. His bodily endowments are in harmony so striking with the material world around him, as to demonstrate the skill of the Divine Designer. For all man's physical wants, there are abundant provisions in the physical world, with specific adaptations to those wants.

Thus, his body subsists and grows by the assimilation through vital processes of material substances. These substances, in order to become so assimilated, must be taken into the body. To ensure this, appetite is planted in the body—man is conscious of yearnings after food. Conceding the wisdom of the Creator, the existence of the appetite, implies a necessity for food, and a supply. Hunger is but the voice of the necessity; and to plant a necessity, without providing a supply, would impeach the wisdom of God; but the wisdom of God no rational being will dispute. Conceding then the Divine wisdom, and conceding in man's material nature a necessity for food—adequate provision by God, of food, adapted to the necessity, is a logical certainty. This, reason teaches; and here the senses teach that reason and reality are one—for the consciousness of yearnings for food is no stronger, than is the consciousness of the satisfaction of those yearnings, by partaking of the substances provided by the Creator on every hand. Here we see a material life—a necessity incident to that life, and both reason and fact teaching that for that necessity, the Creator has amply provided.

But man has an immaterial nature—a soul; and while we have seen that there are yearnings implanted in his material nature, which are answered by abundant provisions made by the Creator; it is also certain that man's soul has spiritual yearnings—an appetite for spiritual food. Is the wisdom of the Creator to be impeached, by supposing that while He has made provision for the supply of the wants of man's material and lower nature, he has made no provision for the supply of appropriate aliment for man's spiritual and higher nature? When God has cared for the body, can it be supposed that He has been less careful for the soul? Impossible!

But what are the yearnings which are native to the soul? Their existence is revealed only by consciousness—which is simply the realization by the soul of its own action.

The cry of the soul then—a cry as native to its existence as that of the babe for its mother's milk—is give me life—give me immortal life. The soul shrinks from annihilation. Hence the force of the familiar stanza,

"It must be so—Plato, thou reason'st well,
Else—whence this pleasing hope, this fond desire,
This longing after immortality?"

Again: The soul craves happiness—that is, well being—a state, in which its varied powers and affections may be conscious of that harmonious exertion and emotion which constitute spiritual health. Craving happiness as an end; and seeing, that as health of body is the result of obedience to the laws of bodily life, so health of soul must be the result of obedience to the laws of spiritual life—the soul, in order to attain to that health, its end, seeks knowledge of those laws as the means to that end.

Again: The soul, conscious that its life is derived and dependent, and not self-existent, yearns for an acquaintance with its Creator, and knowledge of its relations to Him, in whom it "lives and has its being." To recapitulate: the language of the soul is—give me immortal life—give me happiness—give me that knowledge without which I cannot attain to happiness—give me knowledge of God. I need not stop to prove the reality of these voices of the soul. He, to whom their reality has not been revealed by consciousness—who has not, during nearly every hour of his waking being, heard them sounding through all the chambers of thought, does not yet live—he needs a birth to know them—he has not yet burst the shell which is between inert and active being.

That God has made provision for gratifying the hunger which he has planted in the soul, is as certain as that God is wise. But how has he made such provision? I answer in one word—by giving to man the Bible.

It is said, that I here stand on mere assumption—that I beg the question? Let us glance then for a moment at the proof. The soul asks for immortal life. Where, in the experience of the race, since the morning of the creation, have "life and immortality been brought to light," save in the Bible? Again: The soul craves happiness, or spiritual health. Seeing that to attain to this is impossible, without conformity with those laws, obedience to which the author of the soul has ordained to be spiritual health, the soul asks for knowledge of those laws—in other words, it hungers for spiritual truth. The resolution I am advocating asserts that the Bible is the fountain of spiritual truth. Is it so? What is truth? In another word, it is reality. Whatever is real, is true; and equally, whatever is true, is real. Physical truth is physical reality; spiritual truth is spiritual reality. Belief—imagination—hypothesis—may be true, or may not be true. It is not man's province to make truth. He is gifted with powers, in the exercise of which he may discover, and conform to realities, both physical and spiritual; but he cannot create them. It is the inalienable prerogative of Him, who alone in the universe is the primal and infinite reality, to create realities. Whatever He ordains is real; all else is but a shadow, or a dream.

That God, the author of the soul, has ordained spiritual realities—conformity with which, in the soul's action, shall constitute spiritual health, as I said before—is as certain as that God is wise. If, then, health of soul is, as it must be, a reality—where has man found it? how has he learned those laws obedience to which is health? Universal history is but the record of man's search for happiness. What has he not imagined—what has he not believed—what has he not suffered—what has he not attempted? He has tried to scale the heavens—he has sunk to a reckless riot of the powers of his soul, which is hell—he has “taken the wings of the morning, and flown to the uttermost parts of the sea”—but has he found it? Gold he has found. In wealth he has revelled. With power and fame he has been surfeited. The arts have ministered all their blandishments, and have made the outward world to glow with beauty. Poetry and music have breathed ravishing strains. Science has lifted him to her sublime heights, and awed his intellect by glimpses of the Infinite. But where has his hungering, weary spirit found food and rest? I may defy refutation, and declare from universal experience, that, aside from the Bible, and obedience to the realities there brought to light, man has never found true happiness. If such then be man's condition without the Bible, the question remains, How is it with the Bible; has he there found this happiness, and been there led to health of soul? Summon individuals of the race, and ask them to testify of consciousness. We see one, with sunken cheek and eye, and enfeebled limbs. We learn that for days he has been deprived of food. We lead him to a table spread with nourishment, and he eagerly eats his fill. He now tells us, that the gnawings of hunger are still; that weakness has given place to strength, and fainting to the pulse of health. Can we doubt that in that man's bodily nature there is a necessity for food so inexorable that the alternative is supply, or dissolution? And when he has eaten, can we doubt that He who made the body, and ordained the necessity, made food, and ordained it to the sustenance of the body? As reasonable beings, must we not from that time forth recognize hunger and food as realities in bodily life? And the man himself—does he need, before admitting hunger to be a reality, to study physiology, and learn the reason for hunger; and, before admitting food to be nourishing, to pry into the occult laws of animal chemistry, which in their action under the vital stimulus take matter which is dead, and build it into that which is living? Surely not. By no conceivable possibility could he have higher evidence of these realities; for to him they have been revealed by consciousness, and her voice is demonstration.

But again: We see one whose physical wants have all been supplied—who is affluent. Industry, commerce, art, invention, or taste, can supply no gratification which he cannot command. He is learned, and in the world's estimate is wise. Success has ever crowned his efforts, and gifted with genius, he stands an acknowledged leader in the foremost rank of men. Courtied, admired, powerful and beloved, we ask him if all his gifts, successes, acquisitions, pleasures or honors, have led him to true health of soul—have given him any ultimate satisfaction of the cravings of his spiritual nature, or made him conscious, even for an hour, of a harmony of spiritual action and emotion, analogous in any just degree to the harmony of the functions of physical life, which he has a thousand times realized in the gratification of bodily appetite, and the hilarity of bodily health. He will tell us, never. Never has wealth, genius, learning, pleasure, power, or honor, assured his spirit that all is well. The past is to him a mystery; the present, incomprehensible; the future, inscrutable. He drifts upon a “troubled sea, whose waters are ever casting up mire and dirt.” His famished spirit ever cries Who will show me any good? And, after tasting every viand of this world's banquet, it confesses, that in its action it has felt the flush of fever, but never the fruition of health; and, a starving bankrupt “in the midst of alarms,” there remaineth for his soul, so far as it hath been yet fed, only “a fearful looking for of judgment and of fiery indignation.”

But open to this man the Bible. Let him eat of the bread of God, sent down from heaven to be the food of the soul. Let him drink of the water which Christ will give him; “of which, if a man drinketh he will never thirst, but it shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.” Let him sit at the feet of Jesus, who spake as never man spake, and learn of Him “who was meek and lowly of heart;” and now, the fever of his spirit healed by the Great Physician, doubt gives place to faith—fear to peace. He hears, believes, and obeys the voice of his Creator, and, rising above the darkness of earth, he begins to live in the sunlight of heaven. This change so wondrous is the fruit of the Bible. In ten thousand times ten thousand instances it has been born of the Bible; but never, never, has it been once known without it. Seeing this can we doubt that this Bible is the Divinely supplied food for the soul? Will we hesitate to proclaim, in the language of the resolution, that it is the fountain of spiritual truth? As well might we doubt that nunger and food are realities. And does the subject of this change need, before believing in the efficacy of the Bible, to canvass the external evidences of its heavenly origin, and possess himself of the learning which has thrown around it bulwarks impregnable to every foe? All these are well—yes, vital, but he does not need them. He has risen higher. He too, has the demonstration of consciousness, for he feels that the Bible has been food to his soul. Planted by faith upon the rock Christ Jesus, and illumined by the Bible, the past, the present, and the future, now appear to him one amazing scheme of grace, lifting him out of nature's darkness into the light and liberty of a child of God; and, when the days of the years assigned for his probation here are ended, death becomes to him the birth to a higher life; he throws off the mortal coil as the winged chrysalis bursts from its shell, and radiant with "angel plumage," he hears the call of his Father and Redeemer, and soars in rapture to his native skies.

But lastly, how can the soul acquire knowledge of God? A craving for this knowledge has been the leading instinct of every tongue and kindred of man, in every age. It has led him to probe the depths of the earth—to pry into the starry heavens—to build idols of gold, silver, and stone,—to waste life in weary pilgrimages to shrines and sepulchres,—to immolate himself beneath juggernaut, or to inflict upon himself tortures in the monkish cell. But "who, by searching, can find out God?" It is impossible that the creature, of its unaided efforts, should rise to knowledge of the Creator; for of the finite can never be born knowledge of the infinite. To be known, God must reveal himself. True knowledge of God must be as much a gift to man as was the breath of life. Where then is the revelation of God? Do you say in nature? I grant that her volume is written all over with declarations of the skill, grandeur, and omnipotence of its author. But nature has no voice to reveal the eternal self-existent Spirit of infinite holiness and love. Whence came then this idea, of God, in the world? Both reason and universal experience testify that it could not be, and was not born of man; for never did he even imagine it, until it was brought to light in the Bible.

The infidel, who ignores the Bible, and exults in an idiot boast of the inner light of reason, but for illumination of that moral sun, some of whose blessed radiance now streaming upon the nations, has in spite of himself fallen upon his soul, would have been a devotee of some idol made by his own hands, less conscious, indeed of the "great verities of the universe;" but also less base and guilty than now, "when light has come into the world, and he loves darkness rather than light because his deeds are evil."

The very existence, then, of an ideal in the soul, so infinitely transcending its own purity and loftiness, is proof of the reality of the God thus seen, and that this reality has been revealed. For can the creature have conceptions of spiritual loftiness and purity which shall transcend those of the Creator? Can the thing formed be superior, even in idea, to Him who formed it? Impossible! As the eye then, when open to the light, rejoices in sight, and hails the sun as God's fountain for the eye; so let the soul, when brought to see in the Bible the revelation of infinite holiness and love, hail that Bible as the sun of the soul. Pagan, papist and infidel, may oppose and rail; but, blessed be God, when they are able to quench the sun in the firmament, they will be able to quench the light of the Bible.

Believer! then hail the Holy Word as the voice of God to the soul. Obey and live. Fear not, for you stand upon the foundations of the eternal throne, and neither earth or hell can prevail against you. Labor to give wings to this everlasting gospel; and laboring, rejoice that there is a heaven of ineffable health for the spirit; for already, even in this earthly vale, you have had an earnest of its reality, in that your soul, when once conformed in its action to the revealed will of its Creator, has felt the thrill of that harmony, which is awakened by the touch of the finger of God, upon the harp strings of the spirit.

ADDRESS OF REV. J. LANSING BURROWS, OF PHILADELPHIA.

Resolved, That the Bible was designed by God, and is adapted by its own intrinsic character, to be the common book of the people, rather than an esoteric manual for the priesthood.

Is the Bible a revelation for the people or for the priesthood? Was it designed to be every man's manual, or the esoteric code for the instruction of the teachers of religion? This is a grave question, which needs to be thoroughly discussed and settled. Protestants have taken it for granted that it is a revelation for the people, and consequently have been at great labor and expense to put it into the hands of all men everywhere. By Romanists it is contended that the Word of God is mainly designed as a text-book for the instruction and guidance of religious teachers merely; that they, by sore and protracted study, or by some special perfunctuary inspiration, are to learn its doctrines, and then convey the results of their investigations, orally, to the people.

Starting from these different premises, the practical conclusions reached are directly opposite. If it be true that Jehovah gave the Bible, as Pythagoras gave his secret instructions to those of his disciples who were to become teachers, as a secret book, of which a self-perpetuated priesthood, in regular succession, were to be the sole depositories, and they were left to decide what doctrines to withhold and what to promulgate, and in what manner and by what methods the people were to be held and governed, then the Roman doctrine is right; then the book should be carefully kept from the eyes of the people, it should be sedulously excluded from the public schools; then it is a profanation to subject the sacred oracles to the unholy touch of vulgar hands, and the ordinary investigation of secular and common men. The conclusions are logically drawn from the premises.

But is it so? Around this simple proposition gathers a great controversy. It involves our educational interests. It is a turbulent element in our political strifes. Is the Bible according to the design of Jehovah, to be regarded as a book for the people, or as a book for the priesthood? If designed for the people, then it ought to be in the hands of all; then it ought to be the text-book in our common schools; then Bible Societies ought to be encouraged and sustained in giving a copy to every family, who can read it, in the wide world.

Let us look at this proposition fairly. We shall work the more heartily if we are rooted and grounded in the truth.

The whole argument "a priori," is as forceful and as conclusive, that God would reveal his will to the people, as that he would give a revelation at all. It is clearly as possible for Jehovah to adapt his communications to the whole race as to a single class. Having formed all minds after the same general pattern, he could so make known his will that all should be able to comprehend it, so far as necessary for their practical guidance. Are there any such differences in their mental structure, between priests and people, as to involve an impossibility of communicating practical truths with equal clearness to both? To assume this is vain presumption. The God, who made mind and knows its capacities, could, if it were his plan, frame a revelation adapted to the comprehension of all his creatures as easily as one adapted to the comprehension of a few. Who would limit Jehovah's wisdom by denying this? It is evident then, that for God to adapt his word to the understanding of all mankind, is just as possible with him, if it were his purpose, as to make it clear to a few.

God is as capable of instructing the ignorant as men are. He could reveal his own will as plainly and as simply as men could. If he could not make plain his revelation to the capacities of the humblest, then it is a bold assumption for any class of men to attempt it.

Is it not probable, antecedently probable, that this would be God's purpose? Was it in his plan of creation, that a comparatively small class of men should be so superior in intellectual power to the multitudes, that they alone should be capable of understanding his revealings? And if so, was it a part of his plan of providential government, that these superior intellectual men should always be found in the priesthood; and that they should always be the purest and most holy, as well as the most strongly intellectual? This could not have been in the purpose of God, or else his purposes have been most signally and lamentably frustrated. Are there such differences among men, as to indicate that Jehovah has formed a separate class, capable of receiving the truth from him, of which the great majority is incapable, and so holy and honest that they may be implicitly trusted to communicate "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth" of his revealings? There is nothing like it. There are no such differences among men. If then there is, in fact, an average equality of capacity and of virtue among all classes and all ranks, in all employments and positions of society, is it not probable that Jehovah would reveal his will equally to all? In the actual condition of humanity there is nothing that indicates a necessity for a class of intermediate revealers to stand between God's word and the people.

All classes of mankind equally need a revelation. It is plainly asserted in the word of God that "every man shall give account of himself to God." There is no intimation that any man will be allowed to answer for another, or be able to offer any ransom for the soul of his brother. The dogma that the priest will be permitted to stand between the soul and God, and claim that the conditions of salvation have been met by intercourse with him, is a bold assumption, without the slightest basis. Priests will have enough to do to answer for themselves as common sinners, often, alas! as uncommon sinners. There is but one Advocate, one Mediator, between God and man. If it be true, then, that God holds each man directly accountable to himself, that every one must personally give account of himself to God, then it follows that every man has a right to know for himself what God requires of him, and upon what principles he is to be judged. If a priest cannot answer for me, he cannot learn for me. If he cannot stand between me and Jehovah, he has no right to obtrude himself between me and God's word.

A man may as well propose to eat for me and promise that I shall not starve, as take from me my own portion of the bread of life, and assure me a healthful spirituality. He may as well stand between me and the spring, and tell me he will drink for me and insure me against famishing, as stand between me and the fountain of living waters, and meek me by saying that my thirst ought to be assuaged by his drinking. He had better do so, for the first only affects my physical life, the last hazards interests of spiritual, of eternal moment. Every man, then, has a right to say to every interposing priest, Stand out of the way : I need the bread of life and the water of life. I will eat and drink for myself. My necessities cannot be met by your supplies. If I must answer for myself, I must know for myself. I dare not trust you. It is possible that a priest may deceive me—such things have happened—but God's own Word will not deceive me. Then give me peacefully my own copy of the Bible, or I will take it. I will give it to my children. I can find enough in it that I can understand to control my faith and life, and I had rather trust God than trust you.

Thus far, then, it appears that it is as possible for God to adapt HIS revelation to the whole people as to a class of teachers—that it is probable that he would do so, from the essential equality of mankind ; from the principles of his government—which regards every man as in direct relations to his Maker and Judge—from the needs of man as man—and from the danger of trusting his soul to the cure of a mortal like himself.

And now let us open the book, and inquire whether its internal style and character are such as to warrant the dogma, that it was intended for the priesthood and not for the people. Let us read there, too, what are its own explicit claims in this respect.

When I look into the volume, what do I find ? Is it a logical and systematic treatise, evidently designed only for the learned, written in a style comprehensible only to the profound thinker and the erudite student ; or to a priesthood specially inspired ? Has it propositions formally laid down, and hidden in a technological verbiage, the understanding of which requires a long and liberal course of study ? Is it the style of a "Novum Organum" or "Principia" written by philosophers for philosophers ? Is it any thing like a book of "Secret Instructions for the Jesuits ?" Does it bear upon its face any marks that indicate that it was intended to be a text-book for the priesthood rather than the common manual of the people ? Newton's Principia was written for the learned. Bunyan's Pilgrim Progress for the people. Which is the Bible most like ? Its whole style and character give incontrovertible evidence that it was written for the humble and unlearned masses.

Take a few examples. Here is a concise summary of the law of God. It is so simple that a child may readily understand it, and yet so comprehensive as to extend over the whole field of man's duty. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy mind, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and thy neighbor as thyself." Here is one of the fundamental lessons of the Bible. Does it need priestly exposition to make it plain ? Is it dangerous to give that sentence to the people ?

Take another golden sentence as a summary of the Gospel. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life." Did Jehovah communicate that exclusively to the priesthood ? Is it dangerous to let the people read it ? How simply and sweetly adapted to every man's, to every child's capacity and wants. What comments, or glosses, or expositions, can make these passages plainer ? Every attempt to simplify them, reminds one of the reply given by a pious peasant to the clergymen who asked him if he understood the Pilgrim's Progress, an annotated copy of which he had presented him, "Oh ! yes !" was the reply, "I understand the book, and I think I shall understand the notes after a while." Think of a man gravely asserting that the parable of the "sower and the seed"—of "the prodigal son"—of "the rich man and Lazarus"—of any of the instructions of Jesus—the narratives of the Old Testament—of the Psalms and the Proverbs—any consecutive part of the Book, being written exclusively for the priesthood, as their manual of instructions, how to teach, and what to teach the masses. The assumption, considering the character of the Book, is infinitely absurd. Its narratives are all clear, simple and pathetic. Its sketches of character, truthful to nature, and plain as language can make them. Its statements of doctrines, free from all technicalities, conveyed in the simple language that the people are accustomed to use. Its poetry sublime, because of its very simplicity. Its warnings and threatenings, its invitations and promises, speaking right into the heart of the humblest and rudest of mankind. All its counsels and instructions, all that relates to the faith and the practical life, are so plain, that man ordinarily labors in vain by any paraphrase or exposition his ingenuity can invent, to put the thoughts in words better adapted to the comprehension of the people. Think of learning, or secondary inspiration, trying to simplify or to guard against misapprehension, such passages as these :—"Whosoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them." "A new commandment give I unto you that ye should love one another." "If thine enemy hunger, feed him ; if he thirst, give him drink." "We know that if this earthly house of our tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

I take up a commentary at random and turn to it, to see how it will simplify and explain, say this first sweet rule of life—"Whosoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so," &c. I turn to Whitby, and I do it without referring to any other passage, and find the following :—"Here the critical note is this; that we are not to look for a connection of these words to the former, though they be introduced with the particle cum, 'therefore,' that being, said Phavorinus, often 'arkon,' an expletive, or serving only by way of transition from one thing to another, etc." "But for the explanation of this rule, note, first, that it was a rule which obtained both among Jews and Gentiles, and was delivered to them in some variety of words, but with great harmony of sense; first, positively, as here—Quod tibi fieri vis, fac alteri. And also negatively—Quod tibi fieri non vis, alteri ne feceris. Quod damnaturus sis in illis, in te non admiseris." And so on with more learned quotations than I am willing to repeat. And then he proceeds through secondly, thirdly, fourthly, fifthly, sixthly, and when a plain man has waded through the exposition, he is confused, and begins to think there must be some inexplicable obscurity about the passage; a thought that never would have been suggested but for the explanations.

My brethren, I speak not extravagantly when I say that it is impossible for a man to make a plainer book, as an every-day guide book for the masses of the people, one better adapted both to their ready comprehension and their needs, than is the Word of God. If they cannot understand this, then they can understand nothing. If it is unwise or unsafe to give them this, then the church has no right to use the press. And I reach this conclusion not merely from the consideration, that it is a divine revelation, but from the study of its internal adaptedness to the understanding and wants of man.

We may also show more explicitly from its own pages, that it claims to be the book of the people. But time will not permit me to do more than quote a few of its passages. Notice this: "The secret things belong unto God, but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law." This is a very unhappy passage for priests. It asserts that the things that are revealed—all revelation—belong to us and our children. Then it must by right belong to the laity—the people—to those who have children, to whom to teach and bequeath it. The priests have no children—at least that is the theory. If the passage excludes any, it rather excludes celibates than others.

After the conquest of the city of Ai by the Israelites, Joshua assembled the people, and this is what he did: "He read all the words of the law, the blessings and cursings according to all that is written in the book of the law. There was not a word of all that Moses commanded which Joshua read not before all the congregation of Israel, with the women and the little ones, and the strangers that were conversant among them." Would Archbishop Hughes do this? Would he allow it to be done? What! read all the words of Moses—the whole Pentateuch to the women and to the little ones. The Prelate would have rebuked Joshua to his face. We prefer Joshua's example to the Bishop's theory. To our little ones, whether in the family circle or in the public school, will we read these same words of Moses.

Again: David says: "The entrance of thy word giveth light, it giveth understanding to the simple."—To whom? To the simple. Does that mean the Priests?

Even to Habakkuk, when revealing to him his sublime prophecy, Jehovah said—"Write the vision and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it."

But why need I multiply texts of this kind? The Bible is full of them. The whole scope of the book is of this character. Had this modern dogma been received in ancient times, Peter would have expunged from the Bible John's exhortation—"Search the Scriptures." Philip would have snatched from the hand of the Ethiopian minister, his copy of Isaiah, and flung it into the stream, instead of baptizing the reader there. The Pope would have fulminated his excommunicating curse against the Bereans "because they searched the Scriptures to see whether these things were so;" Timothy would have been scowled upon as a protestant heretic child, because "he had been taught the Scriptures from his youth." I ask then, in all honesty, is not the position absolutely impregnable, that the Bible was designed and is adapted to be a book for the common people, and not to be an exclusive volume for the guidance of the priesthood.

Not a single intimation is to be found within its lids, entrusting it to the exclusive wardenship of sacerdotal keepers; not a passage which implies that it is dangerous or unwise to place it in the hands of all. Its words are not poisons to be carefully kept sealed up in jars, and doled out in doses by spiritual apothecaries. It is seed, to be sown in the morning and in the evening, beside all waters—good seed, that shall not return void, though some may fall by the way-side. Like bread, it is a necessity of life for all.

My heart burns with indignation when I hear my Bible, my blessed Bible denounced as a dangerous book. Dangerous to what? to soundness of faith? to purity of morals? It is the faith. It is the only efficacious work on morals. It is dangerous to sin. It is dangerous to the claims of priestly despotism. It is dangerous to the system which takes a man's mind, and soul, and conscience, out of his own ownership, and passes it over-bound to the control of a priest. It is dangerous, it is death to Popery; but it is the life of Christianity. I acknowledge that Romanists are consistent in their hostility to the circulation of the Bible. They must oppose it, or it will destroy their church. We cannot pause for this. For such a result we shall shed no tears.

Lovers of the Bible! forward with the holy work. Let your presses groan with the labors. Let your multiplied colporteurs stagger under their loads, until there shall be a copy in every cottage and hut, in every chamber of every house, in the room of every hotel, in the state-room of every steamer, in the cabin and in the fore-castle of every ship, and coasting schooner, and fisherman's yacht, in the hospital ward and in the prison cell. Send it into every house on your "Five Points," and your "Ann Streets," and your "Plumb Streets."

What, give the pure and holy Word of God to the vilest outcasts of Society! What, put Bibles in the bar-rooms and the brothels! Yes! put them there! God sends his light and his rain there. You do not deem it wasting chloride of lime when you cast it upon putrefaction. God's Word is his chloride of lime, his great disinfecting agent, to purify the whole moral atmosphere, and make it healthful for man's breathing.

It seems to me, too, that special efforts should be made to give a copy of God's Word to all the children in our public schools. We should not be satisfied if there is a single copy on the teacher's desk. Pile them up at the doorway, that every little one may have a precious volume of its own. When we hear the cry, "Out with the Bible from the public schools," let it be answered by the cry, "A Bible in every pupil's own hand." Thus, let us accept all the fair conclusions of our proposition—that the Bible was designed and is adapted to the common people.

ADDRESS OF REV. J. HYATT SMITH, OF CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Resolved, That, in the spirit of Christian love and zeal, we will go forward upon the high errand of the American and Foreign Bible Society, in distributing the Word of God.

MR. PRESIDENT:—I feel that the generous manner of the introduction of myself to this assembly, by our esteemed Secretary, (Dr. Babcock,) is at once kind and unjust; and I can find relief from the consequent embarrassment only, by quoting the saying of one to whom I am quite unworthy to be compared. It was in reply to a similar introduction, and, if my memory serves me, on a like occasion, that the eloquent Summerfield said, "the gentleman declares that he has reserved the best wine until the last—this is inverting the order of the feast: every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine, and when men have well drank, then that which is worse:—but I have not even the worse wine to offer you, mine is mere water; but if the Master of the feast should deign to look upon the water and turn it into wine, it may be good wine." Following my two brethren, who have so closely held your attention, and so fully rewarded it, I feel, that with much more than Summerfield's emphasis, I may adopt his language. I hope that the water I bring as an offering, may blush into wine beneath the smile of the Master.

I believe, Sir, that the resolution which I have presented, might well pass to the vote of this body of Christians, without a word of comment or defence. It reminds brethren of a self-evident duty, and presents the claims of the Word of God. What need I say in its support? What should I say for the Bible! Any other book but the book, may be subject of criticism, and liable to defence or condemnation according to its merit or its demerit. But in my view, the sacred volume is above and beyond all this. It is as though the ark of God was standing in the midst of congregated Israel, and a man of the tribes were called forth to speak of its glories, and maintain its claims upon the respect and veneration of the people of the Lord. I might as soon defend a star shining in its beauty; or, the sun in the fullness of his noonday beams. No, Sir! I do not argue, but admire. I do not criticize and comment, but rather worship and adore. As John exclaimed, when, standing in Jordan's waters baptizing, he saw Jesus approaching, "behold the Lamb of God!" So I can but point to this mystery of God's love and cry—behold the Bible! I remember, once, in conversation, a friend endeavored to describe a mother. "Why," said he, "a mother—a man's mother—to describe a mother—why, a mother, friend Smith, a true mother—why, she is a—mother!" He had no lead and line with which to fathom the depths of a parent's love: he could not take the compass, and count the towers of that Jerusalem of holy affection, a mother's heart. And what more can we say of the Bible, than that it is THE BIBLE. It is the golden key, which alone can unlock the gate of heaven to the soul of man, for immortality is brought to light in the gospel. It is the pillow on which the aching head may rest, as the beloved disciple reposed on the Saviour's breast. It is the bright lamp of revelation hung by the hand of grace, at the entrance of the dark valley, whose holy radiance dispels the shadow of death. Mysterious volume! Within it tower Sinai and Calvary. Here may be heard the thunder of the law, and the tender accents of the Gospel. The lightning of God's wrath and the light of God's love shine here. Along these paths of holy truth we can trace the scarred footprints of the crucified.

Sir, I love the Bible, for all the holy associations that cluster around it. To each of us, what memories, abundant in interest, dwell with the mention of the blessed book. What tender thoughts of home, of parents, and of friends; and what a personal recollection to each; what an individual experience is connected with the sacred record. Who has not bent over its holy pages when the letters seemed to swim in tears? In that hour of dim anguish and desolation, when the object of your love—it may be of your idolatry—was taken from you by death, tell me, mother, what was your light, your strength, your hiding-place and your consolation. When that child, which had nestled in the bosom of love, was laid in the cold grave, how poor were the ministrations of friendship. The look of sympathy was dark as a frown, and the music of kind words fell on the ear like discord. Oh then, what blessings flowed from God's Word! what voices of heavenly consolation came forth from the Bible! How full of love and veneration should be our memory of a book which, as the angel of the Lord, has walked with us in the midst of the fiery furnace of trial. A book whose pages we have bedewed with tears of bereavement, tears of penitence, and tears of joy.

Mr. President, I acknowledge the frailty of loving the Bible as it is. There may be minor errors in our translation, and the day will doubtless come when the needful corrections will be made. I desire and hope, that when that time arrives, the learned and the holy of the general church of Jesus Christ will discharge that duty. Happily did Whitfield set forth the great bond of our holy faith in his supposed interview with Abraham. He stood and cried, "Father Abraham! are there any Baptists in heaven?" And he gave the reply, "Not one!" "Are there any Presbyterians?" "Not one!" Naming the other creeds, still the answer "Not one!" With a show of astonishment he asked—"Father Abraham, who is in heaven?" and gave the answer, "Every Christian, George!" This church on earth—this heaven below—represented by the men of known learning and piety, should give themselves to the work of revision. All denominations of the faithful children of God should be united in the least alteration of the sacred text. I rejoice that the Bible was translated when it was. The design of the Allwise is clearly to be seen in this fact. Eternal truth found appropriate raiment in the plain dignity of the perfect Saxon tongue. I admire the diamond of God in its fair setting of old yellow gold. I delight to see the ark of the Lord surrounded with the rich Gothic architecture of venerable English oak.

Sir, the distribution of the Bible is the great work of to-day. This is the one sublime error of our Society. Every other object and aim must be second and subservient to this. In this enterprise Christian zeal and Christian love should burn in the fullness of holy ardor. Error, in countless numbers, is leading on in battle against the truth. Scepticism and infidelity are at work. Romanism too, blind Samson, is feeling for the very pillars of our republic, by endeavoring to shut out and hide Word of God. As true men, as Christian patriots, it becomes us to labor with a holy diligence, sending every where these leaves of the tree of life. Our safety is found alone in scattering wide that volume, whose inspired declarations enlighten the mind, purify the heart, and, on the foundation rock of truth, build the temple of civil and religious liberty. In this crisis nothing should divert us for a moment from the all-engrossing object of our pursuit. To pause now to question about the form and feature of the holy volume is madness. As well might the continental army have stopped to consider the propriety of improving the shape of cannon, or musket, when the enemy was en route for the field. Under other circumstances the question of some slight change in stock, or firelock, might have found appropriate place, but not in the raging of the revolution. It would be no time to stop and argue the corn laws when perishing millions were starving for bread. The Bible as it is can convince men of error and lead them to truth. It was by reading the present version that I saw my sins, and saw my Saviour; and learned by penitence to forsake the one and by faith to cling to the other. By means of the present translation I learned my mistake in doctrine, and, in obedience to an enlightened conscience, as I believe, I acted, and in the baptism here, beneath my finger, my false doctrine found a watery grave. Let the old weapon do its work. The sword of ancient form, whose hilt is jewelled with the promises of God, and whose blade, tempered in heaven, is stained with the blood of the enemy of Christ, is, and ever shall be, victorious, when wielded by an arm nerve with zeal, and firm with faith.

ZEAL and LOVE! How can we mention the Bible without feeling the full pulsations of holy love? In the exercise of that heavenly principle let us ever act, pouring the fullness of its warm sunshine continually upon our path. May all bitterness end now and forever! Though differing it may be in opinion, may we, as Baptists, as Christians, love one another. Let us remember the tender scenes in days gone by, when we labored together in the harmony of the Gospel of Christ. I am happy, Mr. President, in the consciousness, that, as I know my heart, I have no other feeling than that of love and good-will toward every man honestly striving to further the cause of our common Lord and Master. And I here say, that I do venerate the man now standing as the head of a recently formed Bible Society. I reverence him as a servant of God, ripe in years, in wisdom, and in piety; whose head is already white unto the harvest of death. May I not add, that my regard is not less for him who is called to preside over the deliberations and guide in the councils of this Society. To you, sir, in days past, I have learned to look with the confidence of a boy turning toward his father. I saw your emotion, at times, too big for utterance, as you stood in this familiar place and looked out upon this gathering of well known faces. Your heart was overloaded, like a wagon burdened with sheaves, and your tongue refused its accustomed ready office. I, too, have affecting associations, delightful and tender memories, dwelling in the shadow of this sanctuary. By such cords as bind us to cherished friends, and hallowed altars, may we ever, as the servants of Him who loved us, be bound in holy union of heart and interest. May the eloquent sermon of John the aged, preached from his litter pulpit, continually sound in our ears as a Society and a denomination: "Little children love one another! little children love one another!" As the husbandman goes forth sowing the seed, so may our Society walk the wide field of its labors, scattering broadcast the precious seed of the kingdom, from which a harvest of eternal truth shall spring up and ripen in the smile of God.

EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE
American and Foreign Bible Society.

HELD IN BROOKLYN, MAY 6 AND 8, 1855.

SUNDAY EVENING, May 6th, 1855.

ANNUAL SERMON by Rev. E. L. MAGOON, D.D., in the First Baptist Church, Brooklyn, from Ephes. ii. 7.

Present, and assisting in the services—Rev. B. T. WELCH, D.D., President, and Rev. Dr. BELCHER, Philadelphia.

TUESDAY, 8th May, 1855.

Sung Hymn 396.

Prayer by the Rev. Mr. HARRISON, of Pennsylvania.

Select portions of Scriptures read by Rev. Mr. CHICK, of Massachusetts.

Minutes of the last Annual Meeting read and approved.

Nominating Committee—Revs. J. L. HODGE, A. P. MASON, M. M. DEAN, S. J. DRAKE, and W. J. TODD, to nominate Officers, and 12 Managers of the class, to serve for three years.

J. M. BRUCH, Jr., from the original Building Committee, appointed 14th April, 1852, presented the final report. Accepted, and referred to a Special Committee—Geo. GAULT, Rev. J. C. HARRISON, WM. DUBROW.

The President here made a few remarks, appropriately and eloquently referring to our past history and future duty, reminding our friends of their inactivity, and urging more vigor and energy hereafter. The Pastors were strongly appealed to, to use their influence in promoting the interests of the Society, reminding them with much power and force of the necessity of a much wider circulation of the Word of Life, as the only instrumentality of banishing from a benighted world darkness, superstition, and idolatry, and introducing the salutary and saving influences of the Gospel.

The Nominating Committee presented the following ticket, which was unanimously adopted:—

The President made a few remarks, expressive of his feelings in his re-election, and indicating his strong attachment to the noble and glorious work in which the Society is engaged.

The Corresponding Secretary stated that he accepted the appointment, with the understanding that he would retire from office whenever a successor can be found.

Rev. Mr. WARREN, of Troy, presented the following resolution, and supported it with appropriate and pertinent remarks:—

Resolved, That it is the true policy of this Society to enter at once and vigorously upon the publication of Bibles in the English language, and their distribution by colporteurs among our population at large.

Referred to Committee—WARREN, BENEDICT, REESE, SWAIN, and LATHROP.

After interesting remarks from several brethren, adjourned to 8 o'clock, after singing the Doxology.

8 o'clock P. M.—The Society reassembled.

Prayer by Dr. BENEDICT.

Treasurer's Report presented and accepted, sustained by the Hon. Mr. BOKKE.

The Corresponding Secretary's Report was presented.

Acceptance moved by Rev. Mr. LEONARD, of Ohio, and seconded by Rev. Mr. SWAIN, of Massachusetts.

Accepted, and directed to be published, under the direction of the Board.

Rev. Mr. WARREN, from the Committee appointed on his resolution offered in the morning, submitted the following resolution, which was unanimously passed:—

Resolved, That the wants of the American population demand that this Society enter more fully and vigorously upon the work of circulating the Scriptures in the English, German, and other languages, in North America, and to secure the establishment of auxiliaries to the American and Foreign Bible Society, employing colporteurs and other agencies for the purpose.

Rev. Mr. LANZ, colored brother, from Boston, made some interesting remarks, and a collection was taken up in behalf of his church.

Rev. L. NORMANDEAU, of the Grand Ligne Mission, addressed the meeting on the state of religion and Scripture distribution in Canada.

Adjourned to 7 1-3 P. M.

Benediction by the Pastor.

7 1-3 o'clock, P. M.—The Society reassembled. After singing Hymn 377, Prayer was offered by Rev. GORDON ROBBINS, of Hartford, Conn.

Rev. Mr. DAVIDSON, of Canada West, presented the following resolution, and spoke in its favor. Unanimously passed:—

Resolved, That the present is an eventful period in the history of the world, and one which calls upon the friends of religious and political freedom and Bible Christianity, in language not to be misunderstood, to exert all their energies, and call into requisition every available instrumentality, in order to multiply and circulate faithful translations of the Word in those countries which are opening to receive them; especially as by this means, accompanied by the Divine blessing, Paganism, Mohammedanism, and Popery will be effectually overthrown, despotism destroyed, error eradicated, moral darkness dispelled, and men everywhere be brought to rejoice in the light and liberty of the "glorious Gospel of the blessed God."

The President announced that Dr. MASON, who was expected to speak, was prevented by indisposition from being present, but that the address prepared by him would be read by Dr. LATHROP, which was accordingly done.

Rev. LEWIS SMITH, from New Mexico, then addressed the Society, and dwelt particularly on the advantages of colporteur labor, as being the best system of carrying the Gospel to the multitudes. Not one in 1,300 in New Mexico can read. But they always receive the Missionary kindly, treat him courteously, and listen attentively.

On motion of Rev. O. W. BIGGS,

Resolved, That the thanks of this Society are tendered to the Rev. Dr. MASON for his Anniversary discourse, and to the brethren who have addressed it on the present occasion, and that they are requested to furnish copies for publication with the Minutes.

On motion of Rev. S. W. FIELD, of Providence, R. I.,

Resolved, That our thanks are due, and are cordially tendered, to the Pastor and members of the First Baptist Church, Brooklyn, for their cordial welcome and generous hospitalities during this Anniversary.

Rev. Mr. HARRISON's Report, on Building Committee's Report was adopted.

The Special Committee to whom was referred the Report of the Committee appointed by the Society in April, 1853, to procure premises for the use of the Society, beg leave to present the following Report:—

The facts embraced in this paper are matters of special gratulation among us, as well as of gratitude to God. The Committee whose report has been referred to us, was charged with an important duty—to procure a home for the Society. Their work has been accomplished, so as to justify a final report. Such an occasion should not be allowed to pass without fixing in our minds the nature and magnitude of the work accomplished, and impressing us with gratitude to God, who has guided and blessed

it. The purchase of a property—the arrangements for erecting a building upon it—the raising of a subscription to cover the expense of the original purchase—the offer of rooms to other denominational Societies, which have been accepted by the Home Mission and the Publication Societies—are among the matters embraced in this Report, and are each the evidence of the valuable services of the Committee. In accomplishing the most important work ever undertaken for this Society. We have now a permanent home, which will always remain an evidence of the regard of the denomination where the Society may be established, and sustained in its great work of Bible distribution, and which, with all its revenues and advantages, will forever be devoted to that sacred object.

We feel that it is proper, in accepting the final report of this Committee, to express our appreciation of their labors, and to impress on the friends of the Society generally, the importance of giving an early attention to the payment of the subscriptions that have been made, but not yet wholly collected.

The following resolutions are respectfully reported to the Society:—

Resolved, That the Report of the Committee appointed by the Society in April, 1852, to procure premises for their use, be accepted, and the Committee discharged, and that all their unfinished business be referred to the Board of Managers, with power.

Resolved, That the members of this Society cordially thank the Committee for the ability and laborious fidelity with which they have executed their high trust.

Resolved, That we acknowledge our debt of gratitude to the God of the Bible, for his blessing in the efforts put forth to procure a permanent home for this Society, whence streams of Bible Christianity may flow forth to bless the human race; and that, in our mutual congratulations on this result, we should find encouragement to commensurate exertions in the proper work of the Society.

All which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN C. HARRISON, Chairman of Committee.

NEW YORK, May 8th, 1855.

TO THE AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY :

The Committee appointed by the Society on the 14th April, 1852, to procure premises for the use of the Society, respectfully present their final report,

In January, 1853, the property, known as numbers 115 and 117 Nassau street, was purchased at $55,000, and the Society entered upon the occupancy on the 2d day of May in that year. The location selected was in every respect satisfactory, but the building then upon it was inconvenient for the occupation of the Society, and not available to produce any income. The erection of a new building being generally acceded to as desirable, the responsibility and charge of constructing it was undertaken by the Real Estate Committee appointed by the Board of Managers, with the concurrence of this Committee, as has been particularly stated in previous reports of your Committee.

This building has now been completed. The services appropriate to its opening were held in the building in September last. At the commencement of the incoming financial year of the Society, they find themselves in full possession of the building, entirely completed, and its surplus rooms almost wholly rented and producing an income. The present is therefore an appropriate season for the final report of the Committee, that they have secured "premises in an eligible location in this city for the use of the Society."

According to the wish of the donors, the Committee have made certain provisions in reference to the property, which were made public at the time; the principal one of which was, that rooms should be furnished to certain other Societies of the denomination. The proper tender, under this provision, has been made by the Board of Managers and accepted by the American Baptist Home Mission Society and the American Baptist Publication Society.

The construction of the new building has been under the charge of the Real Estate Committee of the Board. They have reported to the Board that stores and offices in the building, not needed for the accommodation of this and the other Societies, have been rented to the amount of $11,925; and that he estimated value of the rooms yet to be rented is placed at $850; and also that they propose to make up their final account of the construction of the building, as of the date of the 30th April 1855.

The special duty of this Committee has been to make the original purchase of the property, and to raise and collect the subscription to pay for the same. The accounts thereof have been audited to this date and show the original cost of the property, including taxes, insurance, and other expenses incurred in relation thereto, at $58,070 81. The subscriptions have been completed in amount to $55,000, by nearly eight hundred subscribers, of which has been collected the sum of $43,065 96, subject to an interest account, and the expenses of agents, charges, &c., in collecting the subscriptions. Your Committee do not think it necessary to delay their final report on account of the uncollected subscriptions, but that this duty may be referred to the proper officers of the Society. They therefore recommend that their financial account, the collection of the residue of the subscription, and their unfinished business, be referred to the Board of Managers.

The Committee can, with feelings of gratitude, congratulate the Society upon the accomplishment of the work committed to them in procuring a property for the use of the Society, a building given to them by their friends, with such a general and wide-spread coöperation, and for objects dear to every friend of the Bible.

Yet they cannot omit to urge upon the friends of the Society the importance of making early payment of the subscriptions still remaining uncollected ; and of making such additional subscriptions as may be necessary to pay, in addition to the price of the land, the expenses above stated, and the expenses by agents, &c., incurred in the collection of the subscriptions—that the original purchase may be the entire and completed work of the denomination.

The grounds and reasons for such an interest, as is invoked, need no argument from us. The considerations and promised advantages which urged us to this work have become realized, and we can point to them as facts, which now bear their own evidence to the value and importance of the enterprise.

Our purpose has been to sustain and establish a Society, whose object it is to distribute the Word of God to the human race, an object as broad and lasting as the world, and divinely appointed as the means of hearing and of faith. And in view of the origin and history of this Bible House, we can all unite in our acknowledgments of the Divine goodness, which has guided and blessed us in completing a work, in which we have no other intention, than a humble desire for the extension of the knowledge of his word, and for his glory.

Respectfully submitted.

S. P. TOWNSEND, Chairman.
JOHN M. BRUCE, Jr., Secretary.

NEW YORK, May 5th, 1855.

Proceedings all referred to Board for publication.

Adjourned.

Benediction by President.

Eighteenth Annual Report.

WHILE wars and rumors of wars have been vexing the nations of Europe, and commotion and revolution are still rife in the mightiest of Oriental Empires; while he who rides upon the pale horse, and bends an unerring bow, has been busy among the great and good, hurrying many of them away from the toils and cares of earth, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to keep us in peace, and to spare in health the large Board of Managers last year elected, together with all the officers of the Society, to meet with adoring gratitude this Anniversary.

Both at home and abroad, the circumstances under which the Managers have prosecuted their labors of the last year have been of mingled character and interest, which require some fulness and particularity of explication.

REMOVAL TO THE NEW BIBLE HOUSE.

Soon after the last Anniversary, it was deemed best to remove our depository, sales-room, and the offices of the Secretaries, into our new, but then unfinished, edifice. This was done not only to save the payment of a large monthly rent, but also to enable us, at the earliest period possible, to accustom our friends to seek on this spot,—so long the resort of those who desire the bread and the water of Life,—for the ample variety and full supply of Heaven's best gifts. Some practical inconveniences, it was rightly judged, might better be submitted to, in using apartments scarcely ready for occupancy, with the hope of having at last reached a home. The infelicities of such unfinished apartments were, however, more injurious to the sales department than had been anticipated, and have helped, along with other untoward influences, very sensibly to diminish the number of Bibles and Testaments disposed of at retail in our own Rooms for the first third of the year. The solicitude, moreover, however natural and reasonable it may be under the circumstances, to reserve as much eligible room as practicable for renting, so as early to repay the money advanced in completing so extensive and costly a structure, induced the appropriation to our own use of somewhat less convenient and commodious apartments than many of our friends would have desired. It is hoped, however, that the economical motive of this arrangement will help to satisfy all that we have at least endeavored to promote the permanent and ultimate interests of the Society, rather than indulge in any sumptuous accommodations for ourselves.

By the second week in September, the edifice was pronounced complete; and though not yet offered by the contractor for examination and acceptance by the Society, perhaps because deemed unnecessary, it had virtually, and by an earlier occupancy, already come into their possession.

The religious and other appropriate services on the formal opening of "the halls we rear, to scatter far Life's leaves," were chronicled at sufficient length in the Periodical Paper of the Society issued in October last, and need not here be repeated.

EMBARRASMENTS OF THE TIMES.

Connected with the above-named hindrance, the severe money pressure, the hard times so generally complained of, have had a double influence:—tending to impede our work, both by limiting our sales of the Scriptures, and lessening the contributions to our treasury. True, we have not suffered alone in this respect; our other benevolent Societies having even more largely, some of them, felt the depressing influence of this embarrassment. Perhaps we ought to express gratitude, rather than grief, that we have suffered so little in this respect, and that, with returning general prosperity, there seems, on the part of most of our supporters, a willingness to repair as promptly as possible any past deficiency, and enable the Society to hold on the even or increasing vigor of its course. It is matter of sincere regret that we had not been able, in the preceding years of plenty, to lay up some stores against such years of want as we have now experienced. A provident spirit would surely justify this course, all the more reasonable when it is remembered that only by such a balance on hand can we hope to be continually in readiness to meet sudden, unexpected demands for the Scriptures in large numbers, either in our own country or in foreign lands. It is not necessary that any large amount either of funds in the treasury, or of printed and bound volumes in the depositories, should thus be kept in advance of the demand; but the Managers, from the results of experience, do not hesitate to urge that more ample supplies of this kind are desirable than they have of late found it practicable to retain. The remedy for this must be found, in the first instance, in augmented contributions to our Treasury. Then, the results of past embarrassment will induce the Board most carefully to regard the wisdom of so adjusting the appropriations at home and abroad, as will not cripple their own means of meeting new and urgent emergencies.

DEATHS OF DISTINGUISHED COADJUTORS.

The year just closed has been marked, also, by the removal of two of the most prominent laborers sustained by us in heathen lands. The Rev. Amos Sutton, D.D., for more than 30 years an able, faithful Missionary of the English General Baptist Mission, died, after a few days' illness, the 17th of August last, at Cuttack, Orissa, in the 53d year of his age. His early, constant, and most important relations to this Society, seemed to your Board of Managers to render proper a full and distinct minute upon our records, indicating our sense of bereavement by this dispensation. It is pleasant to recall, in this connection, the simple fact that, in the second year of our Society's history, a fervent appeal was sent to us, by this beloved brother, for the requisite aid to furnish Gospels for distribution throughout Orissa. Nor was this plea disregarded. Immediately a grant of 1,000 dollars was made by us for this purpose, followed up by similar or larger appropriations for several succeeding years.

During the former official connection of the present Corresponding Secretary with our Society, Brother Sutton thus wrote to him :—"For myself, I feel no satisfaction with any part of my work equal to that of preparing and teaching the Word of God. Heaven and earth may pass away, human systems and human wisdom may pass away, but the Word of God abideth forever."

How appropriate and impressive is such a testimony from one whom the Lord raised up and sustained to complete the version of the Bible into the Oriya or Orissa language! Our Society rendered, in all the later periods of this enterprise, the requisite pecuniary aid, amounting in all to about 10,000 dollars. This devoted Missionary, while on his second and last visit to this country in 1850, concerted with the executive officers of our Society an extensive and complete plan of operations, by which, in five or six years, he intended to permeate the entire district of Orissa with the Word of God, faithfully and prayerfully distributed among her numerous and semi-civilized population. The pecuniary support for this operation was to be furnished by us, as required for this purpose, both to supply the requisite copies of Scriptures, and to compensate the Superintendent and the native assistants whom he might find it requisite to employ. With characteristic ardor, on his return to India, Dr. Sutton entered on the execution of this plan, and lived long enough to see it largely, though not entirely, achieved. His brethren of the same Mission, who cordially approved of and entered into his plans, will doubtless complete what he so well begun.

So much was he interested in this kind of labor, that he willingly offered himself to us, to superintend similar enterprises in connection with all our India Missions. Some correspondence was held on this subject, and not unlikely, had his valued life been prolonged, he might have spent some years in such delightful and responsible labors. In the Periodical Paper for January last, an appropriate tribute to the inestimable worth of this long-trying and faithful, this great and good man, was gratefully inserted, from the minute entered on the Records of the Board of Managers.

Scarcely were our tears wiped away, occasioned by the removal of Dr. Sutton, when, if possible, the still more afflictive tidings reached us of the departure of Rev. Josiah Goddard, the indefatigable and successful translator of the Scriptures into the Chinese language. In our last Report, his early selection and eminent fitness for this great life-work, to which so successfully he devoted himself, were gratefully chronicled. Little did we then think that so soon we should have cause to mourn what to our short-sightedness seems his premature removal and our irreparable loss. Indeed, it has required much more than an ordinary exercise of submission to the Divine will to say from the heart, in view of such a breaking down of long-cherished hopes on the apparent eve of their accomplishment, "The will of the Lord be done." Yet we know that the resources of infinite love and faithfulness are inexhaustible; and though, to our short-sightedness, clouds and darkness seem to be round about Him, yet righteousness and judgment are the habitation of His throne. Most fitting and appropriate would it be to enter more fully into the rehearsal and grateful commemoration of what God did by him. But this service has been wisely devolved on another, whose ample experience in the difficulty of these labors in the same enervating climate admirably qualify him for this labor of love. [Allusion is here made to the Anniversary Sermon before the Society, expected from the Rev. Dr. William Dean, whose illness prevented; and the service was most acceptably performed by Rev. Dr. Magoon.] Other deaths, in our country as well as abroad, particularly that of Rev. J. G. Pike, senior Secretary of the General Baptist Mission, England, and one of our valued correspondents, give to us solemn warning that what we would do must be done quickly.

The distribution of the Scriptures in the foreign fields of our enterprise connected with the operations of our beloved Missionary Union, are decidedly encouraging; and the indications now are, that a more enlarged sphere for the legitimate operations of a Bible Society as the distributor of the Life-giving Word among those ready to perish, is now opening upon us, to be closed no more until the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord. Many of the signs of the times are certainly auspicious. The fields are white for the harvest, and the call which God's providence is making on us to lift up our eyes and behold them, and to send forth the harvesters and gather the sheaves, should be promptly complied with. Unmistakable indications of the transcendent importance of giving the Word of God, faithfully representing the mind of the Spirit, and giving it to all men, meet our eyes, and fasten on our convictions from every side. At such a time, it is treason against our Master's honor, and the best interests of our fellow-men, to neglect or even delay the endeavor to publish the glad-tidings to every creature.

From these general views, we now turn to the specific duty incumbent on us in this Annual Report, to give, as briefly and clearly as possible, a distinct outline of our operations the last year, commencing with the

HOME DEPARTMENT.

This part of our operations embraces two distinct but related spheres, viz., the collection of funds, and the diffusion of the Scriptures among the destitute, and indeed among all who expect their supplies, either gratuitously or by purchase from our hands. It has become more and more obvious for years past, that these two branches should be closely interlinked, so that every solicitor of funds whom we send forth to plead the cause of the destitution of the world, shall become also the agent for supplying, both directly and indirectly, those who can be reached within his sphere, with the lively oracles of God. This duty on the part of our agents is now the more necessary, because of the failure of so large a proportion of the auxiliaries themselves to superintend the home supply of the Scriptures. In former Reports this subject has been discussed at sufficient length; the policy of originating or even sustaining auxiliaries other than the churches, except where depositories are to be established and watched over, and Bible Colporteurs to be employed, is almost by common consent abandoned. With more abundant reason, therefore, will it henceforth be expected of our travelling agents to superintend in their respective spheres, the supply of the destitute. Hence the fitness of including in the designation of such agents, as our kindred organization the American Bible Society now does, both these functions—calling them, as we henceforth do, “collecting and distributing agents.”

When properly understood, this will make their errands more welcome, and will serve to indicate to all who carefully scan the very considerable expense of this branch of our service, what is the valuable consideration which warrants such an outlay.

Not a little embarrassment has again been experienced by us as in some former years, by such providential interpositions as have deprived us of the valued services of several of our tried and successful agents. This and the resignation of our esteemed Financial Secretary, Rev. J. J. Woolsey, in the middle of the year, with the influence of the large subscription lately made for the Bible House Fund, and the stringent pressure of the times, have together reduced our receipts for the ordinary purposes of the Society a few thousand dollars (while, including the $19,000 for the Building Fund, they amount to $15,000 more than in any preceding year except the last), and have thrown on the Board and the Committees the necessity of curtailing appropriations in some instances, and delaying them in others. But these hindrances are regarded as only temporary checks in the general advance which has of late so uniformly marked our course. Nor are such fluctuations, however unwelcome, either unprecedented in our experience, or peculiar to our own Society. The Board of Managers, fully sympathizing with the earnest wishes and expectations of their supporters and coöperators in all parts of the home field, will endeavor to use the best and most reliable methods to ensure hereafter not only a return to the measure of our last and most prosperous year, but to exceed that greatly, and repair all temporary deficiencies.

As has been justly argued on former occasions [see Xth Annual Report—near the end], the true method to correct a disproportionate amount of expenditure in the transaction of the Society's business, is greatly to increase the annual receipts.

They ought to be from the present time at least fifty per cent. greater than hitherto. Nor would this augmentation essentially enlarge the expense accounts for incidentals, or “the machinery of benevolence,” as it has sometimes been called, while it would largely diminish the per centage of these charges, as is earnestly desired by the Board.

It may be gratifying to the Society to notice the particular sources of the supply of funds placed at our disposal, and to compare them with the average of former years.

The receipts from LEGACIES are always likely to vary very widely from one year to another, and hence is the least reliable of any source of our income. None but small amounts have the last year been received from such bequests as have become already available, while it is known, and may be here referred to with gratitude, that generous sums have in this way been sacredly devoted in several instances, which have not yet become due.

AUXILIARIES.

The last three of our Annual Reports have not contained the long lists of the names and dates of origin of these professed helpers in our great work. The reason for this seemed obvious and just. For, a large class of them lying within States no longer embraced in the home field of our operations, and yet having never notified us of withdrawal from their relations, it seemed scarcely just to them or to ourselves to retain them in a relation so entirely nominal. Moreover, if their names were to be omitted from our printed lists because they had ceased to coöperate with us, the rule seemed by impartial justice to require that others, practically as little connected with the parent Society, should also be omitted. For these reasons the following table will embrace only the names of such auxiliaries as have purchased Bibles and Testaments, or made donations within the last four years. If any others shall be resuscitated and recommence their appropriate work, it will hereafter afford us gratification again to insert them in our Annual Lists.

It is expected that new and enlarged efforts will be put forth, by our agents, and all our more active and persevering friends, to awaken in the auxiliaries a determination to engage vigorously in the home supply of the destitute, within their reach. In other cases, the necessity for this work will induce the formation of new auxiliaries, to establish and watch over local depositories, and by colporteur, or volunteer labor, to distribute widely the inspired volume.

A TABLE containing the year of recognition; and the remittances for each of the last four years, with their totals from each AUXILIARY since its origin.

ISSUES DURING THE YEAR.

From the Depository Agent's Report herewith submitted, a fair view may be gained of the receipts and issues, and the volumes on hand, for the last and the preceding year. If the comparison is less favorable than could be desired, let it be remembered that the preceding year showed a larger achievement in this department than any of its predecessors in our whole history; and moreover, the unfavorable influences of a local and we trust only temporary character, are also to be considered. The endeavor has been sedulously prosecuted to keep our supplies varied, full, and excellent, and only to advance the prices as kindred Societies did theirs—so as barely to meet the actual cost of the publications. Enhanced prices of paper, of binders' materials, and of labor in the early part of the year especially, forced on us and on them also, the unwilling necessity of a considerable advance on some of the books of most frequent demand. This has been from time to time modified, so as to bear as little unfavorably as possible on auxiliaries, or other benevolent organizations, or even individuals, who purchase to distribute gratuitously, or at low prices, among the destitute.

It is susceptible of demonstration that this work may be and should be vastly increased, with direct and indirect advantage both to givers and receivers. It by no means follows that where we make grants for supplying the destitute, that these Bibles and Testaments are in full a gift. We encourage all who can do so, to pay in whole or in part the cost of the books. They will ordinarily prize them more highly, and appreciate the worth of our endeavors in their behalf more adequately, if they pay what they can for a Bible or a Testament.

Much needs to be done in some instances, by a volunteer or colporteur agency, to teach the ignorant to read intelligently God's Word, and this opens before Bible distributors a most important field of usefulness. Another class have to be convinced of the erroneousness of the views in which they have been educated, viz., that the Bible is not a book for the people, but only a book for the priests. Line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a great deal of instruction, persuasion, illustration, argument—must often be employed to secure the entrance of God's Word, which giveth light. Your Board of Managers, appreciating more and more the magnitude of these interests for all the population, of every tongue and color, within the United States and our territories, are determined to do their utmost to reach them all with the proffer of the Scriptures. In view of these considerations, the Board have become duly sensible of the importance of enlarged operations, commensurate with the nationality of our Society; and it is expected that this subject will receive early and prompt attention the present fiscal year.

LIFE MEMBERS AND LIFE DIRECTORS.

The number of these who have completed their payments, and of those in progress, is decidedly cheering. Twenty-one Life Directors and three hundred and ninety-three Life Members, have already been enrolled since our last Report.

Some considerations in regard to the continued publication of these entire lists, with the vast amount of errors which they must contain,—especially in reference to the present residences of these individuals, scattered through many States where our agency is no longer prosecuted, and where we have none but the most casual and unreliable means of rendering the corrections of the list accurate and satisfactory, were presented in our last Annual Report. So far as the expression of opinion which we then solicited has reached us, it is decidedly favorable to the course there suggested as desirable, viz., to attempt, after the present year, nothing more than to give the names of new Life Members and Life Directors in our printed lists. This can be done in a fair, large type, and with nearly perfect accuracy as to the residence of each; while the old lists, now amounting of these memberships complete to some seven thousand names, will not be annually reproduced, at very considerable expense, and with such a proportion of errors as to be altogether unsatisfactory.

The number of those who continue to avail themselves of their cheerfully accorded privilege—to draw plain, cheap Bibles and Testaments for supplying the destitute, at the rate of one dollar's worth for a Life Member, and two dollars and a half worth for a Life Director, each year, if called for within that year, is steadily increasing, and it may reasonably be hoped that much good is thus annually accomplished. Each Member and Director should understand, that if they do not avail themselves of this privilege, the forbearance enables the Society to extend its grants just so much more widely each year, so that no accumulated claims of this kind can be allowed.

There only remains for notice in this connection the RECEIPTS FROM CHURCHES AND INDIVIDUALS, which have of late been the principal source of our income. That there should be noticeable a very considerable diminution of these, is precisely what was to have been expected under the circumstances above explained. The fact, moreover, should be borne in mind, that in the six North-Western States we have had next to no agency for the entire year; some who were appointed having unexpectedly failed, until too late effectually to supply their places. The whole sum from this source last year received was $26,700 59, more than equal to any former year, except the last two.

FOREIGN APPROPRIATIONS.

For reasons explained at considerable length in the last Annual Report, these foreign grants from our treasury must be expected to vary widely in amount from year to year. It was early foreseen that owing to extensive changes in the internal arrangements of our Oriental Missions, under the direction of the Missionary Union, it might prove impracticable to enter with becoming vigor and enlargement on the publication and distribution of the Scriptures during the last year. Hence there has been greater willingness on our part to cultivate more sedulously and thoroughly than hitherto certain portions of the wide field which God's favoring providence had laid open before us, not subject to the above temporary restrictions. Following the geographical order of propinquity, we begin with the

CANADIAN FRENCH.

The nearness of their location to us, some of them having actually passed over the line and settled within the United States, and the residence of others, even a large proportion of the whole number lying scarcely a day's ride beyond our boundaries, gives special interest to their case. The entire number of these is probably not less than three-fourths of a million. They are of somewhat peculiar character and temperament, which require to be carefully considered, in all efforts for their religious enlightenment. Hoping to have, in an address from one who for years has been successfully engaged in efforts for their evangelization, a fuller and more accurate view during this Anniversary than ever before, it is quite unnecessary here to attempt more than a mere outline of our endeavors for disseminating among them the sacred Scriptures. One of the chief impediments to success results from the inability of the large portion of both the adults and the children to read. Hence the endeavor, by means of colporteurs acting both as Bible-readers and teachers in Sabbath schools, family schools, and, even in some instances, teachers of individuals, to kindle the desire to learn to read, and then aid the accomplishment of it. Considerable success has already attended these efforts. Moreover, it has been found advantageous to employ more of these laborers at those seasons of the year when most attention can be secured on the part of the humble habitants or cottagers. This care has been measurably taken off our hands by the efficient Bible Auxiliary of the Grande Ligne Mission. Originated at our suggestion, this Society has this year, for the first time, been rendering important aid to the good work, in selecting for us the requisite colporteurs, superintending their labors, and reporting to us and to the public the extent of their services, and the compensation to which they were entitled. In this way, not only has more money been expended in this work than in any former year, but there is reason to hope that it has been more wisely and economically applied. The Auxiliary has also raised a handsome sum, considering the circumstances of the members, and applied it, by our direction, to the same work.

Very pleasant is it to follow these humble, faithful colporteurs, as they go from hamlet to hamlet, bearing the Scriptures to the destitute, and enabling them to read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest God's Word, for the purpose of their enlightenment and edification. Sometimes, indeed, they are rudely repulsed, and even maltreated; but there is perceptible a growing disposition to receive and peruse the Scriptures, of a most encouraging character. It is our purpose judiciously to increase from year to year our appropriations to this field, so that these our neighbors shall not, unless by their own guilty choice, remain unblessed with the book of God. The following letter contains recent intelligence of an interesting character:

REV. AND DEAR SIR:—Your colporteurs have labored faithfully and with many marks of success during the past four months.

Brother R., the oldest and most successful colporteur in the Mission, has spent a good share of his time in the western part of our field. The Mission, as yet, has been unable to settle permanently here the laborer which this part of the vineyard so urgently demands. Meanwhile, Brother R. has been the main stay of the cause. To visit this field, upward of fifty miles from his residence, he has absented himself from his family from two to three weeks at a time. His journeys have invariably been successful. Several new families have become secretly accessible to the truth. Among these are a near relative of a Roman Catholic priest and a wealthy farmer, noted in his parish for his intelligence and knowledge of law. Brother E. was visiting the former recently, just at the time when a cunning emissary from the priest came to make a great effort to bring the family back to the church. His design was, however, completely thwarted by our brother's presence. Families already favorable to the truth of the Gospel have been visited, encouraged, instructed, and thus prepared to make an open profession, and face the rage and ridicule of the surrounding masses. Not long since, our brother spent a whole night in free, serious conversation, with a good number of heads of families, who assured him that they were Protestants at heart as truly as himself. This brother is the only living teacher of upwards of forty families in that region, who are willing to receive the truth, and who are secretly though constantly advancing in the right path. A door has been opened to him in a new parish. The manner this has been effected is well worth mention. Some eight or ten years since, a very ordinary appearing old man (indeed, a man quite inferior in every respect but in piety) passed through this parish, selling Testaments and Bibles. His appearance, I suppose, was too insignificant to arouse suspicion or opposition from any quarter. Several bought of his books. The good seed has been working since, and a few intelligent families have thus been prepared to receive the living teacher.

There is no part of our field more promising than this western district,—no part where, if God bless the work commenced, there will be more intellect and wealth brought into the service of the cause of truth in Canada.

Henryville and vicinity have occupied the rest of Brother E.'s time.

Brother P. succeeded in establishing a school in a new field, of which he took charge himself. The efforts of the priest have stopped the school, but the influence of the effort of our colporteur remains; a few families have become Protestants. His journal reports seventy-four visits, apart from his labors in the school, which, for a time, brought upward of fifteen children and their parents under his influence. He speaks of cheering progress in a good number of families visited. Two young men, to whom he gave a Testament as they left his neighborhood for the States, have returned Protestants. From strenuous opponents they have become his warm supporters. He has occasionally met with the priests. One of these interviews has been published, to the great displeasure of one of them, who, in the course of private conversation, made strange concessions. The priest has since endeavored to make a reply in the columns of our Protestant paper. Brother N. and Brother B. have sent no report. The latter is the son of one of our good Protestant farmers, and was desirous of spending the winter months in doing good among his countrymen. A few others have been encouraged to labor more or less, gratuitously.

P. S.—Brother N., spoken of above, has succeeded in organizing a small French Baptist church in his field. The news just came to hand, with an invitation to me from this brother to spend the second Sabbath of this month with them, and baptize three new converts.

With much Christian regard, I remain,

Yours truly,

JAS. N. WILLIAMS, Secretary.

IN NEW MEXICO.

It will be recollected that last year we expressed our deep regret that we had been unsuccessful in getting proper instruments for carrying on the good work of Bible distribution, as we had desired. Early in the Autumn, however, one, and then another, and finally a third—all cases of recent conversion among those who were natives or long residents in the Territory—offered themselves for our acceptance, and were promptly commissioned to serve as our Bible colporteurs in that needy district.

Generous supplies of Bibles and Testaments—some of them a liberal grant to us for this purpose by the American Bible Society—have been sent, at great expense for transportation, by wagon route across the plains, from the remote borders of Missouri and Kansas to Santa Fé and Albuquerque, and have been greedily welcomed by the Missionaries who have so eloquently and perseveringly plead for this supply. Notwithstanding the great cost of the volumes thus conveyed, we have felt warranted in such an outlay by the exigencies of this case. If that singular people are ever to be fitted for the duties and privileges of self-government, so as to become useful and safe co-partners with us in our great Republic, we must now help them. Nor is any assistance we can render comparable to the blessed guide-book of God, and the means of learning to read it understandingly. To both these branches of their duty, our laborers in that field will give earnest and persevering attention. Our neighbors of the American Tract Society have, at our instance, granted, for the use of these colporteurs, some hundreds of their beautiful Primer in the Spanish language, admirably adapted to assist the ignorant, whether adults or children, in learning to read. Five thousand pages of Spanish tracts were also granted by that Society, for free distribution among the destitute and ignorant in that Territory. These labors are already beginning to produce favorable results of cheering promise, and the desire of the Missionaries on the ground, and of our Board also, is speedily to enlarge them, so that they may be made in some degree more commensurate with the magnitude of the demand.

MEXICO

itself, according to present indications, will not remain much longer shut against the light of God's Word, and controlled in religion and government by Jesuit emissaries of Rome. How important must it appear to every true Christian, that the earliest possible openings should be improved to begin the distribution of the quickening leaven, which only is competent to raise the mass of her degraded population to the enjoyment of true and abiding soul-freedom. Lying side by side with us, fully across the continent, as her territory does, we have the deepest possible interest in fulfilling the Saviour's mandate, to love our neighbor as we love ourselves. This principle obviously demands of us their supply of the sacred Scriptures, at the earliest practicable period.

NEW GRANADA.

Farther down the coast of Central America lies the interesting Republic of New Granada. Geographically, its relations to our United States are interesting and important, since across her territory the first railroad connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific slope has been completed by the capital, the enterprise, and under a charter held by our fellow-citizens. This has led many of our countrymen to settle at each of the termini of that road, thus increasing our interest in whatever pertains to that country or its government. Its area is nearly 400,000 square miles, almost as large as the whole seventeen Eastern States, both northern and southern.

This is the intertropical country of the Western hemisphere, and in its topographical aspect, presents a greater diversity than that of almost any other country: high mountains, extensive plains, wide valleys, and table lands rising among the Cordilleras, vary the physiognomy of the country in an admirable manner, presenting many attractions and beauties of the most picturesque character.

At this interesting crisis in her history, New Granada has revolutionized her government so far as to break with the Pope of Rome—to dissolve the entangling alliance of Church and State, and allow religion to be—as the Bible and the God of the Bible designed it—FREE. Immediately there comes to us a call for Bibles and Testaments, and the means of distributing them, where now no impediment exists to their wide circulation. It is ascertained that the entire population embraced within her boundaries is between two and a half and three millions, or but little less than that of our own country at the period of the Declaration of our National Independence. Nearly all these, except the Indians, speak, and many of them read, the Spanish language. Thus invited and urged to enter on this field, we have not felt at liberty to decline; and our first adventure of four or five hundred Bibles and Testaments are already on their way to that country, a mere earnest, we trust, of what is to follow in succeeding years.

Assuredly we shall look with intense solicitude for the reports which we are warranted to expect from Mr. Watts, former British Vice-Consul at Carthagena, to whose care we have committed these Scriptures, with a small supply of Spanish Primers and Tracts, granted for this purpose to us by the American Tract Society. Should this first experiment prove satisfactory, we must seek there also, by the employment of a subsidiary agency, for such colporteur and Bible reading labors as are adapted to the wants of the population.

HAYTI

has again appealed to us, not in vain, for further aid, in furnishing her the Scriptures—some 850 copies having been granted, on application of Rev. Mr. Judd, of the Baptist Free Mission Society, for her benefit.

CHINESE IN CALIFORNIA.

Of the Chinese in California something was said in our last Report; and we have now the satisfaction of knowing that our esteemed brother, Shuck, has entered successfully upon the work of their evangelization. Though the lamented death of Brother Goddard in China caused some little delay in sending, according to our order, the 1,000 Chinese Testaments for the use of Brother Shuck and his assistant, yet we trust that by this time they have been received, and will lead the way to many similar or larger grants hereafter. Two drafts on us of $300 each have been made by this beloved brother, to aid him in the beginning of his work.

GERMAN IMMIGRANTS.

The Germans in our own country and in Canada have continued to make pretty large demands upon our liberality for supplying them promptly and amply with the sacred Scriptures. The German Missionaries and Pastors very generally engage in this work zealously; and besides these, we are constantly sustaining, directly or through some of our auxiliaries, a few faithful colporteurs in this work, whose labors God has largely blessed.

FROM FRANCE,

where we have continued to make the appropriation each year to aid in Scripture distribution, as asked by our Missionary Union, we have received no information whatever since the return of Dr. Devan, nearly two years since. It is known generally, that while considerable impediments and persecutions are there experienced, the Word of God is to a gratifying extent circulated, and the demand for it, in certain localities, increases encouragingly.

CENTRAL EUROPE

continues to present before us a wide and most encouraging field, which we have long and liberally cultivated, with most decided and increasing success. While the Rev. Mr. Oncken was in this country, striving so earnestly to raise contributions for the erection of chapels for the feeble churches in Germany, and to secure all the assistance in his power, from new sources as well as old, to aid the enlargement of his Bible distribution, he urged us with such fervency to increase our appropriations to him for this purpose, that our Board consented to devote to that object 12,000 dollars, including his receipts for the Scriptures sold on our account, estimated by him at 5,000 dollars, during the year 1854. This sum was paid to him quarterly. By it he was enabled to increase his Scripture issues to the large amount of 76,443 copies of Scripture, mostly Bibles and Testaments. But in doing this, and sustaining from fourteen to twenty colporteurs, he incurred some debt, so that his entire expenditure on our account for that year amounted to 14,950 dollars: something more than 1,000 being carried to the debtor side, for the present year, and the receipts from Scriptures sold being in the aggregate 1,118 dollars more than the estimate. Hence, for this as well as other reasons, his strong desire that we should appropriate to his use for this year also, a sum as large as the last. To this there are some serious objections,—the undue proportion amounting to more than one-fourth of our whole income, which will thus be required for a single country. The fact that from us and others in this country, if they fulfil his expectations, such appropriations will in the aggregate reach about 23,000 dollars per annum—a larger sum than one denomination has ever granted to any one foreign country for Bible distribution, and larger than proper regard for the German immigrants to this country, with other similar classes here, will allow; and larger, certainly, than can be warranted, when the demands of all others, at home and abroad, are taken into account. While these considerations have much weight on the one side, the Board have felt the force of nearly equal reasons on the other, some of them set forth with much earnestness in the letters addressed to us, and have therefore felt themselves scarcely able to judge what is their best course. Could they be assured of such increased contributions as would render it safe for them to pledge this large sum again consistently with other claims more exclusive in their requisitions upon them, they would rejoice to do so. The fact that God has so richly blessed both the Scriptures distributed, and the labors of the indefatigable colporteurs, pleads loudly and eloquently in corroboration of our brother Oncken's appeals; the last of which, received since this Report was principally written, is here subjoined.

Rev. Rufus Babcock, D. D., Sec. A. & F. R. S. New York:

MY DEAR BROTHER:—The account for 1854, accompanied by a few lines which I mailed on the 20th February, will, I trust, have come to hand in due time. I have been since then very unwell and unable to attend to my usual engagements, and it is only to-day that I have found a little relief. I fear that my present indisposition is only the effect of the Norwalk disaster, and the excitement to which I was more or less subject whilst in the United States. I hope, however, that with the returning milder weather and the Lord's blessing, my impaired health will be invigorated so as to enable me yet to labor a little longer in the blessed work in which I have been so long engaged.

Along with the accompanying Journals of some of the Society's Colporteurs, I send a brief view of their labors during the past year, as extracted from their journals and letters by my daughter. Their labors, however, as you are aware, are not confined to the mere sale of the Scriptures, but that they perform a large amount of important missionary work in connection with the colportage. Thus your Colporteurs have distributed in 1854, at least 100,000 religious Tracts, and, without any exception, they have aided us to supply our increasing stations, where the Gospel is regularly preached. We are therefore under lasting obligations to your Board, not only for furnishing us with the means of circulating the holy Scriptures so extensively, but also for sustaining so many devoted men, through whom thousands are constantly directed to the Lamb of God. It is now, of course, a point of great solicitude with me, to be informed by your respected Board what aid we may expect for the present year.

The demand for the Scriptures is increasing, in good proportion, as the field of our labor expands, and I would, therefore, most earnestly entreat your Board to aid us to the utmost extent of their ability.

The octavo Bible and pocket Testament will, in a very short time, be exhausted, and unless speedy aid is received, we shall be placed in great difficulties.

Let the fact, that during the past year upwards of 300 of our members, from various churches, emigrated to the United States, have its influence with your Board in making its appropriations for Germany. America thus shares in the rich blessing with which the Lord continues to crown our feeble efforts.

Our interview with the King of Prussia, at Potsdam, in January last, has been already attended with happy results, inasmuch as the king sent on the 24th February, 1855, ten Prussian dollars to Brother Stangnowsky,* to prevent his being imprisoned for having conducted a religious meeting.

From the accounts which have already appeared in American periodicals, you will have learnt that we met with most gracious reception from the King of Prussia. Now farewell, my dear brother. With affectionate regard to yourself and all the members of your Board,

Yours, in the best of bonds,

J. G. ONCKEN.

COLPORTEURS OF THE AMERICAN &amp; FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY IN 1854.

J. Andresson, b. colp. since 1850. Was formerly schoolmaster in a national school, and lost his situation on becoming a Baptist. He is devoted to the work in which he is engaged, and has put forth unwearied efforts to introduce our Bibles into schools. His acquaintance with many schoolmasters prepared the way for him, but the want of the Apocrypha proved an obstacle, until from repeatedly pointing attention to the low price, superior print, &c., of our books, prejudice has been overcome, and he has now the pleasure of seeing them greatly in demand among the youth of Holstein. He also sells many Bibles and Testaments at fairs.

Sold in 1854—1,090 Bibles and 876 Testaments.

Leopold Aua, b. colp. since 1858. Labors in the country surrounding Landsberg, in East Prussia. He, also, was formerly a schoolmaster. His diligence and self-denial in the fulfilment of his duty as colporteur, are spoken of as exemplary by those who witness it. These qualities, together with an uncommon degree of fearlessness in introducing the Word of God, have led to gratifying results. Though the people, especially the inhabitants of the R. C. Ermeland, are poor, he has succeeded in awakening so much interest in the Word of God, that not a few, at a personal sacrifice, and at the risk of coming under the penalties of the mother church, have bought Bibles and Testaments. By the request of the people, B. Aua has also held meetings in various places. These have been followed by fines, and consequent confiscation of his property. His house at present contains only the merest necessities, yet his confidence is unshaken and his zeal undiminished.

Sold in 1854—800 Bibles and 408 Testaments.

Bettfreund in North Schleswig, b. c. since 1852. Had formerly a lucrative trade, but was led by a desire to do something for the spiritual good of his countrymen, to abandon his business and become a Bible Colporteur. So great, however, was the enmity evinced against him, that when he wished to build a house at Nartorp, a more central place than his former residence, no one would sell him a site. His repeated petitions for a sanction to act as Colporteur have remained unanswered. He goes out, nevertheless, and is well received by the peasantry, who are his chief customers.

Sold in 1854—398 Bibles and 108 Testaments.

Beyebach at Hersfeld in Hessa, b. col. since 1847. In this land of political and religious oppression, the labor of the Bible Colporteur is particularly hindered. Not a gate can be passed without a passport or legitimation, and every gend'arme has the right to stop him. Quite recently B. Beyebach has also received a command no longer to expose Bibles for sale in his window. Yet notwithstanding the restrictions imposed on all Baptists in Hessa, their work prospers. This is, in a great measure, owing to the love and esteem which their blameless life has for them with the people. The latter are their friends, and often of their own accord come to ask for Bibles and Tracts.

Sold in 1854—148 Bibles and 439 Testaments.

Cramme in Hanover, b. colp. since 1847. Travels throughout Germany. Wherever an opening occurs, Br. Cramme, regardless of difficulties or personal comfort, is ready to embrace. Though a plain-spoken man, he possesses a pleasing naïvete, which makes him alike welcome with high and low. His stated labors are chiefly in the mining districts of the Harz Mountains, where a desire for God's Word has of late become specially evident. Several miners have been converted simply by reading the Scriptures, and have put on Christ in baptism.

Sold in 1854—238 Bibles and 756 Testaments.

Klinker in Schlesien lives among a bigoted Roman Catholic people. The priests act as gend'armes to him, and jealously watch every movement. It is therefore only secretly, I fear, he can gain access to the houses and cottages around. Still an ever-wakeful desire to place the Word of God in the hands of those who receive only its counterfeit, has enabled him in many instances to accomplish his purpose. His journeys extend to the Austrian frontiers; and even into that empire, which is closed against all Evangelical truth, Br. Klinker has contrived to convey the Scriptures.

Sold in 1854—198 Bibles and 418 Testaments.

J. Lange at Elberfeld was many years a colporteur of the British and Foreign Bible Society. He left this service on becoming unable to take the long journeys required of him. Br. Lange is now engaged in circulating the Word of God throughout the Valley of the Wupper, where the recent important religious movements have led many to search the Scriptures, who before were all but in name strangers to them. He frequently accompanies Br. Ribbeck (one of the clergymen who seceded from the national church) on his Missionary tours, and follows up the preaching of the Word by supplying those who hear it with Bibles.

Sold in 1854—376 Bibles and 1,300 Testaments.

Nutzharn, Bible colp. since 1853. Occupies an extensive and important field of labor in the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg. There, where more than in any other part of Germany, infidelity and rationalism have established their throne, the Bible comes truly as a great light in a dark place. No opposition being offered by the government, Br. Nutzharn is at liberty to visit the farmers throughout the country. Among the towns where he labors is Bremerhaven, where he has during the past year sold many Bibles.

Sold in 1854—1,430 Bibles and 865 Testaments.

Reichard, Bible colp. since 1848. At Flinth in the Odenwald. A Roman Catholic population. Br. R. not having free access to the houses, takes advantage of the resorts for pilgrims, with which the country abounds. They are visited frequently by large companies of pilgrims, who come to seek the cure of some bodily ailment, but Br. Reichard directs their attention to their greater mental sickness, and to the cure afforded by the Word of God. The Gospels separately bound, which have a cross on the title-page, are well received.

Sold in 1854—194 Bibles and 1,369 Testaments.

A. Rittmann, Bible colp. since 1849. Labors in Hamburg. There, where little of the fear of God is to be found, it is no easy task to offer his Word. Scorn; contempt, and ridicule, form a part of the Bible colporteur's daily experience. On the other hand, sometimes where least expected, he is well received, and his work appreciated. The numerous emigrants who pass through Hamburg Br. Rittmann makes his special care, and besides supplying them with Bibles and Tracts, brings all who will come to our place of worship.

Sold in 1854—512 Bibles and 1,184 Testaments.

E. Stangnowski, b. colp. since 1853. In East Prussia. Formerly schoolmaster. Makes long tours, and finds little difficulty in introducing the Bible to schools.

Sold in 1854—773 Bibles and 1,363 Testaments.

Schlesier, b. colp. since 1847. In the Duchy of Schleswig. There, too, all religious liberty is denied the Baptists, and although the Bible is greatly needed, Br. Schlesier's labors are hindered in every way, as his journal shows. He has, nevertheless, succeeded in selling in 1854—515 Bibles and 1,974 Testaments.

Zeschke, b. colp. since 1851. Between Berlin and Stettin in Prussia. He labors among the people living along the Oder, and has frequent opportunities for circulating the Scriptures among seamen, in various small ports. Br. Z. has found the reduction of prices a great assistance.

Sold in 1854—615 Bibles and 928 Testaments.

The following note, from the Prussian Court Marshal, Count Keller, to Rev. G. W. Schmarm, proves the unwillingness of His Majesty the King to sanction religious persecution in his dominions:

"Royal Court Marshal's Office."

"In replying to the communication of your reverence of 19th inst., I have much pleasure in respectfully informing you that His Majesty the King, in consequence of my representation of the teacher, Stangnowski's petition, has graciously commanded me to send you the accompanying ten dollars, which you will please so to apply as to prevent Mr. Stangnowski's imprisonment.

"BERLIN, February 24th, 1855."

A letter from Rudolph Stangnowski, Colporteur of the American & Foreign Bible Society, in East Prussia, to Mr. Lehmann, was the occasion of the above note. In it he says:

"GOTDEN, January 18, 1855."

"It is of the Lord that we are not consumed. His mercy is never ending, and is every morning new. Thus must I exclaim, even at a time when each day brings with it some new trouble. Since my return from Hamburg (in September, 1854), the storm has raged without ceasing, and while I am made the chief object of oppression, the other brethren are not spared. Many are called to suffer for Christ's sake. The royal circuit-court has of late every week repeated its prohibition of our meetings. We have addressed one petition after another to the royal government at Königsberg for redress against the proceedings of the ruinous courts, but no sooner had a decision been passed in our favor by the government, than the circuit courts devised new annoyances, and finally a decision of the government at Königsberg reached us, sanctioning all that was being done by the circuit courts. We were declared to be but a temporary association, to which Section III. of the law in favor of stated societies could not apply. We were instructed in the first instance to organize ourselves into a fixed society. Nothing now remains us but to apply to the highest authorities in the land, and I am indeed not disinclined myself to seek the presence of our King, to inform him how we are denied the privilege of worshipping the King of kings. Br. Poelke and I have been sentenced to a fine of ten dollars or imprisonment, because, as the accusation says, we are 'the leaders of singing and prayer at an unannounced meeting.' One witness even on his oath declared, he had seen Br. P. reading aloud on his knees from a Bible. On this evidence our brother has been fined ten dollars. . . The evidence against me stated, that Br. Thiunn was the president of the Baptists here, and as such had announced my family-worship, to be a public service. This is the cause of my sentence. I have now sent a remonstrance on our behalf to the Court of Appeals. May the Lord incline those who read it in our favor. Three brethren who had been accused, have been dismissed for want of sufficient evidence. To-morrow I am again to appear at the judicial court, but without knowing for what offence. Scarcely a day passes, on which some new summons does not reach me, but the Lord knows we suffer unjustly, and 'if God be for us, who can be against us?'"

From the Journal of J. Lange, colporteur of the American and Foreign Bible Society.

Not long ago I visited Rotterdam, where there is every reason to believe a Baptist church will soon be formed. Since my return, I received the following letter from a friend there:

MY DEAR BROTHER:—It has now become time for me to address you. The truth of believer's baptism, which during your visit began to be important to me, I have kept in my heart, and prayed for further enlightenment. The more I examine the subject, the more am I convinced that infant baptism is opposed to the Word of God. But, in proportion to the strength of my convictions, I need grace to prevent me from verging either to the right hand or to the left, from the path I see to be prescribed by the Word of God. Hitherto, the Lord has graciously led me.

You know I have some time inclined to the separatish church, (separated from the Reformed National Church,) and, but for your visit, should have become a member. I, however, partook of the Lord's Supper with them, yet without previous confession, which caused much surprise. My future father-in-law asked me why I did not join the church. I frankly confessed my scruples regarding baptism, and, instead of blaming me, he encouraged me to search the Scriptures further, that I might arrive at the truth. He confessed he, too, entertained the same doubts with myself. His hope, however, was, that circumcision may be regarded as the type of baptism, and, consequently, children be its subject.

In a conversation with the dominie, the pastor of the church, I promised, if he could prove to me from the Scriptures that my views were erroneous, I would at once abandon them. But he also referred me to the old covenant and circumcision. A few days ago, he baptized (sprinkled) a pious young woman, whose father, though a member of the separatist church, has long been opposed to infant baptism. I reminded him of this, and endeavored to prove that only faith entitles us to the ordinance. He said, "Do you consider infant baptism wicked?" and I replied, "In my estimation it is idolatry, and as pernicious in its consequences as the Roman Catholic mass."

I communicated the result of my conversations with various persons to my father-in-law, and tried to show him his arguments for infant baptism did not find support in Scripture, and laid particular stress on Hebrews vii. 8.

Since that time, a general searching after the truth on this subject has taken place. It is now becoming manifest that many in the church are convinced of the unscripturalness of infant baptism. I regard this as an indication from the Lord, that, together with me, many dear Christian friends will be brought to a full understanding of their duty. And now I commend the work begun by our prayers, that it may be carried on by the Spirit of God, to the glory of our heavenly Father.

GREECE.

To our faithful and long-tried missionaries in Greece, especially to brother Buel, who has evinced deep interest in this matter, we had the privilege of forwarding, though at a later period than was suggested in our last Report, the beautiful reprint of "Τα Απαντα Του Λουκου" or all the sacred writings of Luke, which was there mentioned, embracing the Gospel which bears his name, and the Acts of the Apostles in Modern Greek. This forms a pretty 18mo volume of 160 pages—costing, in different styles of binding, from 14 to 20 cents a copy. We trust they will be so much prized, that repeated editions will be called for. They can be furnished, as the stereotype plates are now on hand, cheaply and promptly, in any quantities which may be demanded.

Suggestions have been made to us by the missionaries in Greece, for the preparation in a similar way of "all the sacred writings of John," viz., his Gospel, his three Epistles, and the Revelation. Also the book of Proverbs, and perhaps the Psalms. We shall carefully watch the results of this our first experiment of this kind; and if it should prove favorable, these latter requests may hereafter be granted. The results of the mighty contest now carried on with reference to the perpetuity and defence of the Greek church, as established by law, can scarce fail to have great influence, favorable or otherwise, on our work.

AFRICA.

We are again obliged to pass over Africa, as still remaining without further successful efforts on the part of our missionaries for translating the remaining portions of the Scriptures into any of her native languages. The early failure of health on the part of some of our missionary brethren seemed to demand their prompt return; others have died, and therefore the vision of our hope still lingers. When, O when shall we in its fulness witness the fulfilment of the prediction "Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her hands unto God!"

CALCUTTA BAPTIST MISSION.

To the Calcutta Baptist missionaries 1,500 dollars have been transmitted recently, to cover the failure of a similar sum mentioned in the last Report. These indefatigable men, so honored of God for more than a half century's important labors, whereby to such a wide extent the Scriptures have been translated and printed in British India, still hold on the even tenor of their course. For obvious reasons they are now more devoted to revising and perfecting a few of the more important and useful of their versions, than in such tentative efforts as characterized the early years of the Mission, when so many different languages received at their hands attempts at the translation of the sacred Scriptures. Imperfect as many of these necessarily were, it has been stated on most reliable authority, that even the most inadequate of them has been blessed of God, to the conversion and sanctification of souls. In this we may all rejoice, while it by no means diminishes the obligation to render as faultless as possible the transcript of the holy Spirit's teachings, for this and succeeding generations. The Bengalee and Sanscrit Scriptures, which our appropriation was intended to aid to a wider circulation, are unquestionably among the most important for the 150 millions of British India. Indeed, the Sanscrit, as the learned and along with the Pali the sacred language, is having at present, and doubtless will have for centuries to come, immense influence; far beyond the bounds of the British possessions throughout all Oriental countries. Does the spirit of Dr. Carey, who commenced this work, and that of Dr. Yates, who so ably and zealously followed, each from the high and pure sphere of their present state look down with enhanced joy on the efforts now making to give wider circulation to this fruit of their toils and prayers? It may give a chastened zest to our satisfaction in this service, that in it we are so intimately allied to and united with these choice, venerated men, who so labored that we might enter in to their labors, and thus sowers and reapers rejoice together.

THE ORISSA MISSION.

Mention has already been made of the overwhelming bereavement which has befallen that noble band of English General Baptists, by the removal so nearly contemporaneously, of Rev. J. G. Pike, the senior Secretary of the Mission, in England; and of Rev. Dr. Sutton, one of its chief ornaments as an accomplished, indefatigable missionary. A double blow seems thus to have fallen on the present work of the Mission; for its senior member, Rev. John Buckley, has been required to remain in England for a season, at least, to fill the senior Secretary's place; thus reducing still more the effective force of experienced laborers in the field. For these reasons it seemed probable that the Mission would prefer to have our appropriations, which, according to the original design, were to complete the work of Scripture distribution throughout the whole district, delayed or extended through a greater number of years than at first were contemplated. Our correspondence with them has already intimated such a course as desirable. In the meantime, as the letters and journals somewhat extensively published the last year clearly show, the good fruits springing up from the Word already sown are appearing on every side, causing devout thanksgiving to God.

FREE-WILL BAPTIST LABORS AND TRANSLATIONS FOR THE SANTALS.

The Rev. Mr. Phillips, whose interesting efforts for the simple and wild race of men called Santals, we last year noticed, has from regard to his own and his family's health been expected very soon to visit this country, and spend some months in his native land. His enterprise for completing the Santal New Testament will not probably be finished so soon as was anticipated in our last Report. Meanwhile our brethren having that Mission in charge, seem more and more impressed with the desirableness of drawing closer the bonds of fraternal union which make us one in our Bible operations. An increased number of the Free-will Baptist Churches are now coöperating with our Society, and the mutual interests of both are, we trust, promoted by the union. Whenever they are ready to make larger requisitions upon our treasury for their foreign work or the home supply of the destitute, they will find a cordial and liberal response.

ASSAM.

The Rev. Dr. Brown, who has done good service as the translator of the New Testament, though infirm in health, still remains at his post. We know the deep interest which he feels in completing the great work which he has begun. The other missionary brethren in Assam seem to be imbued with a similar spirit; and whether they go forth in the cities, towns, hamlets, or scattered dwellings of the wilderness, either preaching the gospel, or superintending those Christian schools which have been so much blessed in the conversion of scores of the choicest youth, or labor in any other sphere, they bear with them and diffuse around them, widely as possible the sacred Scriptures. As their holy and purifying light shines on the dark minds around them, and only as it is diffused, do they expect any permanent beneficial influence established. We have rejoiced not a little in the testimonies which in this manner, and from all these brethren, have reached us.

One thousand dollars was this year asked by the Union, and has been cheerfully granted by us, to aid the further prosecution of the good work in that part of our field.

In Assam, a "Harmony of the Four Gospels," as far as page 144 (1,500 copies), has been printed. Total number of pages 223,200.

In the Telooogo Mission, an edition of 1,000 copies of the "History of Christ," by Mr. Day, has been printed the last year. It is a volume of 232 pages, wholly in the words of the Four Gospels. There have been distributed of this work, together with Genesis, Exodus, Psalms, and the Four Gospels, separately, 3,540 copies. Also two Hindostanee New Testaments, one Sanscrit New Testament, one Hebrew Old Testament, and a few bound volumes embracing Genesis to Job inclusive, and a few copies of the Four Gospels, bound together. We have appropriated to this Mission for Scripture distribution the last year, five hundred dollars.

BURMAH.

This earliest scene of our Oriental Missions receives still a large measure of attention, and is attracting to itself no insignificant amount of the sympathy, and the effort for future enlightenment and evangelization, the incipient benefits of which have been already experienced. Very gratifying are the testimonies which the faithful missionaries, from time to time, are sending us, of the spiritual fruit which they find springing up from the seed—God's precious truth—which has long been buried in dust, but which now yields the fruits of righteousness. The intrepid and indefatigable Kincaid, under date of Prome, September 20th, 1854, thus writes to the Corresponding Secretary :

MY DEAR BROTHER:—For a long time I have been promising myself to write to you, and mention a few interesting facts connected with the Redeemer's kingdom in Burmah. Since reaching Prome last January, we have baptized forty-five Burmans and fourteen Karens. The records of any single week since last February would furnish reasons to encourage all to pray and labor for the salvation of Burmah. Within fifty miles of us are eight cities and hundreds of villages, and the door of faith is open. We have converts in four cities and five villages. Among these are four men called of God to the work of the ministry, well-educated, with large hearts, and full of faith. The last man, baptized three days ago, is the headman or chief of a village twenty miles north-east of Prome. He has been visiting us for months. During the first visit I found he knew a good deal of the Christian doctrine, and on questioning him found he had the Gospel of John and a bound volume of tracts. I inquired of him when and where he got them. He got them in Prome, sixteen years ago, as near as he could recollect the time; that was about the time we came down from Ava. At a subsequent visit he brought the books, at my request. They have been well read. I gave him a New Testament and the Psalms of David, and tried to get his two books to send home, but he seemed so reluctant to part with them, that I gave it up. For some ten years past he and six others have abandoned Boodhism, and have worshipped God as well as they knew how. The entire village has declared against Boodhism, and is now listening to that Gospel that brings life and immortality to light. Several in that village are now candidates for baptism, and they are putting up a Zayeti or small chapel for public worship. I have not time to give you much in detail now, but will write you soon more particularly.

Some eighteen months before this letter was written, and in anticipation of action upon Dr. Judson's proposal to put one copy of the complete Burman Bible in each city and town in that land, wherever the Burmese language was spoken, our Corresponding Secretary had written to this missionary, Brother Kincaid, in advocacy of that noble proposition, which Judson's last written appeal to our Society had seemed to devolve on us as a sacred duty, so soon as Burmah should be open. As that letter, or rather a garbled perversion of it, has been much commented on, and misconceived, we insert it here in full, from a conviction of its justness and relevancy, and as a simple act of self-defence. It was dated Bible Rooms, N. Y., 7th February, 1853.

After giving, in substance, Dr. Judson's proposition [see Periodical Paper for Oct., 1852], the Secretary added :

"I cannot but think that something like what is above proposed will have these three good effects.

"1. In this transition state of the Burmese minds,—when coming into more close contact and new relations with English and Americans,—to have our great guide book furnished them, so as to be accessible for their examination, would be likely to awaken new interest in their minds, and prepare them for a more favorable hearing of the Gospel.

"2. This would furnish good employment for a class of Burman converts, as yet too much novices to be made preachers, or even colporteurs in the common sense of the word; but they can be porters of Bibles to such towns and villages as are accessible, and make the deposit as directed at the head man's house or principal place of resort, with regard to proper precautions for its safe preservation and use. In this employment I should hope they would become more experienced, and thus more useful for other religious services.

"3. Very subordinate to these high ends, but not utterly unworthy of regard, this plan would provide for using up a considerable portion of the quarto Burman Bible, nearly 4,500 of which have remained on hand for 13 years, blocking the wheels of our appeal for aid in this department, and I presume becoming so antiquated, that in another like period of 13 years, this edition will be cast aside as waste paper. Now I would rather distribute these in any way that was not wickedly wasteful, than have them thus remain useless, and even an impediment to our future progress."

In further illustration of this last head, let it be remembered that Mr. Kincaid, just before he last sailed for Burmah, took an opportunity of conferring with the then Secretary of our Society in the Bible Rooms, and expressing his earnest determination, immediately on his return, to take effective measures for distributing these same Burman Bibles, which had lain neglected and useless so long.

It may reasonably be presumed that Brother Kincaid and the other missionaries are by this time convinced that had they followed out more promptly and fully the enlarged and benevolent designs of our first missionary to Burmah, ampler fruits might ere this have been gathered. While we needlessly linger those heathen miserably perish, to whom we might have sent the word of everlasting life. That somewhat notorious quarto Burman Bible is not likely to be useful for ordinary circulation among a people so rude and simple. Hence the wisdom of such an appropriation of a great part of the edition as Dr. Judson proposed.

It is gratifying to see that the Publishing Committee of the missionaries in Burmah have promptly recommended the republication of more than 30,000 volumes of Scripture in the Burman, Karen, and Peguan languages, and to know that preparation is being made for their early issue from the Maulmain Press.

Indeed, it is high time that those printing the Scriptures for distribution in Burmah should wake up to the performance of so obvious a duty. We have never failed to furnish promptly and generously the funds required for this purpose.

Rev. Dr. Peck, Foreign Corresponding Secretary of the Missionary Union, thus writes, 30th April, 1855 :

At Maulmain the Publication Committee have authorized a new edition of the Burmah New Testament, with Dr. Judson's last revisions, with headings to the chapters, and with references; 10,000 copies, 8 vo; and another of the Sgan Karen New Testament, 5,000 copies, 12 mo; also, Harmony of the Gospels, by Mrs. Wade, the translation according to the New Testament edition, and the arrangement according to Townsend, 5,000 copies, 8 vo.

The Committee, according to the new regulations, were at liberty to put the above to press without waiting for a special authorization from the Executive Committee, being in immediate demand.

They recommended that the Pwo Testament be put to press as soon as prepared. Dr. Mason, the translator, informed us last week that the entire manuscript of the Old and New Testaments is in readiness at Newton, Mass.

No books of Scripture are reported to have been printed last year. The issues were, prior to Sept. 30, 1884:—

		Copies.	Pages.

CHINA.

It only remains for us to notice, in this survey, the so-called Celestial Empire—the oldest as it is by far the largest dominion on our globe, where more than one-half of the unevangelized of that world to which the Saviour more than eighteen centuries since required that His Gospel should be published, are found, reading a common language. The magnitude of the interests here involved, and the urgency which ought to be felt by every one of us to fulfil the Saviour's great commission to this immense multitude, hurrying with us to meet Him at the judgment, may well awaken the most profound concern.

Our Board have not been unmindful of these obligations. Again and again have they brought before their own minds, and by the publications at their command, before our churches and the public, the immensity of these claims.

We need not here repeat what was given in outline, at least, in our last Report, in regard to the revolution in progress as to the dynasty and government of the hundreds of millions of the Chinese. It could not be reasonably expected that such a work, on so broad and magnificent a scale, should be finished at once. Several years have already elapsed since its progress began, and it will probably require as many more to complete it, whether success or failure be the ultimate result. The same diversity of views, as to its probable bearing on the free diffusion of the Scriptures, and Christianity, still prevails, as was noticed in our last Report. In the meantime Brother Goddard, raised up and preëminently qualified for the work of Scripture translation for this people, has finished his course. After completing his New Testament version, with the first three books of the Old, and having his arrangements in great forwardness for the consummation of his pious and enterprising purposes for the completion of the remainder, ["I hope," said he, "in July, to finish the Pentateuch this year,"] the Saviour whom he loved and served so well, was graciously pleased to grant him a not unwelcome respite, and say to him, "Well done, good and faithful, enter into my joy, and sit down at my right hand."

It remains for us to take up the work where he left it, and to give that revised New Testament—so successfully completed—with perhaps a condensed epitome of the Old Testament, the widest practicable circulation among that reading, thinking, shrewd, and more than half-civilized people. How this shall be done, is the question of this age, and emphatically the matter of chiefest concern for our Society in the present generation. As shedding light upon it, we are happy to present in this connection,—as we have already in our last periodical paper at fuller length, the independent, and volunteered, and apparently matured views of one of our oldest and most experienced Missionaries now in China. He was a native of the City of New York, the Sunday-school scholar of one of the principal officers of this Society, a member of one of our churches, and should something like the plan of a special agency for Bible distribution in China, which he advocates, be successfully and vigorously entered upon, we cannot doubt that this chief commercial city of our western hemisphere would cheerfully furnish, to any desirable extent, the requisite extra funds required.

In his own words, and with his own arguments in illustration and enforcement of the plan he has proposed, we finish this part of our survey.

Do you inquire, in view of this truthful representation, Can nothing be done? Must the field of our operations be restricted to the infinitesimal regions occupied by Missionary Boards? I answer affirmatively, with the agency now available. To distribute the Bible throughout the length and breadth of this half of Asia, you require a special agent, a foreigner conversant with the language and customs of the people, having the assistance of native coolporteurs. By such means, and such only, you may send the Word of God from the Pacific to Thibet, from the farthest regions of Manchulism to the coast of Cochin-China; or, if you would embrace all the peoples capable of reading this translation, Corea, Japan, Loo-choo, and Formosa are to be included. An agent, making Shanghai his starting-point, could reach any of these points, printing as he goes, and scattering the sacred volume where it would sooner or later be prized, and to a greater extent than the richest treasury could supply. Were no more cities accessible than at present, a travelling agent could find a year's employment in the distribution of the sacred Scriptures. But the country will wholly or partially be further opened very soon. The foreign ambassadors are now steaming to Peking for that purpose. It is impossible for it to be long delayed. By the time this reaches you, it is likely the Yangty will be opened, if not Pekin also. Should the rebellion, which at one time promised so much, be crushed, the inquiry it will have awakened regarding Christianity will render the Bible more than ever called for. Should success attend the movement, how important that every reading man should possess a copy. Great efforts will be (in fact are) made to get the version which represents the initiatory rite of admission into the Christian Church, a "washing ceremony," the Tactus receptus of the land.

You need an agent to do something towards counteracting this, while missions and missionaries cannot well do. You need, then, it seems to me, some one specially in your own service.

The British and Foreign Bible Society sent one to China when Canton was the only accessible point. It is probable they will send several ere long. Indeed, I hope this, whether our Churches be represented or not, for the work is urgent. A character like Barrow—a bachelor, who could keep perpetually on the wing, is a desideratum. You cannot raise up a man, nor can you find one to your hand without applying to the Missionary Board. If you want an agent, and if you think me a suitable person for the agency, you are at liberty to communicate with the Union on the subject. There are others, perhaps, more capable, but whether there be any equally willing to itinerate is very uncertain. I am, as you know, a layman and a physician. I should expect to spend some time in distributing tracts for the Am. T. Society, and in healing the sick, on behalf of the Medical Missionary Society, and also, by way of relaxation, to make scientific investigations, as I now do. Being blessed with a precious family, whose claims occupy no subordinate place, I may not be able to accomplish in the way of travel all that the friends of Bible-distribution could desire; but if you like to send me, here I am.

I should wish to have the approbation of Dr. Williams, and of the Boston brethren, to any plan you may propose. I have hinted the subject to the Rooms with more readiness, as they have been apprized that so far as this port is concerned, my health is broken down. My petition to be allowed to proceed to Peking, for sanitary as much as for missionary purposes, as soon as that capital may be opened, has been refused. Not that these esteemed brethren feel less interest in the subject than I.

do, but on account of their inability to extend their operations in China, for an indefinitely long period. Missions are conducted here at considerable cost, and it is not strange that they are slow to enlarge them. This is for you to consider. Apart from travelling expenses, and the like, a larger sum would be required by a Bible agent than by a missionary. What with his salary and assistants, not less than $2,000 per annum would probably be called for. A small sum, however, to a Society contemplating such a gigantic enterprise as the circulation of the Chinese Scriptures among the people for whom they are adapted. The British and Foreign Bible Society would gladly engage several such, at double the expense. No competent Baptist, however, could take any part in such a work.

Believe me, dear brother, in the bonds of Christian love, very faithfully yours,

(Signed)

D. J. MACGOWAN.

In Hong Kong, China, of the New Testament complete five hundred copies have been distributed, and eight thousand portions, chiefly the Gospels and Acts.

At Ningpo, Mr. Goddard had proceeded with the translation of the Old Testament, at the time of his death, as far as the close of Leviticus. Many New Testaments complete have been sold to the Missionaries of the Southern Baptist Board; one thousand copies are sent to California. The following is an exhibition in full of the Bible operations at this station :

	Copies.	Pages.
New Testament (complete) . . . . .	9,600	2,700,000
Matthew . . . . .	1,000	62,000
Mark . . . . .	1,000	38,000
Luke . . . . .	2,000	128,000
John . . . . .	4,000	216,000
Luke and Acts . . . . .	4,000	320,000
1st Timothy to Revelation . . . . .	50	5,000
Total . . . . .	21,050	3,469,000

It will gratify the enlarged benevolence of all the friends of this Society, to know that in this and the last year we have paid the Missionary Union 6,000 dollars for the Scripture's diffusion in China.

The summary recapitulation of our appropriations for the foreign fields and languages the last year, including $1,258 worth of Bibles and Testaments sent, and also the $1,500 transmitted to aid in the publication and distribution of the Bengalee and Sanscrit Scriptures, as explained in the Report, is $23,500, viz. : in America $3,096 ; in Europe $14,859 ; and in Asia $5,544.

IN CONCLUSION.

The Board of Managers, at the end of the first dozen and a half years of the Society's existence, may naturally crave the indulgence of a brief review of its history—pleasant and encouraging as are some of its aspects; humbling and admonitory as are others; while all, if rightly improved, may minister to us salutary instruction.

The circumstances in which the Society originated, the necessity which seemed to call it into being, the promptness and generosity with which most of our churches rallied around it, and gave to it a healthful, vigorous maturity, even in its infancy, very naturally awakened our self-complacency. There may have been wanting a due measure of humble gratitude to God, for His having enabled us, in so short a time, to collect for the noble purposes of our organization, nearly $650,000, and so to dispense it as to make appropriations for publishing the Word of God in thirty or forty different languages and dialects in the four quarters of the globe, and actually to send forth at our expense, not less than a million and a quarter of volumes of this life-giving Word. At least our gratitude has not been at all commensurate with the extent of His beneficence towards us. Then as the perversion of the best things is always the most guilty and reprehensible, our pride and vaingloriousness may have been specially offensive in His sight, whose complacency can only be extended to the humble and self-renouncing. While engaged in the blessed work of circulating that Word which teaches so fully the way of life, we would, with holy jealousy and scrupulous carefulness, watch over our hearts and lives, that we may ever be imbued with the Spirit which the Scriptures commend, and thus by our example as well as our offerings, help to reflect abroad the beams of Gospel truth.

ADDRESS OF D. A. BOKEE,

IN SECONDING THE MOTION TO ACCEPT THE TREASURER'S REPORT.

MR. PRESIDENT :—I second most cheerfully the Resolution which has just been offered for the consideration of the Society ;—and perhaps, Sir, I would be but answering the wishes of its members, as well as your own, did I content myself in so doing, without occupying any portion of your time.

But, Sir, having listened with deep interest to the Report of your Financial Officer, and realizing the important bearing which that Report has upon your general interests and operations, I trust I may stand excused, if I employ but a moment, in giving utterance to one or two thoughts which on the instant suggest themselves to my mind.

I shall not attempt, Sir, to speak of the importance of the great enterprise in which this Society is engaged :—You feel it,—all the Brethren now here manifest their interest in it by their presence, and many who are prevented from attending, are not only offering up their prayers for it, but are teaching their children to sing

" My Bible ! 'tis a book divine,
Where heav'nly truth and mercy shine,
And wisdom speaks in every line,
And speaks to me."—

Sir, it is for others, if they so please, to contrast the importance of either the Bible, Missionary, Tract or other religious objects which engage the attention of the Christian community ; I am satisfied for myself, to acknowledge, that while I feel the obligation to sustain all, I give the preëminence to the Bible cause :—and yet, I fear, that with me, there are too many, who, while acknowledging the duty, are only too remiss in their efforts to support and maintain it.

You, Sir, had the satisfaction of hearing, as well as many others of us, the eloquent discourse of the good brother who delivered the Annual Sermon before this Society on Sabbath evening last past ; and I cannot doubt but all agreed to the truth then proclaimed, that if God in his abounding love and infinite mercy, gave man that intellect and that genius which enables him to explore, I might say, hidden mysteries, and that, if in the exercise of that intellect and genius, the discovery has been made of the mode and manner of manufacturing paper and ink, and the making of, and the use of the type, it was " that in the ages to come, He might show the exceeding riches of his grace in His kindness towards us, through Christ Jesus." But while such was the glorious purpose of God,—with that purpose who can doubt but He intended to impose deep and lasting obligations upon all the followers of the Saviour. If to them he committed His Oracles, it was a bestowment of honor, which if rightly appreciated, would induce the abandonment of father and mother, wife and children, houses and lands, that that great purpose might be fulfilled, even by such weak instrumentalities.

It might not be unprofitable, Sir, to go into an examination of the means which have been employed in the translation, publication, and circulation of the Word of God, with a view of ascertaining whether we have met all the requirements of His law, and if not, what it becomes us as members of Christ's visible Church, to do for the future. But I have already taken up too much of your time, and will only refer to your monetary account.

There is in it, Sir, much to be thankful for—much to encourage us in future effort ; but then again, there is in it evidence that we have not met to its fullest extent our obligations—that we have not done our whole duty.

The Report, if I understand it, shows, that with the exception of the preceding year, more money has been received in our Treasury than in any previous one, amounting to nearly $60,000 ; an amount exceeding by $15,000 former contributions, and which proves the increasing interest felt for the cause, and for which we should be grateful and give thanks to the Giver of every good gift. But the fact is not to be disguised, that of this $60,000 some $19,000 was contributed towards paying for the Bible House ; thus leaving a less sum for the general purposes of the Society than we had hoped to have received during the year. Therefore it is, Sir, that I say we have not lived up to the line of duty, or fully met our obligations. Under these circumstances, may I not be excused for thus occupying your time, and in my own feeble way urge upon all, present or absent, to make renewed and additional effort to provide the means for the dissemination of the " glorious Gospel of the blessed God."

We have now under consideration the question, whether or not a corps of colporteurs should be employed to circulate the Bible in every part of our highly-favored land ; a question which I hope will be decided in the affirmative; but if so decided, it will involve the Society in large additional expense, and require greater exertion to procure the requisite means.

I regret, Sir, that I was called upon at so late a moment and so unexpectedly to discharge this duty, and that I am possessed of so little ability to enforce the claim of the Society upon the liberality and active coöperation of its friends; but if what I have so feebly said shall determine, even though it be but a few of those who now hear me, to devote themselves to greater effort and exertion in behalf of the noble cause in which we are engaged, then I shall not have spoken in vain, and the knowledge of that fact will hereafter be to me a source of joy and rejoicing.

I hope, Sir, the Resolution will be adopted,

OF REV. L. NORMANDEAU, OF CANADA.

It is only when I am constrained that I speak English, particularly in public, so difficult is it for me to render my thoughts in that language. But in this circumstance, the motive which actuates me is so strong, and acts so mildly, so sweetly, that I feel it will be a comparatively easy task for me to address you.

The fact is, that I am a member of the Grande Ligne Mission; and for several years the American and Foreign Bible Society has been helping us in spreading the gospel amongst my own benighted people, the French Canadians. Then the feeling of gratitude that compels me at this moment; and I am happy, truly happy, Sir, to have this opportunity to present to the Bible Society the warmest and sincerest thanks of the Grande Ligne Mission for the good they have done in Canada.

Oh how precious, how powerful the Bible is! Friends, you know its power on the mind and on the intellect. If the people of the United States is the first nation of the New World (I had almost said of the world), it is owing to the Bible. Now, Lower Canada is far behind you; but let us go forward in our great and good work, and, by the grace of God, before many years my country will have nothing to envy in yours.

Allow me, Sir, to state some two or three facts which will show the influence of the Word of God in Canada.

A hundred years ago, when the Acadians were compelled by the British soldiers to leave their country, one of those unhappy families went to Connecticut, and there remained for several years. During their residence in that State, some benevolent person gave them a French Bible, which was not much read, except by one or two daughters. There being no priest at that time near them, they thought it their duty to seek a Catholic country, and they emigrated to Canada. The Bible followed them there, and became the exclusive property of one of the daughters, who continued to read it and to love it more and more. When Madame Feller and Mr. Roussey arrived in Canada, they were soon introduced into her family; and at their first interview they spoke to her about the truths of the gospel. "Oh!" said she, "I know that all you say is true. I am not a Roman Catholic; I cannot be one. Oh! how glad I am of your coming!" Immediately she declared openly that she renounced the Romish Church; and in a few months all her numerous family, children and grand-children, were attentive hearers of the preaching of the gospel. This was the beginning of the Grande Ligne Mission, which God has blessed so evidently till now.

Another fact: It is the good practice of the agents of the Hudson Bay Company to give the Bible to their men. One of these, a French Canadian, after having travelled many years, came to settle on a small farm in Canada. His Bible remained with him, and he read it constantly and attentively, never going to the Romish Church. At last he died, and his son inherited his property and his Bible, which was secluded in the dust in a corner, he not knowing how to read. But in the course of time he had children who learned to read. The oldest, a daughter, from time to time took the Bible and perused it. One day she came to her father, the Bible in her hand. "Father," said she, "I will go no more to confess my sins to the priest; he has no power to pardon me." "Why, daughter, what do you say? Where have you found that? In this book—the Bible? It is a very good book; your grandfather read it very much, and he told me often that it was true and much opposed to the priest's sayings: read it to me. Here it is: Who can forgive sins but God only? Astonishing! perhaps it is so."

Another day she came again. "Father, I will pray to the Saints no more; we have but one Mediator, who is Christ Jesus." "It is reasonable," said the father; "Jesus is more powerful than the Saints." And so they went from truth to truth. At the same time they had conversations with one of their neighbors, who also became enlightened—so much so, that hearing of the Grande Ligne Missionaries, they sent some one to beg them to come and preach the gospel. Mr. Roussy went, and talked with them, and explained the designs of God in the work of redemption. Some of them were convinced of their sinfulness and believed in the Saviour. Such was the beginning of the St. Pie Station, one of the most important in our field.

In 1838, the prisons in Canada were full of patriots. Some of them were condemned to death. Some Christians visited the prisoners, and distributed among them a great number of Testaments. After they were set at liberty, many of them kept their Testaments, which had been their consolation in prison, and continued to read the Word of God. Last winter, one of our colporteurs went to a place at some distance from Grande Ligne, and entered a house, where, according to his custom, he spoke about the gospel. "Sir," said the father of the family, "what you are saying is not new to us. We have read it for a long time. We have the Testament; and not only my family, but a great many others. Sir, you are welcome here—call often—we are as Protestant as you, but we fear to avow it openly. But come and see us, and we will talk together." This furnishes a new opening; and we have good reason to hope that before long it will be an interesting part of our field.

These are a few of a great number of facts, which show, in a very striking way, the great power of the Bible. Everywhere we have an opening we find that the Bible has preceded us. Almost in every case it prepares the way for our colporteurs in opening the eyes and the hearts.

But, Sir, do not believe that all is smooth in our way. Oh! no. Sometimes when a colporteur has been visiting from house to house, selling or giving the New Testament, the priest follows him, and takes back almost all of them: afterwards he makes a pile of them and puts the fire to it, joyous and satisfied, only sorry not to have the power to put two or three heretics on the top of the pile.

Last year, one of our young men being on a tour of colportage, was reading the Word of God in one of our Protestant families, when suddenly the door was broken open, and some ten men, with faces blackened, entered, having heavy cudgels in their hands, and after having blown out the light, fell upon the inmates; and having used freely their arms for some minutes, they left them with their heads cut and covered with blood. But hear: the father of the family, an old man, having sworn that he had recognised two of them, was accused of perjury; and the poor man, sick and almost dead, was carried like a dog to the prison at Montreal, where he remained until bailed out by his friends, praising God that he had been judged worthy to suffer for the good cause.

These persecutions, and many others similar, show, also, the great power of the Bible. The priests fear that book, and they exert all their influence against it. But let them do what they can, the Bible will prevail, and before long, by the blessing of God, it will be received and read all over Canada.

A D D R E S S

OF THE REV. THOMAS L. DAVIDSON, OF BRANTFORD, CANADA WEST.

Delivered before the American and Foreign Bible Society, in Brooklyn, New York, May 5th, 1854.

MR. PRESIDENT:—It is with no ordinary feelings that I rise upon the present important and deeply interesting occasion, to move the following resolution:

Resolved, That the present is an eventful period in the history of our world, and one which calls upon the friends of religious and political freedom, and Bible Christianity, (in language not to be misunderstood,) to exert all their energies, and call into requisition every available instrumentality, in order to multiply and circulate faithful translations of the Word of God in those countries which are opening to receive them,—especially as by this means, accompanied by the Divine blessing, paganism, Islamism, and Popery, will be effectually overthrown; despotism destroyed, error eradicated, moral darkness dispelled, and men everywhere be brought to rejoice in the light and liberty of the glorious Gospel of the blessed God.

I frankly confess to you, Sir, and the friends of the Bible who are here convened, the deep sense which I entertain of my inability to do justice to the resolution which I have just read; and yet I should do an injustice both to myself and to those who hear me, were I not to say, that I feel myself honored in being entrusted to move it upon such an occasion as this—the anniversary of the AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY.

This is a day which cannot, and will not, be forgotten by those who have been thus privileged to meet, for the purpose of “taking counsel together,” in regard to the dissemination of God’s Word, and of strengthening each other’s hands in this “work of faith and labor of love”—linked as it is, and as it will be, with the record of those important transactions which have taken place. To me, at least, the remembrance of it will be associated with many a hallowed reminiscence, regarding it as a spiritual oasis in the desert pathway of life, where I have been cheered, and strengthened, and refreshed. The pleasurable emotions which I feel upon this occasion are enhanced from the fact that I have been permitted, for the first time, to gaze upon your venerable countenance, and that of many other long-tried and fast friends of the Society, who have labored with a self-consuming zeal to promote its best interests, and who have now grown old in its service,—some of whom have but lately returned from the missionary field, bearing those scars of honor which they have received in many a well-contested struggle with paganism. It is befitting, Sir, and every way appropriate, that there should be occasions like the present, in order that the friends of the Bible, and the lovers of a Bible Christianity, may come together to recount the victories which they have been enabled to win, in wielding the “sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God,” against the gigantic powers of the Prince of darkness;—to consult as to the best methods to be adopted, in order to flood the dark portions of the earth, whose inhabitants are “sitting in darkness, and in the region and shadow of death,” with the light of eternal truth;—and to encourage each other in the laudable and Christian work of giving to the perishing the bread of life.

We come to these meetings not merely to go through the formal routine of anniversary business—not merely to exchange greetings and hail each other as brethren—but to warm each other’s hearts, and strengthen each other’s hands, in the prosecution of a noble work, the success of which secures at once the glory of God and the salvation of men. Inspiration has declared, that “where there is no vision, the people perish,” and the solemn truth thus enunciated has been corroborated by experience, observation, and facts, in all ages of the world’s history. It has pleased God to give to his Church a revelation of his will, and he has commanded them to “write the vision and make it plain, that he may read that runneth;” and this the Church cannot neglect, and yet be guiltless before God. He who has given this command knows well the extent of our ability, and the consequent measure of our accountability to him, as the Master and Judge of his servants. Our willingness to labor, and, if need be, to sacrifice in this respect, should always be commensurate with the measure of our ability; otherwise, we render ourselves obnoxious to the curse of Merod, who “came not up to the help of the Lord—to the help of the Lord against the mighty.” Our responsibility in this matter is great, and, however neglectful we may be of our duty, we cannot plead ignorance of the fact. Neither can we lose sight of the important consideration, that He whose all-seeing eye takes note of the labors of his faithful ones with unerring accuracy, takes cognizance of the conduct of the unfaithful stewards. “If thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death, and those that are ready to be slain; if thou sayest, behold we knew it not; doth not he that pondereth the heart consider it? and he that keepeth thy soul—doth not he know it? and shall not he render unto every man according to his works?”

It is a pleasing reflection, Sir, that the office-bearers and members of such a society as this have no desire to shrink back from the duty which God has devolved upon them; nor yet to shirk the responsibility which is inseparably connected therewith. Judged by their profession and the past history of their lives and labors, they stand before the world as men—the noblest aspirations of whose ambition is to give to the nations of the earth the priceless treasure of his truth; as men who, having received the light of truth themselves, are desirous to communicate it to others, in order “that both he that soweth and him that reapeth may rejoice together.”

The resolution which I have the honor to move, opens with the declaration that the present is an eventful period of the world’s history, and one which calls loudly upon the friends of freedom and the lovers of a pure Bible Christianity, to exert all their energies, in order to multiply and circulate faithful translations of the Word of God, in those countries and nations which are now opening to receive them.

The position here taken is one which no man of intelligence will have the hardihood to question or deny, as the facts which go to substantiate it are patent and open to all the world. The spell of caste is broken, the temples of idolatrous worship are tottering to their base, the ghostly power and self-arrogated supremacy of Rome are openly questioned, and millions of men who have long submitted to the galling domination of priestcraft are now groaning after spiritual and political emancipation. Mohammedanism is being shaken out of its place, and has already lost much of the power which it formerly exercised over its deluded votaries. In multitudes of instances, the Bible has taken the place of the Koran, and there are few depositories of the Scriptures which receive and send out a larger number of copies of the Word of God, annually, than the Bible Depository of Constantinople, the chief city of the Ottoman Empire.

It is impossible to glance at the state of the world at the present period, without being struck with the fact that three of the mightiest and most warlike nations upon earth, are plunged in a war with a fourth, the final results of which it is impossible for us to discern correctly and unmistakably.

Protestant England, Revolutionary France, and Mohammedan Turkey are allied against the despotic government of Russia. The struggle has been long and fierce on both sides, and notwithstanding the hard-fought fields of Alma, Inkermann, and Balaklava, the end is not yet. The war, so far, has been one which has caused much bloodshed and wretchedness abroad, and much misery at home; and yet while reading the harrowing details of the war in the Crimea, we are but too liable to lose sight of the grand mainspring of the movement, or, if I may so term it, the principle involved in this fearful contest. It is not a question of territory, merely—whose it shall be and whose it shall not be—neither is it to be regarded as a war about the Holy places; it is in reality a struggle between democracy and despotism, between freedom and serfdom, light and darkness. Ere the final end comes, absolutism in Europe will have received a blow which may send it reeling to the shades; and whatever may be the precise nature of the final terms of peace, one grand result will assuredly be secured, viz.: that access will be afforded to the Word of God, to circles and scenes where before it was hopelessly debarred. The autocrats of Europe are already beginning to feel and to fear the influence which is being exerted by the circulation of the Word of God within the boundaries of their Empires.

Germany, that nation towards which so many eyes have been turned of late years with interest and hope, is like "a city set on a hill, that cannot be hid." Divine truth has wrought wonders there, and promises ere long to change the entire aspect of things. Persecution for Christ's sake and conscience sake is neither so fierce, nor yet so formidable as it was wont to be; and although our brethren there do not enjoy the same religious freedom and equality as we do in this country where there is no State churchism, or religion established by law, yet their position, as it now is, is favorable indeed, when contrasted with what it was but a few years ago. Prussia is following in the wake of Germany, and even rock-bound Sweden and frozen Finland and down-trodden Poland, are feeling the benign influence of the Word of God, which, although in many instances is bought and read in secret, is, nevertheless, exerting a silent and powerful influence on the minds of the peasantry, in revealing to them the errors of the times, and leading them to a correct appreciation of their duty and their privileges. If the ruinous restrictions which are now laid on the people of these countries were only done away—if they could only be privileged to enjoy and exercise the right of private judgment in matters of religion, as it is in enjoyed here, we should all be taken aback, more or less, by the actual results.

It is said that after the passing of the act of religious toleration in England, "the Baptists sprang up and showed themselves in all parts of the kingdom;" and I opine that a somewhat similar result would follow, were religious toleration conceded to those countries I have named. We do not assert that Baptists would everywhere appear; but we do assert that the Lord's freemen would stand forth before the world in such numbers as would astound us all. When Ahab and Jezebel persecuted Israel, Elijah thought that all God's altars were hewn down, and all his prophets slain, himself only excepted; yet God had even his chosen ones who were hidden, to the number of seven thousand, "whose knees had not bowed to Baal, and whose mouths had not kissed him." This state of things is attributable to the spread of religious truth, through the medium of Bible circulation, as carried forward by colporteurs and scripture readers. Nor is this to be wondered at when the facts in the case are taken into account. Look at the report rendered for the year 1854 by the Rev. J. G. Oncken. He has expended on this behalf for the last year the sum of $14,950, including some $4,000 received by him for Scriptures sold. This large amount of money has put in circulation more than 75,000 copies of the Holy Scriptures, besides furnishing support for from fourteen to twenty colporteurs. Truly the hand of God is visible here. If we turn our attention to New Mexico, New Granada and China, the state of things is equally astonishing.

The Spano-American States, which are whelmed in the thick fog of superstition and idolatry, are calling aloud for the bread of life. New Granada in particular is open to the Bible colporteurs, and there this Society, if its means will allow it to do so, may put forth, unrestricted and unrestrained, its best efforts to give the Bible to the common people. It is a noticeable fact, that while last year this Society expended but about $35,000 for the foreign department, this year the sum of $30,000 is urgently required in order to meet the pressing demands which are made upon its treasury.

That department of the Society's work which is carried on in Burmah, is one of continually-increasing interest and promise. We are informed, the publishing committee of the missionaries had lately voted more than 80,000 volumes of Scriptures, printed in the three or four languages of Burmese, Karens and Peguans, 15,000 being Burman and Karen New Testaments, for which there is a constantly-increasing demand. Casting our eyes toward China, "the land of Sinim" spoken of by the prophet Isaiah, our minds are staggered at the wondrous revolution which has taken place within the boundaries of the Celestial Empire. Tao-Ping-Wang, the new Emperor of the rival dynasty, has done much to destroy idols and images, and circulate the Word of God; and although he and his court ministers have doubtless been guilty of many gross extravagances, yet there can be no doubt but that he has already done much to illustrate the folly of idolatry, and open the way for the reception of the Word of God by the teeming millions of that vast empire.

The days of the Manchu or Tartar dynasty are numbered and well-nigh finished, to all human appearance, and should the insurgents eventually prevail, and Tao-Ping-Wang be permitted to consolidate his power as the Emperor of the Chinese people, we may expect to see wonders effected by the blessing of God in the circulation of his Word. The prospect in China now is bright, exceedingly bright—so much so, that we dare scarcely to gaze upon it; and the appeals which come to the ears of British and American Christians from the Missionaries who are toiling there, are, or ought to be irresistible. Chinese cities which were bolted and barred against the entrance of the Missionary and the Bible are now open to both. . . . The spiritual wants of China have not been unrepresented before the Board of this Society, for the Chinese Missionaries, connected with our denomination, who are in the field, have written; and those now in this country have pleaded, that this Society should employ a special agent, together with assistant native converts, as Bible colporteurs, to go through the towns and cities now accessible, and scatter broadcast "the leaves of that tree which are for the healing of nations."

The sainted GODDARD has gone to his rest, and entered upon the enjoyment of his reward, and while we mourn his loss, as well we may, we cannot otherwise than be struck with the good providence of God, which permitted his servant to live long enough to finish his incomparable Chinese Testament; which is like to be more useful than any version previously made. May it be widely circulated, even if it should require, as is alleged, the extra sum of $2,000 per annum.

Two thousand dollars per annum extra, may appear a large sum to devote to this field, but the means required dwindles into comparative insignificance, when we attempt to take into the account the field itself upon which this money is to be expended, embracing as it does THE HALF OF ASIA! The writings of Confucius will yet be supplanted by the inspired Word of God; and the legendary myths of Zoroaster are destined to be dislodged from the Chinese mind, by the sober realities and solemn verities of God's Word. Already have the temples of idolatry been thrown down—images broken and idols demolished—by men in high places, who have become iconoclasts from a deep-seated sense of the folly of idolatry. These, Sir, are some of the events which have transpired and are now transpiring among the nations of the earth; and they are only a tithe of what might be mentioned, did time permit and necessity require; yet, without further trespassing on your patience, in alluding to this part of the resolution, I submit in all candor and seriousness, that these events, and such a state of things, fully justifies the language contained in the latter part of it, viz., that the Church of Christ is called upon in view of them to exert all her energies, and call into requisition every available instrumentality in order to give to those nations the Word of Life, translated into their own vernacular tongue, so that they may read in "their own tongue wherein they were born the wonderful works of God," "that thus they may become wise unto salvation by faith that is in Christ Jesus."

A certain writer once said, in reference to the Bible, that it was "the best book ever written against popery." We are prepared not only to endorse this statement, but we wish to amplify it so as to give it a wider scope and a more general bearing and application. It is a book the utterances of which were made by the all-wise God, in view of all the errors of ages past and ages yet to come. The truths of revelation are the very antipodes of error of every type—and hence it is that every system of heresy, falsehood, and imposture, shows itself to be the foe of Bible-truth. "That which maketh manifest is light," and there is no false system of morals or religion which can pass the scrutiny of the unerring standard of truth unharmed and unscathed.

Gaze on those men who first went out as Missionaries of the Gospel into the foreign field. A CARY, a MARSHMAN, and a WARD, from the other side of the great Atlantic; and a JUDSON, a NEWELL, and a RICE, from this. See them as they toil on for years, amid many discouragements, breasting difficulties and rising superior to obstacles, before which common men, engaged in a worldly enterprise, would have given way, until, at last, the scene begins to change—the arid soil of paganism becoming as the garden of the Lord. What was the secret of their power? and wherein did their great strength lie? Not in their naturally strong and vigorous minds; not in their skilful and well-directed efforts. These all had their proper and legitimate influence, but these did not of themselves secure the accomplishment of those mighty results which accrued from their labors. It was the weapons with which they fought, which were made effectual by God in "pulling down strongholds, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of Christ." The simple truths of the Gospel, as unfolded by the Evangelists and Apostles, and enunciated by the Missionaries of the cross have been, and still are, the grand means of overthrowing paganism, in storming the citadel of Satan, and driving him from his fastnesses. What is true of the victories of the truth over pagan, is likewise true of its victories over popish error. Rome trembles at the Bible. The old man with the triple tiara, fears more the influence of that one book, than the whole number of those others whose names he and his predecessors have entered in the Index Expurgatus of Romanism. Luther might have read all the books in Wurttemberg which were then extant, and yet he would never have been known beyond his own cloister, as sought else than a monk, had he not fallen in with the Bible, and carefully noted its precious contents.

It was the simple, sublime, and saving truth of the Gospel which enlightened his mind, and saved his soul, and made him the great Reformer of his day—for as D'Aubigne says, with great justness and force, "The Reformation lay in that Bible which Luther found." Rome has an inveterate hatred against the Bible, and solemnly interdicts the use of it by the common people, simply because she knows its potency in enlightening the benighted and unfettering the manacled slave.

Nothing speaks more forcibly the potency and power of the Bible to dispel Popish ignorance and superstition, than the jealousy and hatred with which it is regarded by the Pope and his Cardinals, and, in short, by the whole constabulary of Rome. Yea, Sir, Rome fears the influence of the Bible—and well she may, for the deadliest blows she has ever received were from the "sword of the Spirit." Nothing will ever tend to enlighten men and elevate nations in the scale of excellence and virtue, more than attention and adherence to the teachings of the Holy Bible.

Tyrants and Despots cannot live where there is a free press and free Bible. Tyranny and Despotism find nothing in that book which encourages or winks at oppression. Ignorance, and consequent mental vassalage, is the befitting state of an enslaved and down-trodden people. Vastly different is the condition of a free and Bible-reading Sabbath-keeping people; among whom the Gospel is preached, and to whom the Bible is a treasure—in whose hearts is God's love, and before whose eyes is his face. "Happy is the people that is in such a case; yea, happy is that people whose God is the Lord."

" Blessings abound where'er he reigns,
The joyful prisoner bursts his chains;
The weary find eternal rest,
And all the sons of want are blest."

How striking is the contrast which presents itself to the eye of an observer, between the condition of those countries which have the Bible, socially, politically, and morally, and those which have it not. Compare the condition of Catholic or Infidel-France with Protestant-England—Priest-ridden Italy with Bible-reading Scotland—Mahomedan-Turkey with British America—and idolatrous-China with the free States of the American Union. These latter countries are those where life and property are truly safe—where public morality is conserved, and the public weal promoted. In them religion and literature prosper and prevail—and a free press and a free Bible are neither muzzled nor vetoed. Well might a certain writer exclaim when dwelling on this subject, "Tell me where the Bible is and where it is not, and I will write you a moral geography of the world." It is even so. The people who sit in darkness are those who have not the torch of truth to illumine their path, or the Sun of Righteousness to shine upon their benighted souls. These are the men that "walk in darkness and grope for the wall at noonday like them that have no eyes;" while those who having the light walk in the light, are those, and those alone, who are truly free and happy here, and prepared for blessedness and glory hereafter in heaven.

Are we desirous, then, to aid in bringing about that glorious epoch in the history of the church militant, when "the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters do the sea"—"when one shall not say to another, know the Lord—because all shall know him, from the least even to the greatest." Let us aid to the utmost extent of our ability to give to the famishing nations the bread of life.

In no other way can the great ends of man's salvation and God's glory be so effectually secured as in this. Brethren, it rests with you to a certain extent, to say whether this shall or shall not be done.

The closing scenes of the world's history are soon to pass in array before the gaze of mortals; soon, very soon, our opportunities to labor in this good—this God-honored cause, will be at an end. Let us, therefore, "gird up the loins of our minds," buckle on the armor of salvation afresh, and renewing our strength at the throne of grace, address ourselves to our work, with an energy and a perseverance which will rise superior to every obstacle; and a heroic courage which will enable us to face down every foe. So shall we aid in ushering in that blessed time of which prophets have written and poets sung. That time, when "Kings shall be nursing fathers, and Queens nursing mothers in Israel." When the name of Jesus "shall be great among the Gentiles, from the rising of the sun until the going down of the same." Then will be heard the victorious exclamation—"The Lord, the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth"—for then he will be "King of nations as well as King of saints." The millennial glory will have burst upon our earth, to shine with undiminished splendor—and the graphic and glowing vision of the poet will be realized—who exclaimed in the language of lofty verse:

"One song employs all nations, and all cry,
 'Worthy the Lamb, for he was slain for us!'
 The dwellers in the vales and on the rocks
 Shout to each other, and the mountain-tops
 From distant mountains catch the flying joy,
 Till nation after nation caught the strain,
 Earth rolls the rapturous hosanna round."

"THE LORD HASTEN IT IN HIS TIME"

DR. MASON'S ADDRESS.

MR. CHAIRMAN:—The first earnest prayer I ever offered, was, "Lord, I am in darkness—grant me light!" and on rising from my knees I turned spontaneously, almost unconsciously, to the Bible. My attention was arrested by the first chapters of John's Gospel, and to them I seemed enchaind for several days. I read them till the letters seemed, to my vision, to glow with a supernatural halo. I was, I trust, a converted man, and all without having a word spoken to me, after the first impulse to pray, by any human being.

The reading of the written word, then, was the only instrumentality in my own conversion; and with such an experience, it is not remarkable that as soon as I reached Burmah, I began to look around for something with the Word of God in it, to give the people before I could preach to them. A few small Scripture tracts had just been issued, without note or comment, and of these I secured many thousands, distributing them broadcast from Tavoy to Mergui, calling upon the people as I traversed the towns and villages, to ponder upon the words of the "unknown God."

It was, I think, in the second year of my mission life, that a person who came into the sayat at Tavoy, where I was sitting, remarked in conversation, "There is a man in my village who has got one of your paper books, and believes it." I noted the name of the village, and when opportunity offered, made it a second visit. I soon found the man whom all the people said believed in Ye alee kareet. Though not very elderly, he was one of the fathers of the village; and while his sons in the houses around were quite indifferent, his heart was touched. He felt that there was a Divinity in those little sheets. All opposition to the truth, with which we have usually so much to contend among the Burmans, had melted away, and he was as teachable as a little child that yearns after knowledge. He was baptized in due time, and for fifteen years, up to the time of his death, never threw a doubt by his conduct or conversation, on the genuineness of his conversion.

Several years ago, on the outskirts of a little obscure village in the interior of Tavoy Province, I observed a frail bamboo house in a swampy field, half under water. It was during the wet monsoon, for in those days I was strong, and frequently made an excursion into the villages during the rains, as well as in the dry season. Thinking there were people there with souls to be saved or lost, who had perhaps never heard the name of Christ, I walked through the water to their house, beneath a zenith sun; and was surprised to find it inhabited by an intelligent Burman and his wife, a woman of more than ordinarily polished manners. When I began to speak to him on religion, I was not a little astonished to discover that he was quite well acquainted with the great features of the Christian system, and approved them. Yet he knew nothing of Christianity but what he had learned from a tract which he showed me, containing numerous extracts from the Bible. The next year, calling on them again, I found both the man and his wife apparently sincere believers in Christ, and in prayer both devoutly joined. I have never seen them since. In the providence of God I was not permitted to visit their village again; yet I hope to meet them in heaven.

I recollect a Pwo Karen assistant that I had in my school, attributed his conversion to reading the Gospel of Matthew in Sgan, having learned to read Sgan in a village school before he had an opportunity to study his own language. Such instances I believe to be common among the Karens, but I have taken no notes, and speak therefore of the one only that I recollect. It is ample reward for the labor of translation.

The books I have given away I count by thousands, while the conversions known to have been effected through them, I enumerate by units. But, Mr. Chairman, are not the units gained of more value than the thousands lost? If a Karen shoots fifty times into a drove of elephants, and at last kills one, he feels amply repaid for the loss of all his powder and shot. It is true great numbers of our books are torn up, but their work is always not done then. I have seen a fragment, a torn leaf by the pillow of a sick man, and his mind hovering around the promise he had found on it. I have seen a dirty scriptural tract by the side of a priest in a monastery, far from the cities and the missionaries, and with the truths of its contents the possessor was evidently struggling; and I once baptized a woman who dated her first convictions for sin from hearing a little girl in the next house, read or repeat a scriptural catechism that she was studying in one of the mission schools.

The preached word is undoubtedly the great means for the conversion of the world, but instances like the above prove that it is not the exclusive means. The written word is sometimes used by the Spirit without the living teacher. No sooner had God proclaimed the law to Moses, than he wrote it with his own finger on tables of stone. So wherever we go preaching to the heathen, we go with some portion of the Bible under our arms, and after proclaiming to them the truth, we put into their hands the written word. After conversing with a heathen whom I may never meet again, I feel that perhaps through the imperfection of my judgment, the truth may not have been exhibited to him in the right way; or something may have been said inadvertently that will hinder the working of the Divine Spirit in his mind; so whenever practicable, I direct him to read aloud some select gospel truths; and thus Christ is preached, as Moses was of old, by reading him in public.

The Karens can read only as they are taught by the missionaries or their agents, and hence I have ever been a much stronger advocate for schools among the Karens than among the Burmese, who have studied in their own monasteries, and can read the Bible when it is put into their hands. It was a rule with me, when the Karen youth, male or female, requested baptism, to put a book into their hands, to give them something like benefit of clergy. If they could read, I proceeded with further inquiries, but if they neglected to learn in the village school, I told them they lacked evidence of love to God. "If you love God," they were told, "you will love his word; and if you love his word, you will learn to read it."

That the Bible was considered in the Apostolic age of the church an important instrument in the propagation of Christianity we have strong proof in the tradition that the Apostle Thaddæus sent translators to Palestine from Edessa, to translate the Bible into Syriac; and in the historical fact that in the fourth century, that Syriac was an old-established version, like King James' English, and Luther's German now; with the reputation of having been made in the first century.

The leaders of the modern missionary enterprise commenced their labors with like views, and Thomas said he would willingly give a million of rupees, if he had them, to see a Testament in the Bengalee tongue. After it was translated, it was remarkably blessed. I recollect the Serampore missionaries wrote, many years before I went out to India, that of their converts eighteen attributed their conversion to the reading of the Bible. Similar testimonies lie scattered among the journals of missionaries of all denominations in India for the last forty years.

Missions without the Bible would be like men without memory. They might make a present impression, but they would pass away with the present, and the impression would need to be renewed.

The Romanist missions are an illustration of preaching without the Bible. They are no farther advanced in the East now, than they were two centuries ago. They exist only by a constant succession of priests being sent from Europe, generation after generation.

Buddhist missions are an illustration of preaching followed by books. Gandama did not put a single sentence into writing, but his followers penned all his discourses and doctrines that tradition had preserved, and it is to these books we are to ascribe the permanent hold their system has in Buddhist countries. The original propagators of Buddhism soon passed away, but their sacred books remained, and these, multiplied on palm leaves and taught in schools, have made nations Buddhists. In this way the Buddhist missions have succeeded, since the Christian era, in spreading their faith and making it self-supporting among one-third of the human race.

The longer I live, Mr. Chairman, the less I believe in men—the more in God. The less in the words of men, their theories and systems—the more in the Bible. In attempting to produce a daguerreotype for the Karens, I have often to refer to piles of scholia, and notes, and annotations and commentaries, and what the Germans call "Hand-books," which need a hand-wheelbarrow to carry; but I often turn from them with intolerable weariness, to rest and refresh my spirits on the original itself. That always seems to me like the precious ore in its native state, the gem before it has gone to the lapidary. Like the gem sands of our Indian rivers—here a tiny ruby, there a bit of sapphire or rock crystal, or schori, or corundum, or tormaline; or a garnet, a cornelian, an onyx, an amethyst or a beryl. Irregular they may be, often difficult to distinguish; but still there is the strong conviction that they are gems, though the eye may be at fault in referring them to the proper place in the system of mineralogy.

The Word of God, in imperfect versions, seems to create similar feelings in the hearts of the heathen. It is not the preaching of men that enamours them, but the written Word of God. How often have I been arrested in the midst of the crowded street by a man calling from his hut: "Teacher, you gave me a Jesus Christ book, and I like it so well I want another." But rarely have I had such compliments to my preaching. Frequently I have been told: "I do not like these scribets written by your teachers; give me a kyayasa, a God-book. I want to know what your God says." And repeatedly priests and others have called on me at my house, requesting full copies of our Holy books, that, as they stated, they might judge for themselves on what our preaching and tracts were grounded.

Sometimes while talking with a crowd of Burmans, I found myself in a perfect hornet's nest; half a dozen surrounding and opposing at the same time. On such occasions, I just put into their hands a portion of Scripture, requesting them to read about the law of the eternal God, at the place I point out. Immediately silence is on every lip, and the civil remark at the close is always tay-koung-the, "very good."

We must go forward and preach, but we must go forward "bearing the precious seed." We preach to the heathen, make an impression—the hearer goes away, and in a few days or weeks the most he has heard is a mist in his mind, a sort of mystic dream. If he has a single clear idea left, it is very likely an erroneous one. They are words written on the sand. But give a portion of the Bible, and the perusal stereotypes what he has heard. The sand is turned to rock with the footprints of truth indelibly engraven, as we see fossils. Or, take another figure—preaching drives the nail, the Bible clinches it.

The way the Bible puts forth its ramifications and roots itself in the human mind, is most interestingly exemplified in the evangelization of the Karens. Their reverence for the Bible seems almost intuitive. It is impossible to do anything with them without a "Thus saith the Lord;" but with that they are as teachable as children.

Several years ago there was a Pwo church that had, during the few years of its existence, its preacher supported by the mission; and its members not having been instructed in the matter, had come to adopt the idea that it was always to be so. "Teacheress," said the first convert of this church on one occasion, "Teacheress! I have heard sad news to-day."

"Have you, elder brother? I am very sorry."

"Yea, sister teacheress, and I am very much grieved."

"What is it, Ko Chung?"

"Alas! five years ago I fled from the Burman religion, and took refuge in the religion of the white foreigner, but it is reported that we are still to follow Gandama's customs."

"How so, brother?"

"Why, the women are saying that the teacheress tells them that it is a Christian custom for each church to support its own pastor and schoolmaster. To feed them, lodge them, and even clothe them. Now, teacheress, did you say so?"

"Well, Ko Chung, I believe I did, but I hope you do not think that a bad custom."

"Teacheress," exclaimed the old man, in great agitation, "this is a heathen custom. It is just what the Burmese priests require; and if we do like them, we shall be a stink to our neighbors."

The missionary's wife, knowing their strong trust in the Bible, immediately drew forth the Burman quarto, and turning to the ninth chapter of the First of Corinthians, desired him to look at that. The old man read it through aloud, and then began once more and read it all through again. Then he paused, reviewed one verse and another here and there, closed the book, arose and departed, with the single remark: "I see, teacheress, you are right." He went immediately to the Christian chief of the village, and told him their duty; he went next to the deacons of the church and told them their duty, and to all he became immediately a preacher of self-supporting churches. And what were the practical results? That church is now distinguished above all others in the province of Maulmain for supporting their own pastor, building their own meeting-house and parsonage, having a church fund for their poor, and conducting all their own church affairs without extraneous aid.

But the Bible not only commands obedience in the Karen mind, it also disciplines and invigorates it, and brings words to their mouths which their adversaries cannot gainsay. It was one Sunday afternoon that two Romish Italian missionaries arrived in the Christian village of Mata. Ko Sapan, the native pastor of the church, was holding divine service with his flock, so they would not enter till he closed; but when the assembly was dismissed, they walked up to the sacred desk, and invited the people to wait and hear them. Then turning to the pastor, they challenged him to a discussion. "Your teachers tell you," one remarked, "that to worship the mother of God is idolatry. But has she not equal power with the Son, and even more? See, there stands a jar of water; now, which has the greatest power, the water or the jar? The jar, of course, for it contains the water, and prevents it from flowing out." "Nay," replied the Karen preacher, without premeditation, "the water is far more powerful than the jar, for it washes the jar clean." The answer was suggested to him from the passage: "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin."

I have often been much interested to observe how a Karen will make the reasoning of Paul his own. An instance occurs to me in a conversation that I overheard many years ago between our assistant and an unbeliever. The caviler remarked: "Why has God made men so that some come forth from the womb blind, some hump-backed, some with dead limbs, some with twisted limbs, some with crooked limbs, some white, some black? And why are some born dead, why do some die in infancy, some in childhood, some in youth, some in manhood, some in old age? Why are some insane, some idiots, some fools, some wise? Why are some masters, and others slaves? Some rich, and others poor? Could not God make them all alike? Or is it because he loved some, and did not love others?"

The assistant replied: "You ought not to reply against God. God is above humanity, above kings, above all. He acts according to his own will. The house-owner builds a house, and decides in relation to all its parts. He disposes of the timbers or bamboos according to their proper positions. That which is too short he lengthens, that which is too long he shortens, that which will not answer his purpose he throws away. That which is shortened does not say to the builder, 'Why hast thou shortened me?' Nor that which is lengthened, 'Why hast thou lengthened me?' The timbers or bamboos do not say: 'Make us this way or that way—make us not that way or this way.' The materials know nothing, but the owner of the house knows, and directs everything according to his own judgment. He does not throw away the materials of the house without cause, but adjusts things properly. So God performs all things according to his own will. He is the owner of the house, and we ought to submit to his dispensations in silence. Then he will use us as parts of his building. That is, we shall become his children and servants. But if we murmur and complain, and abuse God, we become like the bamboos and timbers, which, being unsuitable for the building, were rejected by the builder, and thrown away. Some of God's judicial arrangements are in order that we may praise him, some that we may repent of our sins, some that we may discern between good and evil, some that we may not hope in transitory things on earth, some that we may avoid hell, and go to heaven. None are made for the disadvantage, but all for the advantage of man. To those who murmur, the Holy Book says: 'Who art thou, O man! that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus? Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honor, and another unto dishonor?'"

For nearly a quarter of a century, Mr. Chairman, I have gone preaching in "the land of the shadow of death," literally walking annually, when in health, hundreds of miles; but I have ever felt that my preaching was naught, that I was only a torch-bearer. I held out the Bible in the thick darkness to give light, "And there was light." Perhaps I do not exalt oral preaching enough. But in my case there is an excuse. I was converted by the Bible. Times out of number for the last twenty years, have I risen at midnight, and labored for hours in the silent watches to translate its divine pages into a foreign tongue, and I have been permitted by a kind providence to lay it, such as it is, complete upon the altar, a thank-offering for the blessings it has conferred on my own soul. I cannot then but add, after the apostolic method, to every paragraph of my preaching to the heathen, "As it is written in the law of the Lord," and then reach them that law to read for themselves; I cannot but say with Chrysostom: "Provide yourselves with books (Biblia,) the Bible, the medicine of the soul."

ADDRESS BY REV. L. SMITH.

I HAVE been requested to give a bird's-eye view of New Mexico in a thirty-minutes' speech. To do this effectually would require, on my part, some such enchantment as the Tempter used when he showed to our Saviour all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. Having no such magical power, I shall abbreviate the subject by confining my remarks to a single point, and endeavor to show the peculiar adaptedness of the colporteur system to the condition of the New Mexicans.

And in speaking on this subject, I do not pretend to say that this system possesses in New Mexico advantages and facilities superior to those of any other portion of the Mission field, or that it promises greater results there than elsewhere. I mean to say, that a system of itinerant labor, such as is generally pursued by colporteurs—embracing not only the distribution of books, but also oral presentations of truth—that such a system in New Mexico is unsurpassed in efficiency and economy by any other mode of Christian effort.

Leaving out whatever settlements may have been annexed to New Mexico by a recent Act of Congress, and not counting the ten or fifteen thousand wild Indians who roam over that Territory, we have, in round numbers, a population of 61,000 souls, all of whom are professedly Roman Catholics. Of this number about 51,000 are the descendants of the Spanish conquerors, and the remaining 10,000 are the descendants of the half-civilized Indians who inhabited that country for ages anterior to the Spanish invasion. In consequence of the mountainous nature of some parts of the Territory, and the barrenness of other parts, and the scarcity of rains, the fewness and smallness of the streams, and the impossibility of cultivating any land which cannot be irrigated by artificial means, the population has been broken into small communities, and scattered over a vast region of country. The people are obliged to settle in certain districts where the soil is fertile and irrigation possible. This circumstance and the universal dread of the wild Indians, have driven almost the entire population of New Mexico into towns. These towns are isolated, and separated from each other frequently by many miles of barren and uninhabited country. The largest town is Santa Fé, with a population of 8,000. The next in size is Zuni, an Indian pueblo of 1,500 souls. From this point the size of the settlements diminish till we come to many who number from 50 to 100 inhabitants. To send the gospel as speedily as possible to these scattered towns is the obvious dictate of Christianity. It is impossible and uncalled for to locate a missionary in each of these places. And yet the Word of God should be proclaimed there. The people throughout the Territory should be visited by the herald of salvation; and this can be done by no better system than that of colportage. The colporteur should be unencumbered with domestic cares, his home should be his saddle, his place of rendezvous some Missionary family, his life should ever be in his hand; and thus disentangled from earthly cares and fears, with a brave heart and firm trust in God, let him go from town to town and from house to house, going or staying here or there, as God may open or shut the door. And here I would say that, if possible, the colporteurs in New Mexico should, by all means, be sent forth as Christ sent his seventy disciples, viz., two and two.

Again, the very ignorance of the people of that Territory is an argument in favor of this system. According to the last census and the generally-received opinion, only one person in an hundred can read. The estimate is sometimes put down as low as one in two hundred. This would give three hundred persons capable of reading among the entire population of that country. This, however, is too low. We are willing to say that one in fifty can read, or about 1,200 for the whole Territory. Ignorance like this among American citizens is deplorable enough; and yet it is the ignorance which nurses the devotion of the Romanist, and would convert this entire Union into a withered, blasted desert. It will be seen from the above estimate that a vast number of Bibles and other religious books are not required at present in that country. And it will also appear that a chief part of the colporteur's work will be oral teaching rather than mere book distribution. If the people cannot read the Word of God, send them a man who can read it to them. If the benighted followers of Rome cannot spell out the meaning of Divine revelation, let the colporteur explain it to their comprehension—let him repeat not only what the Spirit says unto the Churches, but what it says also to those who sit in darkness and in the shadow of death.

The New Mexicans are exceedingly affable, and universally disposed to converse on the subject of religion. Their godliness is peculiar to themselves, and not so far removed from the ordinary affairs of life, that they experience any difficulty in passing from a worldly to a religious subject. The claims of time and those of eternity—the sentiments of worldliness and those of piety—are so nicely balanced and blended in a Mexican's mind, that a transition from the one to the other creates no unpleasant sensation in his breast. You have, therefore, no difficulty in introducing the subject of religion. Like the ox standing between the plough and the altar, he is prepared for either. He will listen to you with politeness, and perhaps assent to every opinion you advance. If at any time his sense of propriety allows him to contradict you, it is done in a courteous and respectful manner. That ill-bred, profane insult which the Celt and the Saxon frequently throw upon the colporteur as he visits their homes, is never encountered among the descendants of the Spaniard or the Aztec—at least in New Mexico. The Mexicans never treat a religious teacher with rudeness. They may in heart disagree with him, but they give him a hearing, and this is one step towards gaining a belief in the truths that he utters.

Besides this, the Mexicans are very sociable. Being uneducated, and having much leisure, they love to gather together, to kill time, by hearing or telling something new. Everything, then, within the compass of their knowledge stands a fair chance of being thoroughly canvassed. Seated on the ground, with their blankets thrown loosely over their shoulders, their broad sombreros covering their swarthy brows, smoking their cigarillos, it is half amusing, and yet sad, to gaze upon them as their conversation waxes warmer and warmer. The flashes of a sprightly imagination, the forcible argument, the new and sudden turn given to an old maxim, the choice language, and the kindly tone of the discussion evinced on such occasions,—all show that Romanism, buried up in its foul superstitions no fool's intellect when she threw her mantle over the Spanish race. On such occasions the visit of the colporteur will, in all probability, receive the largest share of remark. His teachings, his books, his manner and conduct, and every possible conjecture respecting him, will afford a theme of interesting and prolonged examination. His advent there has made an impression, his teachings will be retaught after his departure. The object of his visit, and much that he said, will long be remembered. He will have awakened and set in motion a train of new ideas, all pointing, to say the least, towards Calvary.

The colporteur will visit places where the least opposition to his labors will be encountered. In the largest towns we generally meet a strong current of American—in most cases, more properly Irish—ungodliness setting directly against all evangelical effort. The Mexicans see no illustrations of Protestantism except in the Missionary and a very few other families. But they call all who speak the English language Protestantes; and from the example of such they infer that Protestantism is very little, if any, purer than their own creed. This influence is against the missionary and the colporteur. But in mountain towns, remote from the thoroughfare of travel and business, the colporteur meets no difficulties arising from the conduct of those whom the Mexicans call los Protestantes, but most of whom, in fact—I will say for the honor of my own countrymen—are not only not Americans, but foreigners, and not only not American Protestants, but foreign Catholics.

Again, in all the larger towns and most populous districts, we encounter the Romish priesthood face to face. They watch every movement. They break up, or try to break up, our schools and Spanish congregations. They trail us from house to house. They gather up our Bibles and tracts. They labor to efface at once every impression we make on the popular mind. In Santa Fé we have the bishop, who wields a tremendous power, and who, under a plausible and fascinating exterior, controls and sets in motion all the deep-laid plots which force the low thunders of a wide discontent from the crushed souls of the helpless, but by means of which he hopes to maintain for his faith its present undisputed supremacy in New Mexico. In addition to this wily French bishop, we have also in Santa Fé two or three priests, a large Romish school in full blast, a nunnery, or something which answers the same purpose, and a host of spies and emissaries. In Albuquerque we have the vicarío, next to the bishop in power, but far surpassing him in cool impudence—a perfect embodiment of the Inquisitorial system—a genuine storm spirit, quiet only when he must be, but indefatigable, unscrupulous and terrible when set on by the bishop or the demon within him—yelling, screaming, thundering at all times and in all parts of his parish. We have missionaries in these two towns, and have had for some three or five years, and the first native conversion in either place has yet to be reported. The priests have the vantage ground. They are entrenched in a very Sebastopol of superstition, supplied with all the energies of war. Their batteries are well mounted, and their artillery sweeps the whole field of battle. In the face of such fortified influences, the soldier of the true cross is destitute of every human aid, and is strong only in the almightiness of truth. His brow will eventually be wreathed with victorious laurels; but the battle will be long and arduous. In distant towns, however, he may hope for more speedy success. The influence of the priesthood is less direct and powerful. Many such towns are visited by the pádre perhaps only once in a month; and unless he has tithes to collect or wishes to have a gambling or drunken spree, or to attend a fandango, he may leave the place as soon as he says mass. The colporteur may have been there, and read and expounded and distributed the Word of Life. An impression may have been made, the heaven of truth may be at work, and the priest, sorry to be absent so long from the charms of his seraglio, may hurry homeward without caring how many colporteurs may have visited the town. He feels sure that the Gospel, which procures so many creature comforts for his domestic establishment, will not be overturned till he is done eating and drinking. This remark, however, applies mostly to those who may be called the country pastors.

From these points of view and some others which I might mention, it will appear that the colporteur system is peculiarly suited to the wants of New Mexico. It is unimportant at present whether colporteurs or Missionaries, properly so called, are engaged in this work. It is the work, the work, that is needed, and needed now. Some five or six natives have been baptized by our Missionaries in that Territory, and a considerable interest is manifesting itself in some districts; but so far as I have been informed, all this good has been effected chiefly by colporteur labor, performed in part by our Missionaries, and in part by colporteurs under the patronage of this Society.

I have been asked, "What are the prospects of success in New Mexico?" When this inquiry is resolved into two others, the reply is not so difficult. First, what proportion of our strength should be employed in that Territory? How many men can wisely be drafted from our ministerial corps and sent among that stationary population? How much of our funds should be designated to a field so expensive and so much less promising as some other fields? This inquiry settled, the next is, In what manner can such a judicious outlay of strength be brought most efficiently into contact with the irreligion of the land. Having sent there all the force God's providence has placed at our disposal for such a work, what must be the plan of the campaign, and what must be the order of battle? Our General Government is at this very time called upon to answer a question similar to this. For more than a year past the Indians of New Mexico have been at war, and our troops, who carried the American flag so bravely through the terrible scenes of Cerro Gordo, Oberubusco and Chapultepec, and finally unfurled it in the plaza of the Mexican capital, have failed to subdue that handful of Indians. Why? Not because the courage, skill, or endurance of our army is at fault, nor because vast resources have not been expended, but because the mode of warfare is not adapted to the character of the foe. And when we have designated for that country all the power which its circumstances require, and when that power is brought to bear against the enemy in the most direct and efficient manner, then nothing but success ought to be expected. How much or how speedy that success will be, is not for man to inquire. Missionary duty rests on the basis of a command, and not on any conjecture as to the result. It is enough for us to know that if our available resources are properly employed, the success will be just such as heaven ordains. And I believe, that with a few Missionaries located in the most populous districts of New Mexico, and with a sufficient number of colporteurs to act in concert with them, radiating from the different centres, and diffusing God's true and imperishable light wherever they go, from the nearest to the remotest towns—I believe that such a system of effort vigorously carried on, will, in the end, accomplish such results, that when we stand before the Judge of all the earth, we shall have the consciousness of fidelity to our trust, and shall hear the enrapturing plaudit falling from the lips of our Lord, Well done, good and faithful servants.
